At the head of the column, mounted on a restless bay charger, was Major Gen. John A. Lejeune, the Louisianan, who commanded the Second at St. Mihiel and in the Argonne. General Lejeune, who is one of the youngest of the American overseas division commanders, rode at the head of his men smiling and bowing to the crowds that cheered him and his men. He was not the rigid sort of soldier that Fifth Avenue has so often applauded. He appreciated the welcome and he wanted the people to know it. When a boy or a girl shouted a good-natured greeting to Lejeune he acknowledged it with a broad smile and the humblest soldier of the ranks who saluted along the way received just as courteous a return salute from the division commander as did the General's superiors who reviewed the division from the official stand in front of the Public Library. As veteran officer of the regulars, who had a grand stand seat at Forty-second Street expressed it: "Fifth Avenue never had a chance to cheer a more fascinating figure than Lejeune."

Reviewed by Men of High Rank.

In the official reviewing stand were many of the highest officers of the army, Marine Corps, and the navy. For the army there was present Assistant Secretary of War Arthur Woods, Major Gen. William M. Wright, who commanded the 1st Army Corps in the last days of the war, and who before that commanded the famous 89th Division of mid-Western fighters; Major Gen. John Biddle, who commanded the American forces in England; Major Gen. Robert Alexander, who led the 77th Division of New Yorkers; Major Gen. Thomas H. Barry, commanding the Eastern Department; Major Gen. David C. Shanks, who directed the overseas movement of the American hosts, and a score or more of Generals and Colonels and Majors and officers of lesser rank.

Representing the navy was Assistant Secretary of the Navy Franklin D. Roosevelt; Admiral William S. Benson, the naval chief of operations; Admiral Albert Gleaves, the new Commander in Chief of the Asiatic Fleet; Rear Admirals John D. McDonald and James H. Glennon, and many others, while the Marine Corps was present in the person of its own Commander in Chief, Major Gen. George Barnett, and a dozen other officers of the corps from Washington and Quantico.

The parade started from the Washington Arch at 3:10 P. M., and it was exactly thirty minutes later when the head of the column was opposite the official reviewing stand in front of the Public Library. First came a picked troop of mounted policemen, and after them Lejeune and his staff of more than one hundred officers. Beside the division commander rode Colonel Hugh B. Myers, U. S. A., the division Chief of Staff, and General Lejeune's personal aides, Captain Addison H. Douglas of the Regular Army and Captain Robert L. Nelson of the Marines. These were the only officers of divisional headquarters who were mounted, the rest being on foot and marching just ahead of the Headquarters Troop, also dismounted, which was commanded by Captain Louis L. Martin.

Massed in front of the Public Library in an open space just to the north of the reviewing stand were more than 500 wounded regulars and marines, and as most of these men were veterans who had fought and suffered with the Second at Belleau Wood, in the Argonne, and in other major operations, they made the occasion one of joyful greeting to their old comrades. When Lejeune came along they let go a regular old-fashioned rebel yell and the commander noting whence came the greeting, looked and saw the maimed soldiers. He did not salute, but reverently bared his head in tribute to them, and then the cheering was redoubled.

A dozen girls, each carrying an armful of roses, were also mobilized in front of the library, and they did their best to give every officer and man in line a flower. They had great bunches of American Beauties for all of the Generals and regimental commanders, and when they could not get close enough to hand the flowers to them they did the next best thing—threw them at them.

Ovation for Engineers.

After the Headquarters Troop, came the Second Engineers, commanded by Colonel Stuart C. Godfrey, an honor graduate of the West Point class of 1909, and one of the youngest of all the regimental commanders of the A. E. F. He was born in Massachusetts just thirty-three years ago. The engineering unit of the Second was one of the hardest fought of all the technical units of the American army in France, and Godfrey and his men received an ovation all along the line.

Trailing the engineers was the Fourth Machine Gun Battalion, the combat unit attached to General Lejeune's headquarters. In command of the machine gunners was Major George H. Weems, another young West Pointer, who comes from the State that gave Sergeant York to the A. E. F.

And right behind the engineers came the "devil dogs," in other words, the 7,000 officers and men of the corps that has fought in every war in American history.

"Here come the marines!" was the cry that echoed up the line as the Marine Brigade, under command of Brig. Gen. William C. Neville, U. S. M. C., came into view. Neville, who is a Virginian, was the officer who commanded the marines during the fighting at Vera Cruz in 1914. He was mounted, and made almost as good a "horse marine" as did Lejeune. The marines came along in mass formation, and West Pointers never marched with more dash or vim than did these men. The wounded marines simply went wild as they swept by the reviewing stand. The first of the marine regiments was commanded by Colonel Harold Snyder, and the second by Colonel Harry Lee, both young and both among the most famous of the combat commanders of the corps. Everybody agreed that a finer body of men was never seen in Fifth Avenue than the men commanded by Neville.

The marines were followed by the 4th Brigade of Infantry, the organization of the far-famed 9th and 23d Regiments of Infantry. For more than a century these two veteran units of the regular army have played a glorious part in American history. They fought side by side in the War of 1812; they were again together in the civil war, and they were shoulder to shoulder in the war against the Hun. In the Boxer campaign of 1900 the 9th fought with the marines, and was at that time commanded by the late Maj. Gen. Adna R. Chaffee. General Chaffee's son, Colonel Adna R. Chaffee, led the 9th yesterday. The 23d was commanded by Colonel Paul Malone, while the acting brigade commander was Colonel Henry A. Eaton, U. S. A.

Half a dozen dogs, all of them products of France, and one cat also of French origin, were features of the marine and infantry sections of the parade. The dogs were for the most part fast stepping little fox terriers, while the cat, which looked to be just an ordinary backfence beastie, attracted a lot of attention because she was perched on the shoulder of a soldier of the 9th Infantry.

No Artillery Equipment.

The artillerymen, commanded by Brig. Gen. Daniel Craig, followed the infantry, the 12th, 15th and 17th Regiments appearing in the order named. The 75's and the howitzers that these men operated on the French front were left behind, and so the men who wear the red eagle insignia appeared without equipment, the absence of which none of them appeared to regret. After the artillerymen came the 5th and 6th Machine Gun Battalions, and after the spitfirers the trains, the ammunition train leading and followed in order by the engineer, supply, motor repair, motor transport, and sanitary trains. And then came the military police. For the last time they were making their appearance as the maintainers of law and order. Last of all was a detachment of casuals, and with the passing of the casuals the parade of the 2d Division was ended.

"I never saw a finer looking body of men and I never witnessed a more inspiring parade," said Secretary Roosevelt.

"No wonder the Germans lost," replied General Barnett.

The marines ceased to be a part of the army after the parade. They will go to Quantico, Va., for demobilization. The regular army units will proceed to stations in California.

SECOND DIVISION ALL HOME.

Last Units Aboard Great Northern on Transport's Final Trip.

The arrival of the Great Northern at Hoboken yesterday with the last of the Second Division abroad marked her final trip as a naval transport. During the time that she has been in this service the vessel has made eighteen round trips to France, carrying 35,000 soldiers to the other side and bringing 26,000 home. The transport is to be turned over to the army for service in the Philippines.

The Great Northern docked just in time for the Second Battalion of the Second Engineers, a unit of the Second Division, to send its colors, decorated with the French war cross, to the parade. The battalion staff and a detail of one man from each company were permitted to leave Hoboken as soon as the ship docked to march with their comrades.

Among the military passengers were Maj. Gen. Charles D. Rhoades, at one time in command of the Rainbow Division, and Captain Frank Pershing of the Ordnance, who, it was said, is a nephew of General Pershing. General Rhoades only recently recovered from injuries he received when an airplane in which he was traveling from Spa to Paris crashed.

Miss Mary E. Benton, formerly professor of Latin at Smith College, and at present dean of the women's department of Carleton College, Northfield, Minn., a passenger, said that she had been on a mission to select French women students for American universities. She told of a trip she said she and the Countess Turczynowitz had made into Germany and Lithuania during the Spring. Miss Benton said that they arrived in Munich on April 1 on the last train which entered that city before it fell into the hands of the revolutionists. Machine guns were posted everywhere in anticipation of trouble, she said. Miss Benton declared that she and her companion were at all times treated with courtesy by the Germans.

TRAINING CAMP MEN FOR MILITARY BILL

Chairman McIlvaine Declares Association Indorsed Chamberlain-Kahn Measure.

DEFINES IT AS AMERICAN

The Training Camps Association of the United States, which is the organization of the men who were trained at Plattsburg, Fort Myer, and other officers' training camps in all parts of the country, issued a statement yesterday assuming full responsibility for the so-called Chamberlain-Kahn Universal Military Service bill, which was recently introduced in the Senate and House by Senator Chamberlain of Oregon and Representative Kahn of California.

The statement was issued as a result of the denunciation of the bill by the National Guard Association of the United States, which is opposing the proposed legislation. The Guard Association characterized the bill as "the swan song of the General Staff."

The Training Camps Association statement was issued by Tompkins McIlvaine, acting Chairman of the Executive Committee and the Chairman of the Committee on Universal Training of the association.

"As acting Chairman of the Executive Committee," said Mr. McIlvaine, "of the Military Training Camps Association of the United States and as Chairman of its Committee on Universal Training, I desire to call attention to certain erroneous statements given out by the National Guard Association at its convention held this week in New York.

"It is evident that those responsible for the action of the National Guard Association, which might more appropriately be called the State Adjutant General's Association, either had not read the National Service act or that they deliberately misrepresented its provisions.

"The National Service act, introduced in Congress by Senator Chamberlain and Representative Kahn, is not an Administration bill, is not a General Staff bill, but is the bill of the Training Camps Association. This bill was prepared by the Training Camps Association's Committee on Universal Training, of which I am Chairman, and was introduced verbatim by Messrs. Chamberlain and Kahn, and is sometimes called the Chamberlain-Kahn Universal Military Training bill.

"Instead of the bill providing for a Prussian system, as wired by the Guard Association to the Secretary of War, the bill is intensely American in every feature and is drawn upon the principle of equality of obligation and opportunity for all.

"Instead of providing for a professional army of half a million men, as in the Administration or General Staff bill, our bill, the National Service act, contemplates that the permanent peace strength of the regular army should be no greater than that now allowed by law, to wit, some 217,000 enlisted men.

"Instead of abolishing the citizen soldiery, as claimed, the National Service act will ultimately train as a citizen soldier every American boy.

"Instead of disregarding the 4,000,000 veterans, the National Service act calls upon them to form a Federal reserve force, organized territorially according to their places of residence, in order that they may transmit to the youth of the country their traditions and experience in the war; their places in the reserve force will progressively be taken by the youth of the country as they graduate from the training camps.

"Instead of providing for a large body of professional officers the National Service act contemplates that the officers, non-commissioned and specialists of the Citizens' Army shall be chosen from the ranks with additional training to qualify them for the successive steps in promotion, including all grades from the lowest to the highest.

"Instead of abolishing the Guard as a State force the National Service act provides means whereby the Guard can obtain recruits in ample numbers from the graduates in the training camps—men so serving being excused from service in the Federal Reserve. The Guard is restored to its constitutional function by the National Service act and cannot be ordered out of the country without its consent and that of the several States. Nor would the Guard be discharged, as now, from State service by any call into Federal service. Thus the States would not hereafter be stripped of all military protection when they most need of it, that is, in time of war, as they were during the present war. We would not have the absurd spectacle of the Guard, now trained by border and foreign experience, being disbanded.

"Whatever the action taken at the meeting of the so-called National Guard Association, I have reason to believe that the National Service act will be approved by the great majority of National Guard officers who served on the border and in France."

National Guard Statement.

The National Guard Association also issued a statement which was given out as a reply to an editorial printed in THE NEW YORK TIMES of last Thursday.

The Guard Association says that THE TIMES misinterpreted a telegram sent by the association to Secretary of War Baker and to the members of the Senate and House Committees on Military Affairs, as "a resolution" and then it adds, "without any resolutions before it, proceeds with its comments on the resolutions."

The statement further declares that THE TIMES was mistaken when it said that the so-called Baker bill, which is the General Staff bill, did not "provoke the National Guard Association to pass resolutions of condemnations, &c."

"The National Guard Association, serious in its attempts to prevent the passage of legislation which is obnoxious to the American people, but at the same time to offer constructive criticism," the statement continues, "gave two days' consideration to the provisions of the Chamberlain-Kahn bill, before issuing its statement to the War Department and to the Adjutants General of every State in the Union.

"It did not depend upon the newspapers for its information about the provisions of the Chamberlain-Kahn bill, but it sent a representative to Washington and obtained copies of the bill as soon as it came from the Public Printer, and with the bill itself before them, the Law Committee, the Executive Committee, and the Legislative Committee, composed of Generals and Colonels, some of whom fought on the other side, together with some of the best military legal minds of long years' experience, gave the most thoughtful consideration to the provisions of the bill and only after a debate, which lasted well into the night, was the truth of the diabolical schema of the General Staff, to create jobs for Majors, Captains, and Lieutenants who now hold temporary rank as Brigadier Generals, Colonels, and Majors, brought home to them.

Wrote to Adjutants General.

"The convention had hardly recovered from the shock which it received from the Chamberlain-Kahn bill before it read in the newspapers of the so-called Baker bill. Relying on the newspapers for its information, it adopted resolutions opposing the passage of the bill, and it addressed a letter to the Adjutants General of every State of the Union, urging opposition to the bill.

"Those in attendance at the convention were the men who have kept up the National Guard for a great many years, and know about the difficulties of enlistment, and when the Chamberlain-Kahn bill takes control of a man's life from the time he is 18 until he is 28, the guard is unable to find where it is to obtain its recruits.

"As to casting a stigma on the National Guard, the bill destroys the National Guard as a first fighting force, and places it in the class with home guards from which only three months' service per year can be required, and that must be within the boundaries of the United States, and then only under certain conditions. In fact, the only mention that the National Guard gets, besides placing it in the class of home guards, is the fact that after a man has taken his service he may be, if he is within the limit, allowed in the National Guard, taking this limited service in the National Guard instead of doing full duty in the reserves."

MARCH OPPOSES STAFF BILL

Says That Provision for Permanency Means Military Bureaucracy.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—Opposition to a bill which he said had been "prepared overseas" and which proposes that appointments to the Army General Staff be permanent, was voiced before the Senate Military sub-Committee today by General March, Chief of Staff. He said the result of the measure would be to set up a military bureaucracy, and expressed the hope that the committee would oppose it, adding that it would be "strongly pressed."

War Department proposals that members of the General Staff be required to return to the command of troops after serving four years, were indorsed by the General. He said that under the department's plans substantially the same proportion between the personnel of the air service and the peace army would be maintained, as it was at the time of the signing of the armistice.

Referring to the proposed consolidation of the chemical warfare service with the Engineers Department, the Chief of Staff said the department was opposed to the use of poisonous gas and believed chemical warfare should be abolished.

Senator Chamberlain, Democrat, Oregon, disagreed as to abolishing chemical warfare, saying that more than 30 per cent. of the American casualties in the great war were caused by gas. General March said he favored keeping up the study of gas.

Establishment of a separate department of aeronautics was opposed by the General, who said it would be "very unfortunate to take from the War Department control over military aviators."

YORK, Me., Aug. 8.—Thomas Nelson Page, Ambassador to Italy, received a reception late today from the people of York and residents of the Summer colony, of which he was a member for some years before going to Rome.

Welcoming addresses by Captain John Bennett of York and John Cadwallader of Philadelphia were followed by the presentation of a cane to Mr. Page and a bouquet to Mrs. Page.

Ambassador Page, in a brief address, said America must be a leader in settling the unrest among the people of all nations. He spoke of the lack of the barest necessities of life in Italy, and referred to Italy's need of the friendship of America and of her admiration for this country.

Miss Pratt to Wed R. S. Emmet.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederic B. Pratt of 229 Clinton Avenue, Brooklyn, and Poplar Hill, Glen Cove, L. I., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Helen Ladd Pratt, to Richard Stockton Emmet, a son of Mrs. Cornelia Zabriskie Emmet and the late William Temple Emmet of 50 East Seventy-sixth Street. Miss Pratt was graduated from the Farmington School and Mr. Emmet is a Harvard graduate, class of '19. No date has been mentioned for the wedding.

STRIKING ACTORS KEEP 9 SHOWS DARK

sibly "Oh, What a Girl," hope to resume today with several substitute players, and "East Is West" and "A Voice in the Dark" will be played again on Monday.

Rumors of a possible extension of the strike to other cities were in the air, but Frank Gillmore, Secretary of the Actors' Equity Association, said last night that no definite plans had been made.

Although there was no tendency to minimize the seriousness of the situation, the fact that an actors' strike possesses a lighter side was generally realized last night, and particularly in the neighborhood of Forty-second Street the comedy aspects received due appreciation. Many persons fared forth with the idea of seeing what they could see, and hundreds of these had their reward in front of the Selwyn Theatre, where "The Challenge" was acted after being called off for one night. Holbrook Blinn, the star of this piece, is an Equity member, and is said to have told his fellow members in the afternoon that he would not play last night.

Blinn, and Jessie Glendinning, leading woman of "The Challenge," are said to have been advised by lawyers that their contracts were binding, and accordingly gave performances last night. Only one minor player was missing from this cast, and he was easily replaced. It had been expected that Eugene Walter, the author, would play a part, but those who attended in this hope were disappointed.

Comedy Pickets Draw Well.

The crowd gathered in front of "The Challenge" when Ed Wynn, star of the Shubert "Gaieties" and a striker, began to picket the front of the house in comedy manner. With him was Hassard Short, who had been rehearsing a new play, which was to have held a dress rehearsal yesterday, but did not when the strike order went forth. It was found necessary to clear the sidewalk in front of the theatre several times and to ask Wynn and Short to move on.

Across the street, before the rise of the curtain at "The Royal Vagabond," William A. Brady told the audience that George M. Cohan had been rehearsing the piece all day and that he would play a rôle. So Cohan played a comedy part, with occasional glances at a script in his hand. In a speech at the end of the first act he told the audience that the actors were in the wrong and that he would be on their side if they were not.

The calling out of Equity members at the "Follies" and the Winter Garden did not find the managements entirely unprepared, and the detached nature of these performances made it possible for the management to use other entertainers. Eddie Cantor, Eddie Dowling, and Phil Dwyer were absent when the curtain rose. Johnny and Ray Dooley, Equity members, were persuaded by the management to play.

Cantor attended the performance of "The Royal Vagabond," next door, and between the acts of this entertainment was persuaded to return to the show by David Stamper of Mr. Ziegfeld's staff. He got back to the New Amsterdam in time for the second act.

At the "Gaieties of 1919" thirteen players were on strike, including Ed Wynn and George Hassell, the principal comedians. Here Sophie Tucker and a number of others were put into the show, and a performance was given to a house about half filled. The show had previously been played to capacity.

The vaudeville managers came to the rescue of the musical comedy producers during the day by offering to lend any of their acts, and several such offerings were employed at the Winter Garden, which was seriously affected. William and Gordon Dooley, comedians, were among those who walked out at this theatre.

Police Move Pickets On.

There was an attempt to picket at the stage door of the "Follies" when the players were arriving for the evening. John Charles Thomas, well known in musical comedy, and Cyril Chadwick were among the pickets there. Florenz Ziegfeld finally made complaint to the police, and the actors were compelled to move on.

Later in the evening Fourth Deputy Commissioner Wallis came uptown to assist in keeping order in front of theatres and at the stage doors.

Officials of the Actors' Equity Association were frankly jubilant at the success of the strike to date, but reticent as to plans for the future. The number of new applicants for membership was placed variously at 1,200 to 1,500, and it was found necessary to open new headquarters in Forty-fifth Street to take care of all who applied. Arrangements were under way, it was said, for the founding of a chorus people's branch, and it may be that the association will also be extended to include burlesque. Some such step, the actors believe, will be necessary if the strike is not speedily settled, as the managers are said to be considering the employment of burlesque actors.

British Actors in Sympathy.

A cablegram from the Actors' Association in Great Britain said that the members of that organization now in America had been instructed to place themselves under the jurisdiction of the Actors' Equity Association. A statement was given out by James O'Neill, the veteran actor, indorsing the organization.

E. H. Sothern's announcement of his resignation, given out by the managers, was as follows:

"I have resigned from the Actors' Equity Association. In my capacity as actor I have tried to mediate in preventing this strike—in my capacity as a manager, which I have been for thirty-five years, I have signed contracts for twenty-one theatres for next season and cannot break these contracts. The proposition I was empowered to make to the Actors' Equity meeting—that the association should meet the managers in mass meeting—was voted down, or I believe an understanding could have been arrived at. Under the circumstances I feel compelled to resign, as I am not in accord with their procedure."

The Producing Managers' Association held a meeting at the Hotel Astor early in the afternoon, and afterward announced that immediate steps would be taken to fill the gaps left by the defection of actors. The association, it was declared, also passed a resolution stating that it was not in any sense opposed to organized labor.

Bainbridge Colby, counsel for the managers, was instructed to bring suit at once against the Equity Association and the individual actors who had held contracts with the managers.

During the afternoon William L. Sherrill, head of the Frohman Amusement Corporation, picture producers, sent his resignation to the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, giving as one of his reasons the fact that the association had allied itself with the managers instead of the actors in the present fight.

Managers Prepare to Fight.

No one in authority among either the actors or the managers last night would venture to say how the strike would end. Although the initial victory goes unquestionably to the actors, the managers are making preparations to fill their casts with nonequity actors, and there is no doubt that performances will be given next week in nearly all theatres in New York.

Three new shows, for example, are announced to open next week, and in all of these companies the managers have sounded their people and are replacing those who have Equity affiliations. It is generally felt that it will be a long and bitter struggle and that the question of supremacy will be decided now once and for all. The fight, it is believed, may run into weeks, or even months.

The actors point out that the mere filling of their casts with new people will not solve the managers' problem, as the public will know that lesser persons have been put in and a falling off in patronage will result. They pointed with glee to the general debacle in the theatres last night, when only the "Follies" and "The Royal Vagabond," among the strike-affected shows, drew capacity houses.

It is now believed that the actors will be required to make their fight without the assistance of the stagehands and musicians, as the latter have so far neglected to act.

Although the road has not yet felt the effect of the strike, the calling of strikes in thirty companies now in rehearsal here means that other cities will soon be affected, since nearly all of these thirty shows in preparation were destined for road tours preparatory to their New York showing. A general cancelation of playing dates is inevitable unless the strike is quickly settled.

COHAN FILLS A HOUSE; PICKETS PLAY COMEDY

Open Theatres Feel Effects of Strike in Loss of Patronage —Movie Houses Profit.

While most of the theatres in town were either dark or at best half-filled on account of the actors' strike, the Cohan and Harris Theatre, at least, was packed to the doors, for the Broadwayites arrived to stand ten deep when they heard that George M. Cohan, Sam Forrest and seven other understudies were prepared to rush into the breaches made by the Actors' Equity Association in the cast of "The Royal Vagabond." They saw a comic opera Cohanised with a vengeance, for, whereas the nimble Cohan knew about one line in ten of the part of Marcel, the barber, he had his talented underpinnings to rely on and so walked away with the honors of a hilarious evening.

Not that Cohan needed to know the lines, for as soon as he discovered that there was a mortgage in the plot he never let go of it, and succeeded in reading all his lines from it, even while singing through his noted nose or taking running jumps at the proscenium arch.

The prima donna rôle was filled very charmingly by one Virginia O'Brien, a pretty, sweet-voiced girl, who stepped out of the chorus for the period of the emergency.

The Ziegfeld Follies was crowded, as usual, though it started the evening with three men missing from the cast. The absence of Eddie Cantor caused a painful gap, which Savoy and Brennan, recruited from the Ziegfeld Roof, scarcely served to fill, although their valiant efforts in that endeavor were heartily applauded by all the theatrical managers standing in the back of the auditorium.

Cantor, as a matter of fact, gave one of the most entertaining performances of his career, but this was in the lobby and not on the stage of the New Amsterdam, where he was trying to explain to Mr. Ziegfeld that he had no grievance against him. This act drew such a large and interested audience that it was adjourned to the intimate privacy of the box office, where Mr. Cantor evidently changed his mind, for when the second half of the show went on, he was back in the cast.

All during the early part of the evening, there was a small mob scene staged on the brilliantly lighted sidewalk in front of the Selwyn Theatre, drawn thither by the rumor that Eugene Walter, the author; Edgar Selwyn, the producer, and Willard Mack were going to see that "The Challenge" went on if they had to go on themselves. Apparently, they did not have to. Several of the comedians on the sidewalk extracted considerable humor from Holbrook Blinn's long explanation of why he, though an Equity light, had felt constrained to return to his job. It seemed that he had been torn between his position as an actor and his position as part owner and manager of the show. "Just couldn't bear to break his contract with himself, I guess," said one of the more striking actors on the sidewalk.

There never has been a strike in which picketing was done with such style, and disappointed playgoers were at least partly rewarded for their trip downtown by the ad lib patter of such pickets as Ed Wynn, a deserter from the "Gaieties of 1919"; Colin Campbell, who was Alf in "The Better 'Ole" till the strike was called; Cyril Chadwick, John Charles Thomas, and Hassard Short. Wandering playgoers, in quest of some box office that would accept their money, were waylaid by warnings that they shouldn't pay good money for ten, twenty, and thirty actors. "Not a recognized artist in the cast," they chorused in front of "The Challenge," which was scarcely true. Ed. Wynn was spurred on to special effort when some one from the curb called out, "It'll never get well if you picket."

The managers who had expected to profit by the patronage of those turned away from the darkened theatres were doomed to disappointment. Theatre attendance all over town was light. Not knowing what would be open, and suspicious that the plays doing business would be giving one of those "just as good" performances, the world and his wife lingered over the dinner table and then went around the corner to the movies.

One actor on the sidewalk laughed himself so sick that he had to be taken away in an ambulance. He had just read a statement that the managers were inexpressibly shocked by the lightness with which the actors had held the sacredness of their contracts. "This from them," said the actor, and swooned away.

CHICAGO SHOWS CONTINUE.

Opinion on Strike Move Among Actors Is Divided.

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—Actors now playing in Chicago seem to be of two minds regarding the calling of a strike here. Grant Mitchell, starring in "A Prince There Was," intimated today that there may be a strike. Tom Mix, who opened an engagement this week in "Cappy Ricks," said he did not think there was a possibility of a strike. Chicago producers are reported to be giving out contracts under the terms of the Actors' Equity Association.

Tom Wise, who is a member of the Equity Association Board, said:

"There is no possibility of a strike here. The actors were compelled to join federated labor to increase their strength, because, while actors are very often charming fellows they are not business men, and managers are, and so very often managers get the better of actors unless the actors are organized into an association. In my opinion, the New York strike will be over in two days."

Theodore Lorch, Chicago deputy of the association, is out of town, making a moving picture. In case of a strike he would be the one to call the men out.

BOSTON FEARS NO STRIKE.

Managers Say Players There Are Well Treated and Contented.

BOSTON, Mass., Aug. 8.—Boston theatre managers reported at the opening of tonight's performances that the New York strike of actors had not spread to this city, and that there was little possibility of it doing so. Although many of the actors playing in local playhouses are members of the Actors' Equity Association, no word has been sent here calling for a walkout.

Managers in every show house running put absolutely no weight on the chances of their artists going out of their own accord on a sympathy strike. As one manager put the matter, "We give our actors everything they ask for, as they are a down-trodden class, and we are anticipating no trouble whatsoever."

SHIP ASHORE OFF YARMOUTH

BOSTON, Aug. 8.—The steamship North Star struck on Green Island, nine miles south of Yarmouth, N. S., in a fog at 6:40 o'clock this morning. The removal of her passengers, 280 in all, and their transfer to Yarmouth were accomplished without accident. The North Star, which is in the service of the Eastern Steamship Lines, left Boston for Yarmouth last night.

Captain Strout of the North Star reported that water entered the fireroom and that it was necessary to draw the fires. The Canadian Government steamer Stanley, at first said to be standing by, was detained at Yarmouth and unable to go to the North Star's assistance, but two boats, several motor schooners, and all other available vessels were ordered out to her assistance.

The steamship Governor Cobb of the Eastern Steamship Lines struck on Green Island on July 19 at almost the same point as the North Star and was badly damaged. She floated after about four hours and landed her passengers, after which she was taken to New York for repairs.

INVITE PRINCE OF WALES.

Newport Societies Are to Give a Reception in His Honor.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 8.—The Directors of the Newport Historical Society, the Newport Improvement Society, and the Redwood Library have extended an invitation to the Prince of Wales, through the British Ambassador, to attend a reception in his honor to be given during his proposed visit to this city.

Tennis at the Casino this morning smacked of international flavor. There were American, Australian, and Japanese players, and the crowd filled grand stand and side lines like the old days of national tennis tournaments.

The navy was represented by Rear Admiral Cameron McR. Winslow, Captains Rufus Z. Johnston, Edward H. Campbell, Martin E. Trench, with their families; Mrs. Sims, wife of Rear Admiral William S. Sims, Commander J. B. Kaufman of the destroyer force, and Captain Frank W. Kellogg.

Governor Beeckman entertained the players participating in the tournament with a luncheon at Land's End today. At the luncheon were their house guests, Congressman and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, Miss Eleanora R. Sears, Colonel Harold D. Stebbins, Lawrence Waterbury, and Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Boardman.

MRS. BERTRAM WED AGAIN.

Major's Widow Married Capt. Ruddell, U. S. A., in France.

A private letter just received from France announces the marriage there of Mrs. Blanche Bertram, the widow of Major Bertram, United States Engineers, the first officer to die abroad, and Captain James C. Ruddell, U. S. A., Coast Artillery Corps, who was graduated from West Point in 1916, and is a son of Mr. and Mrs. George Ruddell of Parkersburg, W. Va.

The wedding took place at the Officers' Club in the Grand Hotel at St. Nazaire, France, on July 16. Two ceremonies were performed in compliance with the French law, the first, a civil service, by the French Mayor and the American Consul, Mr. Ruffin, while the religious service was performed by Chaplain Charles Irwin, U. S. A., of Camp Norton.

The bride, who had recently been active in Red Cross canteen work in Paris and St. Nazaire, wore the Red Cross uniform. Captain Rafferty, a West Point classmate of Captain Ruddell, was his best man. The honeymoon was spent in touring Northern France, and then the bride and bridegroom returned to Camp Norton.

UPTON SEES SOCIETY CIRCUS

Leopard Act Provides Thrills for Enlisted Men at Camp.

CAMP UPTON, N. Y., Aug. 8.—The society circus which is being given free by Brig. Gen. William J. Nicholson, camp commander, for the entertainment of enlisted men, opened today. Summer residents of Suffolk County motored in for both afternoon and evening performances.

Thrills were provided by a leopard act at the first show. The animals had been confined for a week in boxes in an army stable and were so savage that their woman trainer frequently had a chair in front of her to guard against attack. She finally abandoned the last feature of her act.

Fenno-Stirn Engagement.

The engagement is announced of Miss Mary Augusta Fenno, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert L. Fenno, of Canton, Mass., to Albert Louis Stirn, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis A. Stirn, of Staten Island, who has just returned from France, where he served as a lieutenant in the Quartermaster Corps. He was graduated from Amherst in 1913. Miss Fenno was graduated from the Lasell Seminary in 1913.

Engaged to Bernard Peyton.

Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Cameron Anderson of Princeton, N. J., and Westerly, R. I., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Kathleen Beatrice Anderson, to Bernard Peyton, a son of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Peyton of 44 West Seventy-seventh Street, New York. Mr. Peyton was graduated from Princeton in 1917.

NO CLUE TO KIDNAPPED BABY

Threatening Letters to Wentz Child's Parents Sent by Cranks.

Notwithstanding the fact that a reward of $500 has been offered for information leading to the return of two months old Arthur Phillip Wentz, who was kidnapped ten days ago from a baby carriage in front of a department store in the Bronx, police and detectives working on the case admitted yesterday that they had received no new clues. Two threatening letters demanding money received on Friday night by Mr. and Mrs. August Wentz, the parents of the child, who live at 723 Home Street, the Bronx, are believed by the police to have been sent by cranks.

One of the letters demanded $200, while the other stipulated $65 as the amount of money wanted before the child would be returned to his parents. This last letter stated that unless Mrs. Wentz appeared with the money at Sixth Avenue and Eighteenth Street, yesterday afternoon, attired in a designated manner, the boy would be hit over the head with a hammer and the head sent home. Mrs. Wentz, who has collapsed under the strain, was unable to go, but a police matron went in her stead. Although the matron waited long after the hour set in the letter, no one appeared.

The parents of the child were taken to the Kings County Hospital morgue last night to identify the body of a child found on a vacant lot. The parents said the body was not that of their child.

TO REPRESENT CANADA HERE

Col. John A. Cooper Is Appointed by Prime Minister Borden.

Sir Robert Borden, Prime Minister of Canada, has appointed Lieut. Col. John A. Cooper, a Past President of the Canadian Press Association, to be a special Government representative in New York. A bureau of information has been opened in the Brokaw Building, Broadway and Forty-second Street.

Colonel Cooper raised and trained a battalion of troops in Toronto known as the "Canadian Buffs," and took them overseas in February, 1917. He has only recently returned from France. Colonel Cooper was at one time editor of The Canadian Magazine, and later founder and editor of The Canadian Courier. He was the first President of the Canadian Club of Toronto.

MOGRIDGE IS TOO MUCH FOR BROWNS

BAKER MAKES TENTH HOMER

George Mogridge of the Yanks, who used to be quite a flinger hereabouts until this season, found his old knack of pitching up at the Polo Grounds yesterday and southpawed his way to a 6 to 1 victory over the St. Louis Browns. Mogridge did his pitching job all alone and was not aided by an injunction or by lawyers. If George had gone to court and obtained an injunction against the Browns hitting him, he would not have had more success than he did yesterday. He held them to seven hits, and in only one inning were they able to bunch two hits. That was in the seventh, when a double and a single gave the visitors their only tally.

Blackstone had no part in the affair whatever. The umpires were not served with any legal documents before the game. At various times throughout the game some of the players served opinions on the umpires, but they did not put them in writing. The St. Louis players were inclined to talk too much on the bench and Umpire George Hildebrand said that if they didn't put on the silencers he would remove them from the meadow, even if he had to get a writ of habeas corpus.

Chief Gallia, the Mexican toreador, did the pitching for St. Louis and the Yanks had the umpires frequently looking at the balls he was pitching. The Yank hitsmiths said that Gallia had the ball "sailing" at them and he couldn't do this unless he was using tricks. The umpires found nothing on the ball except a few abrasions. The players said Gallia's trick was nicking the horsehide cover with his finger nail, making a rough spot where he could get a purchase on the ball. The umpires will probably report this to President Ban Johnson, who will issue another bulletin ordering Gallia to go get a manicure under a threat of suspension.

Baker Hits for Circuit.

The Yanks pried the game from the Browns gradually up to the eighth, when they had the visitors at the bad end of a 3 to 1 score. The eighth saw Frank Baker get his tenth home run of the season, an event which easily placed the game out of St. Louis's reach. Fewster walked in the eighth and Sam Vick whiffed. Then Baker poled the ball against the right field grandstand for an excursion ticket, sending Fewster on ahead. After Lewis died at first, Pipp got a hit back of first and Pratt walked. Bodie rolled to Bronkie, who foozled the ball and missed a chance for a force out and maybe a double play, Pipp scoring during the mishap.

Baby Doll Jacobson executed the first damage on Mogridge's service in the opening inning. He cracked a double to right, but there were two out at the time, so nothing happened. In the Yanks' section of the second Duffy Lewis leathered a double to right centre, Earl Smith preventing a triple or a homer by slapping the ball as it was floating past him in midair. Pipp sacrificed Duffy to third and he counted when Del Pratt cudgeled a double off the right field battlement. Bodie drove a fly almost to the centre field fence, but it was so high that Williams had plenty of time to go back to the fence and roll a cigarette before the ball fell into his mitts. Ruel closed the session when Gerber chucked him out at first.

The home lads coined another in the third. After Bronkie flipped Mogridge out at first, Fewster's fleet pedals carried him to second on a grass-cutter to left. Sam Vick whacked a hopper to Gerber, who made a toss to Austin in an effort to get Fewster diving into third. Fewster made a pretty slide and was adjudged high and dry by Umpire Moriarty. Baker jammed a single to right and Fewster scored. Vick had ambitions to inhabit third, but Smith made a gorgeous peg from right field to Austin and Vick was out. Baker attempted to steal second and had everything to do it with except the speed.

Browns Threaten in Fourth.

The Browns threatened to start something in the fourth, but stopped shortly after they started. Jacobson, who is going like wildfire, rapped a single to right. Sisler popped to Baker and Williams was safe when Fewster fumbled his grounder. With two on and only one out, Smith might have done something better than strike out, but he didn't. Gerber rolled to Baker, who got Jacobson at third for the final out.

Jacobson did all he could to help the Browns out, and in the sixth he poled forth his third hit of the game, a single to left. There was one gone at the time and instead of helping out Jacobson, Sisler forced him, and Williams ended the inning by striking out.

The Browns showed signs of recuperation in the seventh. Smith rocked a double to right close to the foul line and he scampered through home on a blazing single through second by Gerber. After Severeid hoisted a fly to Brodie, Chief Gallia cracked a hopper down to Pratt. Del got a strangle hold on the ball, forced Gerber and doubled Gallia at first.

These Yanks had a chance to get a whole basket full of runs in their portion of the seventh, but they got one and let it go at that. Lewis walked and Pipp beat out a bunt. Pratt was safe when Bronkie did a poor job in corralling his grounder, and the bases were crowded.

Ping Bodie couldn't have asked for a finer lay-out than this. The table was all set for a run banquet when Ping came to the bat. Bodie ignored the hero role and went out by knocking one of the highest flies imaginable to the infield, and the ball fell into Severeid's mitt after he had waited about six minutes for the ball to come down. While Gerber was tossing Muddy Ruel out at first Lewis crossed the plate. Mogridge's strikeout ended an inning of lost opportunities.

CLUBS CLING TO BIG BAN.

Quintet Will Not Attend Meeting to Discuss Mays Case.

It is beginning to look as if the meeting of the American League club owners which was called at the invitation of Colonel Ruppert to discuss the Carl Mays suspension and injunction in this city on Monday would not materialize. The five clubs which President Ban Johnson said had protested against the trade of Mays from Boston to New York are apparently determined to back up the big boss of the league.

The first indication that the club owners would refuse to meet here was a telegram last night from Ben Shibe, President of the Athletics. He wired: "Will not be present at the meeting Monday." However, President Charles Comiskey of the Chicago White Sox wired his acceptance of Colonel Ruppert's invitation yesterday. Mr. Comiskey said he would surely attend.

The five clubs which Johnson named as opposing New York in the negotiation for Mays were Cleveland, Detroit, Washington, Philadelphia, and St. Louis. An interesting phase of the situation cropped up yesterday when Secretary Willis Johnson of the St. Louis Browns said yesterday that as far as he knew the St. Louis club did not protest to Johnson against New York trying to get Mays. This is a contradiction of Johnson's assertion.

It is believed that when the five clubs in question received the invitation of Colonel Ruppert, they immediately got in touch with President Johnson, and Ben Shibe's telegram was the first to signify that these five clubs are lined up to support Johnson against the New York, Boston, and Chicago clubs. Business Manager Robert Quinn of the Browns said yesterday that Phil Ball, the owner of the club, would not be present. Mr. Quinn also said that he had received no word from Mr. Ball instructing him to represent the club at the meeting. The St. Louis club went to Boston last night.

It is a mystery to the New York club why the owners of the Athletics should refuse to come here and state their position. These same Athletics have a record a yard long for trades and sales of players in the American League. It will be remembered that they sold Jack Barry to the Boston Red Sox in the midst of a pennant fight a few seasons ago, and Home Run Baker was sold to the Yankees when he was under suspension for failing to report to the Athletics.

If the club owners are not disposed to come here to discuss the Mays case, the attorneys for the New York club will go ahead and ask for a permanent injunction on Tuesday in Part I. of the Supreme Court. It is believed that Johnson will not be here to appear in his own defense, but will be represented by counsel.

NEHF'S FIRST GAME IS SAD FOR GIANTS

Southpaw Pitches Well, but Hendrix Is Better, and Cubs Win, 3 to 0.

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—Arthur Nehf, the pitcher for whom the New York Club is supposed to have paid $40,000, besides turning over four ball players to the Boston Braves, made his début this afternoon in the uniform of the Giants when McGraw's men opened a three-game series with the Cubs. The southpaw failed to win, but little fault could be found with his pitching. The reason for the Giants' failure rested more in the fine form of Claude Hendrix than in any poor work by Nehf.

Fred Mitchell's fading champions took the measure of the erstwhile League leaders, and added insult to injury by making it a shutout. It was the third time this season that the McGraw clan has been forced to take the kalsomine bath, and Hendrix enjoys the distinction of performing a feat which has heretofore baffled all right-handers. Wilbur Cooper and Harry Sallee, both side-winders, were the only boxmen to blank the Giants up to today.

Nehf allowed the Cubs only six hits, which were scattered through four different innings, with two in the first inning and two in the fifth. One clean single and one infield roller was the extent of the Chicago hitting after Herzog had doubled, with two out, in the third inning. But, in spite of this brilliant pitching by the New York southpaw, he went down to a deserved defeat. It was deserved because the work of Claude Hendrix was much better.

The Cub veteran had one of the best days he has enjoyed since he first joined the Pirates several seasons ago. In the second inning Heinie Zimmerman hit a single to centre field with two out. In the fifth Heinie hit a pop fly which dropped safely between Hollocher and Magee for another single. In the seventh Fletcher got New York's last hit, a single to left. It was against such pitching that the newest member of the McGraw troupe had the misfortune to be tossed for his first game with the Giants.

Ex-Giants played a prominent part in the downfall of the club now representing the big town. Charley Herzog, playing his first game against his old team in a Chicago uniform, figured prominently in all three runs scored by the home team. He drove in two and carried the other over the plate when Al. Baird miscued on a drive by Fred Merkle, who spent several seasons with Giants. Dave Robertson also played his first game as a Cub against the Giants this afternoon. The fleet-footed outfielder held down centre field, also the clean-up position in the Chicago batting order, but he did nothing with the stick. Robby failed to get on the bases in three trips to the plate.

The Cubs did most of the damage in the opening inning after Hendrix had set the Giants down in order in their half. Flack greeted Nehf with a smash to centre, and Benny Kauff tried to check the ball close to the turf. It got away and rolled far enough to yield a triple for the Cubs' right fielder. Flack held third while Baird was tossing Hollocher out at first, and then Charley Herzog delivered the first of two telling punches against his old team. It was a single to left, and Flack scored. Herzog advanced to second while Baird was retiring Robertson at first base, and he scored when the New York second baseman miscued on Fred Merkle's grounder. Merkle died on an attempted steal of second base.

Nehf got through the second inning all right, though Killefer unloaded a single to left with two out. In the third inning the Cubs pushed over their third and last run. After Flack had flied to Kauff Hollocher drew a pass and came all the way home when Herzog hit to left field for two bases. Charley tried to stretch the drive into a triple, but was retired at third on Fletcher's fast relay of Burns's throw to the bag.

The Cubs did not seriously threaten after the third inning. They got a brace of singles and a pass in the fifth, but a double play followed the first hit before Flack beat out a roller to Baird. Flack stole second, then pilfered third as Hollocher walked, and Herzog lofted to Chase. Flack was the only home player to pass first base after the third inning.

BROOKLYN BATS ARE ALSO ON A STRIKE

PITTSBURGH, Penn., Aug. 8.—The Dodgers seem to be on the road to a hitless record. Wilbur Cooper let the Brooklynites down with a lone blow here this afternoon when Wilbert Robinson's athletes opened their series with the Pittsburgh Pirates. Hod Eller, in St. Louis yesterday, generously gave the Superbas a brace of hits, so that their sum total for two days' pastiming is three hits, a season's record beyond peradventure. What with the conspicuous absence of any Brooklyn stickwork against Cooper, and a tantalizing habit the Pirates had of collecting hits in bunches off Al Mamaux, it was not surprising that Manager Robinson's boys dropped their opening tilt here today. The score was 3 to 0.

Cooper pitched what was perhaps his best game of the season. He was steady at all times, had wonderful control, and only once did he give the Dodgers an opportunity for runs. Ivan Olson got the only hit Cooper permitted, a terrific three-base hit to left field, starting the game. The blow didn't phase Cooper a bit. He made Jimmy Johnson rap a grounder to Terry, immediately after, and Olson was nipped at the plate trying to score.

Mamaux was shaky at the beginning of the game, when he passed Bigbee and Carey in succession. An unsuccessful double steal pulled the Brooklyn pitcher out of the hole until the third frame, when a brace of hits, with a poor throw by Zach Wheat, manufactured two large Pittsburgh runs. Mamaux fanned Blackwell, starting the inning, and then things began to happen. Cooper, versatile chap, rapped a single to left, and, after Bigbee skied out to Wheat, he stole second. Carey dumped a single in left, scoring Cooper, and when Wheat's return to the plate caromed off the broad back of the Pirate hurler to the stand, Carey also romped home. Then Billy Southworth lifted a rocket to Myers.

Mamaux held the Pirates safe in the three succeeding innings, but in the seventh another Pittsburgh outbreak came, and with it another run. With two down, Mollwitz rapped a double to right, and scored when Terry dumped a single in the same pasture. Terry took second on Hickman's throw to the plate for Mollwitz, and reached third when Blackwell beat out a hit to Olson, but on an attempted double steal the Pittsburgh shortstop was choked off at the plate.

REDS KEEP UP WILD RUSH.

Get Together Enough Runs in First Inning to Beat Phillies.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 8.—The Cincinnati team won the first game of the series with Philadelphia by bunching three hits with two passes off Packard in the first inning and scoring four runs. After that Packard pitched great ball, only one man of the home team getting past first base in the last seven rounds.

Ruether was wild, walking six men, and was hit freely, but great support prevented Philadelphia from tying the score. He was relieved by Ring in the eighth. The general play of Daubert at first base and that of Kopf at shortstop were the fielding features.

Giants' Former Pitcher Ineffective in First Start for Cards.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 8.—Schupp, pitching his first game for St. Louis today, got off to a poor start and Boston made almost enough runs in the first inning to win the game. The final score was 9 to 4, and the victory puts Boston into sixth place.

After the first inning Schupp gave only four hits, but his wildness paved the way for four more Boston runs.

NINE HITS TOO FEW TO WIN FOR BEARS

Newark Loses Golden Opportunities in Yielding to Rochester by 2 to 1 Score.

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 8—Arthur Irwin's Rochester Hustlers downed Patsy Donovan's Bears, 2 to 1, here today. Newark had four opportunities to drive in the winning run, but never could turn the trick.

Acosta, Rochester's Cuban twirler, was hit hard enough, Newark landing on him for nine safeties, but it was not until the eighth that Newark put a run over the plate, and this lone tally was the result of Ed Miller's home run smash to the flag pole in centre field.

JERSEY CITY WINS TWO.

Binghamton on Short End of Eleven and Seven Inning Encounters.

Bill Donovan's Skeeters came out on top in their clashes with Chick Hartman's Bingoes yesterday afternoon by registering victories in both ends of the two-ply bill. Jersey City rushed home the bacon after a hard battle at the start, which consumed eleven innings. The margin was 8 to 7. The Skeeters then repeated in the wind-up by a victory in seven innings by a score of 4 to 1.

Plenty of hard batting was the distinguishing feature of the opening clash, Jersey City putting together fifteen safe blows, while Binghamton reeled off sixteen.

INDIANS WIN IN NINTH.

Pass, Sacrifice, and Chapman's Single Beat Red Sox, 5 to 4.

BOSTON, Aug. 8.—Cleveland took the last game of the series with the Red Sox here today, 5 to 4. The winning run was scored in the ninth. McGraw walked Coveleskie, Graney sacrificed and Chapman singled, scoring Coveleskie. Jones was wild. Schang's catching was sensational.

NATURALIST FIRST IN SPEEDY FIELD

Widener Gelding Shows Way from Barrier to Wire in Mechanicville Handicap.

Special to The New York Times.

SARATOGA, Aug. 8.—Naturalist, which has won many stake events for his owner, J. E. Widener, this season, demonstrated again today that he is one of the best as well as one of the most consistent hanicappers in training, being able to win under almost any condition imposed upon him. The great son of Rabelais met a field of turf stars which included Star Master, War Pennant, and Bally among others, in the Mechanicville Handicap at a mile here this afternoon and once more got his nose past the judges' stand first.

Naturalist did not win with much to spare, as he defeated Star Master by only a neck, with War Pennant third, two lengths back. But Naturalist had set the pace all the way in a race which was run in 1:38 1-5, and though tiring at the end, was game enough to fight it out successfully at the finish with a horse that had been saved all through the first six furlongs for a final drive in the stretch.

By this victory Naturalist quite conclusively disproved the charge that he was inconsistent, a charge that was made in the early part of the season, when he had not reached his best form. The Widener horse is a noted mud runner, yet today he raced with the best of them over a track that had dried out under wind and sun until it was becoming quite fast. It was not a track supposed to be to the liking of Naturalist, and there was more credit for him in the victory, owing to his ability to win under conditions favoring his rivals.

Naturalist was made a favorite, but always at better than even money, while War Pennant, which had run a very good race in his first start here, was heavily backed and was second choice.

Leads from the Start.

Fairbrother, who has had much success in handling Naturalist, took his mount to the front in the first few strides and kept him in the lead, but under restraint. Better time could have been made had any of the others wished to take the lead, but they were content to let Naturalist run in front to the stretch. Star Master was sent close up to the leader, with War Pennant running third, and all going easily.

Turning into the stretch Robinson, on Star Master, and Sande, on War Pennant, charged upon the leader, and for a few seconds all three were bunched so closely that it was difficult to see which was leading. Star Master made a fine effort to get into the lead, but Naturalist leveled his head and defied the others to overtake him. He stepped with them stride for stride right down to the wire and there he poked his head out and won by a neck. Star Master had not been able to gain on him in the last eighth. War Pennant dropped out of the contest for first place within a hundred yards of the finish, but easily took third from James Butler's Bally, with Leochares, Tippity Witchet, and Moscowa trailing in as named.

Although there were seven races on the card today, owing to the large subscription for the original sixth event which was divided into two races, the favorites again fared badly. Only two came home in front, Naturalist and Robert Oliver, which won the Steeplechase, being the only ones which justified the confidence placed in them. The last two races, being the two sections of the original 2-year-old event, brought upsets, but provided some of the most interesting racing of the day.

Winners Are Neglected.

The events brought out some fine youngsters, though scratches lowered the number entered in each of the contests. T. H. Thorne's Evergay captured the first, and W. Booth's Neddam took the second race, both being neglected in the speculating.

J. W. May's Head Over Heels and Mrs. E. M. Brown's Gloria France ran rather disappointingly in the first of these races, the latter just managing to get third after being beaten for the place by A. H. Diaz's Grayssian. Head Over Heels was the one feared, as this filly is gifted with wonderful speed for five furlongs, but is apt to quit at any moment. Today she did not get away well and was never in the running for first place. Evergay beat the barrier and, rushing to a commanding lead, was an easy winner by a length.

TOMMY MURPHY IS A DOUBLE WINNER

CLEVELAND, Aug. 8.—Tommy Murphy of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., captured the Leader, 2:08 pace, with Direct C. Burnett, and then won the special match race with Ante Guy over Walter Cox's great trotter, Lu Princeton, the feature of today's Grand Circuit card at North Randall.

In winning these events Murphy set two season's records. In the first heat of the Leader pace, in order to head off the rush of Frank Dewey, driven by Cox, Murphy had to drive the final quarter in 27¾ seconds, the fastest quarter over any track this season, and one of the fastest quarters ever paced.

In the special trot, after being beaten in the first heat, Murphy brought Ante Guy home a winner in the second heat in 2:03¼, establishing a season's trotting record.

PAYS $22,500 FOR YEARLING.

Large Prices Realized in Sale of Young Racers at Saratoga.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Aug. 8.—Some of the best prices of the season for yearlings were obtained here tonight at the sale of a consignment from the Ellerslie stud of A. B. Hancock. The first twenty, the choice of the lot, brought an average of $6,300, the top figure being reached when a chestnut colt by Celt—Sand Dune, a full brother of The Boy, brought $22,500. This fine-looking colt was bought by William Chinn, it being presumed that he was bidding for Lawrence Waterbury, who has recently been gathering a string of horses.

W. H. Kerrick was next on the list of high bidders, with the purchase of a brown colt by Celt—Patricia IV. for $15,000. Wilfrid Viau was the successful bidder for half a dozen youngsters during the sale.

Curves and Bingles.

Cleveland comes here today for a four-game series which will have an important bearing on the Yankee's pennant chances. The Yanks are hanging on by a toe grip with the other foot on a banana peel. They are in third place, with Cleveland only one point behind.

The party which Colonel Ruppert planned to give the American League club owners here on Monday doesn't promise to be much of a social success. Some of the magnates would like to come, but Ban won't let them.

Mogridge halted George Sisler's wonderful hitting streak yesterday, after the Brown's first baseman had hit safely in sixteen successive games. Baby Doll Jacobson kept up his terrific hitting gait and had made thirty-two hits in the last fifty-seven times at bat for an average of .561. Jacobson is hitting harder than any player in the game at the present time.

There was a wild rumor at large at the Polo Grounds yesterday that the Giants were trying to get Rogers Hornsby of the Cardinals. It was stated that McGraw had offered Zimmerman, Doyle, Lee King and a large sum of money for the St. Louis star. McGraw denied the yarn in Chicago. One thing is certain. The veteran infield is not holding up the way McGraw expected and it does not look now as if this department of the club would be able to stand the terrific drive for the pennant.

With Mogridge back in the form he showed in other seasons, the Yankee pitching staff will be better equipped to stand the hard schedule ahead. Mays and Mogridge together with Shawkey, Quinn and Shore make a formidable combination. Thormahlen, who is nursing a lame arm, will soon be able to join in the battle again.

Manager Jimmy Burke was not at the game yesterday, being laid up at his hotel with tonsilitis. Joe Gedeon, the regular Brown second baseman, is also nursing a case of the same ailment.

Manager Clark Griffith of Washington was here yesterday trying to make a trade with Huggins. Griffith went over to Jersey City to look over one of Bill Donovan's young pitchers. DeVitalis, the newest addition to the Yank pitching staff, has been transferred to Donovan's Jersey City club.

Chick Fewster is making good with a vengeance these days. He had two doubles yesterday and a base on balls, besides doing some fancy fielding in Peckinpaugh's place at short.

Peck's wrenched knee still keeps him out of the game. He expects to be back on the job before Cleveland leaves town, however.

Duffy Lewis made a trick catch of Austin's high fly in the eighth. Lewis lost the ball in the sun, but ran back with his eyes closed and caught it with one hand just as it was saying goodbye.

With the bases full in the seventh, Ruel rolled a grounder to Gerber. The shortstop was undecided where to toss it. First he made a motion to toss it home, then he turned to throw it to second, and finally threw Ruel out at first. One of the Yankee players yelled from the bench, "Put it in your pocket and you'll always have it."

Brooklyn Tennis Star Succumbs to Philadelphian—Australians Make Debut and Win.

NEWPORT, Aug. 8.—William M. Johnston of California, after three years of waiting, got his revenge on Ichiya Kumagae today when he overwhelmed the Japanese tennis marvel in the semi-final round of the invitation tournament at the Newport Casino, winning in straight sets, 6-1, 6-1, 6-3. He will meet William T. Tilden, 2nd, in the final round tomorrow at 11 A. M., the Philadelphian having advanced this morning through victory over Voshell with the curiously up and down scores of 1-6, 2-6, 6-0, 6-0, 6-1.

The two Australian teams, Brookes and Patterson and Thomas and Lycett, reached the semi-final round of the doubles. The former team will face Williams and Washburn tomorrow morning, with the latter drawn against Wallace Johnson and Vincent Richards. The default of W. M. Johnston and C. J. Griffin to the second Australian combination was necessary to make the completion of the entire tournament by the end of the week a possibility.

Johnston's remarkable triumph over Kumagae was staged on the grand stand court, the same on which in 1916 he lost a heart-breaking five-set match to the little brown man from the East. It was a defeat which must have rankled, for the Californian was champion of America at that time, with Kumagae still practically an unknown quantity. Certainly today's vengeance was complete, with perhaps an added touch of grimness because of yesterday's elimination of National Champion Murray in one of the cruelest battles of tennis history.

Vindicates American Tennis.

Johnston has never played better than in his vindication of American courts this morning, not even in the great matches which carried him to the top in 1915 and to the second position the following year. His forehand drive was an irresistible flash of speed, and he seemed able to make it from all parts of the court, whether on the full run or with plenty of time to get set for his swing. He served with admirable steadiness and aggressiveness, his volleys were marvels of accuracy, and his backhand exhibited an offensive as well as defensive value. It would be unjust, however, to say that Kumagae was on his game, for he made a multitude of errors, in contrast to his usual rock-ribbed steadiness, and was inclined to take foolish chances by going in to volley against the best driver on the courts.

His own remarkable loop drive, which might be dubbed the "Kumagae," the national stroke of Japan, was far from the speed or the accuracy which it showed yesterday against Murray, and there was an increasing tendency to drive the ball into the net, partly due to the many low bounces that came off the slow grass surface. Although the court had been covered with a tarpaulin, some rain had leaked in from last night's terrific thunder storm, and there were spots back of the service line where the bound was never dependable. Both players suffered from this irregularity, and many of their shots were hurried, in consequence, although most of the rallies were of the most spectacular description, in spite of all handicaps.

Johnston started like a sprinter at the crack of the gun, breaking through Kumagae's service twice, and winning his own for a 3—0 lead before his opponent could score. Kumagae, however, replied with a love game off Johnston's delivery, only to lose two deuce games in succession, eventually dropping his own service again for the set, 6—1.

The Californian continued his wonderful playing in the second set, reaching a total of eight successive games before his streak could be stopped. His first tally came with a tremendous drive straight down the line from the extreme right-hand corner of the court, after which he forced his rival into continual errors which quickly ran the lead up to 5—0, the last game coming after Johnston had trailed at 15—40 on his own service. Kumagae then served successfully for his only score of the set, although he led at love, 4—0, on the seventh game.

Johnston's Game Is Steady.

Johnston deuced the points with unbeatable steadiness, reached vantage when Kumagae smashed an easy one into the net, and put another 6—1 victory to his credit with a fast, low-bounding serve, which has netted. Johnston broke through the left-hander's service again to start the final set. He was 15—40 to the bad in the second game, but Kumagae gave him a life with a bad lob and splendid volleying pulled it out for a lead of 2—0. The Japanese did some good volleying on his own account for a score on service, and then tied up the set at 2—all, angling the final point off a marvelous forehand drive which Johnston made while running at top speed beyond the extreme corner of the court.

The Californian then broke through in turn with a winning stop volley, which caught Kumagae slipping far out of position. He made it 4—2 on a close out, and upset his opponent's delivery again for a 5—2 advantage on errors. Kumagae made his last stand when he beat Johnston's service with the help of errors and a net cord shot.

There was no stopping the ex-champion after that, for he took four points in succession for the set, 6—3, and the match, the last rally ending when Kumagae drove beyond the base line. It was a one-sided but thoroughly interesting exhibition of exceedingly fast tennis, and served to make Johnston the general favorite to win first honors tomorrow.

FIRST SET.

Johnston	5	4	4	0	6	7	4	30—6
Kumagae	3	1	2	4	4	5	2	21—1

SECOND SET.

Voshell Weakens in Sun.

The Voshell-Tilden struggle was a remarkable example of a complete reversal of form. In the first two sets the Brooklyn southpaw played the best tennis of his career, an amazingly well rounded game that for the time proved absolutely invincible.

Then the heat overcame Voshell, as it has many times in the past, and he faded away to a shadow of the slashing aggressive player that he had been for the first fifteen games of the match. The most extraordinary feature of Voshell's winning streak was his command of ground strokes, ordinarily the weakest point in his game. He seemed able to hit the ball forehand and backhand with a free swing, plenty of speed, and very exact placement, instead of poking at it in his usual style.

It was by these surprising shots off the ground, as well as by his wonderfully effective service, that he kept Tilden constantly on the defensive until his physical condition failed him. Voshell has seldom if ever served so well, and his fast, twisting delivery, breaking sharply from the soft, rain-soaked surface, completely baffled the tall Philadelphian. The volleys and the overhead shots that are generally the metropolitan champion's chief assets were scarcely needed during his early rampage, although he used them with convincing finality when the openings cried aloud, and there was considerable head work in his selection of the exact spot to plant the ball.

Tilden was by no means himself in the first half of the encounter, finding constant difficulty in judging the bound of the ball and never really gaining the necessary confidence in his shots. Yet even at his best, it is doubtful if he could have stopped the headlong rush of Voshell in that first mad charge. Tilden was wise in conserving his strength, waiting for the time when the inevitable break should come.

Voshell Best at Start.

Voshell began by winning two successive love games, the first on his own delivery and the second on Tilden's. It was 3—0 before the Philadelphian broke into the score, whereupon Voshell immediately served another love game for a 4—1 lead, running out the set on service 6—1, after Tilden had again lost his own delivery with a double fault.

Two more double faults by Tilden gave Voshell his first break and a 2—1 lead in the second set, and he reached 4—1 when Tilden slipped in trying to reach a fast drive to the corner. Another love game on service made it 5—1 in Voshell's favor, and, although he dropped the next one to Tilden's delivery, the set was his at 6—2 with a hard fought deuce game in which a lead of 40-15 was cut down by two splendid shots on the part of the loser. Even in these last few rallies there were indications that Voshell had shot his bolt. He smashed out badly for the deciding point of the first game in the third set and then had his service upset for the first time, when, after a double fault and a too-strong volley, a very accurate backhand shot of Tilden's passed him cleanly across court. Tilden then served a love game containing a beautiful deep lob following a short chop which drew Voshell in close. When Tilden increased his lead to 4—0 the left-hander evidently decided that the set was already gone, for he threw it away in flagrant fashion, knocking the ball far out of court and refusing to return the serves in the final game. The set was a gift to Tilden at 6—0, with the loss of only 5 points.

Tilden in Fast Finish.

But the interval of rest was of little help to Voshell, and although he made the games closer, carrying two of them to deuce, he was again defeated 6—0 in the set that tied up the match. The rubber was almost as one-sided with an identical point score. Voshell won a single deuce game and that was the extent of his success. Leading at 5—1, Tilden finished up at full speed, serving a love game for the final points.

The point score of the match follows:

FIRST SET.

Voshell	4	5	2	4	4	5	28—6

So far as the doubles event was concerned, the interest today centred in the Australians. They took the courts as soon as play began this morning, Brookes and Patterson engaging Dr. Rosenbaum and A. S. Cragin near the pavilion, while Thomas and Lycett played Carl Fischer and Dr. Hawk behind the clubhouse. The former players won the opening set easily at 6—2, but were carried to 10—8 in the second before they had downed the New York combination. Fischer and Hawk surprised the second pair by winning the first set 6—4, but after the Australians had lost their sea legs they travelled quickly to victory at 6—2, 6—2.

Heat Garland and Johnson.

The afternoon matches gave a better line on the ability of two of the visitors, Brookes and Patterson defeating Garland and H. C. Johnson in straight sets, 6—3, 6—4. In the lower half Johnston and Griffin eliminated Murray and Niles in a spectacular struggle at 8—6, 6—4, and then defaulted to Thomas and Lycett in order to clear up the schedule for tomorrow.

While the well-rounded stylish game and heady team work of Thomas and Lycett aroused general admiration, it was the play of Brookes and Patterson that was most closely watched. The general impression is that the veteran left-hander is as good as he ever was, with perhaps a little more speed in his service and forehand drive than in the past. He is obviously the steady man of the combination, leaving Patterson to attend to the fireworks.

Patterson's forehand is very fast and generally well controlled, while in serving his sweeps the ball across the net with terrific speed and a big break to the left of the receiver. The curve and high bound are not so pronounced as in the regular American twist delivery, but the ball, having less top spin, comes off the ground more quickly, besides travelling more directly and speedily through the air.

A Powerful Stroke.

Patterson's overhead is a tremendous wallop when it comes off, but he is inclined to use it recklessly, and today he often hit unnecessarily at balls which were on their way out. His game is a spectacular one in every department, but seems in general less sound then that of his instructor. There is splendid power, however, in the young Australian's backhand as well as forehand. When he volleys he has a tendency to shorten his grip on the racquet, which gives accuracy and sharp angles to his shots.

While Garland and his partner were defeated by the visitors today, they were far from outclassed. A break against Johnson's first service accounted for the Australian's advantage in the opening set, which went at 6—3. In the second the Americans led up to 3—1, the games being tied up when Garland's delivery was upset with a double fault and the final break coming against the same player for a 6—4 decision. Hard driving accounted for the final points.

VETERAN IN FINAL OF SIWANOY GOLF

Sawyer's Brilliancy Turns Back Two Opponents — Meets Sweetser for Trophy.

A youth meets a veteran today at Siwanoy in the thirty-six-hole final match for the Victory Trophy. Ned Sawyer, playing as he did in his palmy days of a decade ago, turned back S. R. Hollander of Siwanoy and Reggie Lewis of Wykagyl yesterday by decisive margins, and has a firm grasp on one of the silver handles of the cup. Young Jesse Sweetser of Ardsley holds the other handle, by virtue of his defeat of C. E. Van Vleck, Jr., and T. V. Bermingham of Wykagyl.

Sawyer was shooting the best golf seen in the tournament yesterday. In the morning round against Hollander he gathered an early lead, and held it to the end, winning 2 up and 1 to play. In the afternoon he tackled Reggie Lewis, former Westchester champion, and, had the Wykagyl golfer been playing in anything like his form of a few years ago, it would have been a beautiful match. Lewis won the first hole, after both had sliced their drives, by chipping up to the pin and sinking his putt for a 4, while Sawyer delved into the side of a trap and came out short. The Wykagyl golfer lost this advantage immediately by hooking his drive from the second tee into a bad place, made up of a stone wall, long grass, and a few trees. He came out short on his third and failed to stay on the green on his fourth. Sawyer was in a trap on his second, but came out well and won handily. Lewis became 1 down at the short third by pitching to the right of the green and missing his putt for a 2. The next three holes were halved, all in par figures.

Lewis Begins to Drop Back.

At the seventh hole Lewis began to slip. He was a bit anxious and was overswinging. On a mashie pitch to the seventh green he found the turf too soft and went in so deep that his club was turned in his hand. The result of this was that his ball shot off at an angle into a trap, where he took two shots before he was out and over the green. On the eighth he played so hastily that he missed two shots in succession, and on the ninth he took three putts. In the meanwhile Sawyer was playing golf that was a delight to the eye. He was hitting the ball crisply from the tee and through the green, and was 4 up at the turn, with a score of 37.

Lewis cut this lead to 3 up on the eleventh, where the Siwanoy player put his tee shot in a trap, but Sawyer got it back again on the thirteenth, where the Wykagyl youngster topped his tee shot. Lewis was plainly showing lack of practice on shots that should have been easy for him. At the deciding fourteenth Sawyer played for a par 4 and got it, but Lewis was just short of the green in two and just over on his third. He holed a nice putt for a 5, but Sawyer had the match, 5 and 4.

Sweetser had a hard battle with Van Vleck in the morning. The match came to the turn all square, but by winning the tenth, eleventh, and twelfth Ardsley youngster gained a lead and was never headed. Van Vleck seems to be hoodooed by stymies. On the eleventh hole, when he should have squared the match, he laid himself one of the prettiest stymies seen in these parts lately, and was 2 down instead of all square. Sweetser held his lead to the end, winning 3 and 1.

Sweetser Off at High Speed.

In the afternoon, against Bermingham, the Ardsley player made a nice start by taking the first hole with a par 4, when his opponent was short of the green on his second, and continued the good work with a birdie 4 on the long second. He took three good putts on the third hole, however, and lost one hole of his advantage. He had a spell of three putt greens throughout the match, but as Bermingham was not up to his usual form, not much harm was done.

Sweetser came to the turn 2 up, and increased his lead at the eleventh, where Bermingham pitched well to the green, only to see the northwest wind carry the ball over the edge into trouble. A ten-foot putt for a 2 on the short thirteenth gave the youngster another hole, putting him 4 up. The next two holes were halved, giving Sweetser the match, 4 and 3.

There will be a fine battle in the Eeaten Sixteen division today, when G. L. Conley, one of the favorites who fell in the early round, meets J. S. Worthington, the imported expert. It may furnish better golf than the trophy contest, though if Sawyer plays as he did yesterday his match will be worth going miles to see.

WHITE WINS CLOSE CONTEST ON LINKS

Nassau Golfer Beats Carter, 2 Up, and Then Wins from Sullivan at Southampton.

SOUTHAMPTON, N. Y., Aug. 8.—Match play was the order of the day at the invitation tournament of the National Golf Links of America. The most closely contested morning match was between Phil Carter, Bridgehampton, and Gardiner White of Nassau.

It has been a long time since these two players have been drawn against each other in match play, and as each scored 38 on the outward journey the gallery following them saw some good golf. They were all square at the ninth, but Carter took the lead after the turn. White squared the match, however, and by sinking a ten-foot putt on the punchbowl hole for a birdie 3 to Carter's 5 took the lead.

Playing the long home hole Carter topped his drive and his second landed in the big bunker, and after playing out, short conceded the hole to White when he found that White was just short of the green in two.

In the afternoon play of the first sixteen young Archie MacIlwaine, National, disposed of the veteran John M. Ward, Garden City, by 1 up, and Nelson Whitney, Audubon, defeated Paul Moore, Morris County, 4 and 3.

Gardiner White and C. J. Sullivan, Garden City, President of the Metropolitan Golf Association, had a battle royal in their afternoon round in the first sixteen, White, after going out in 35, with a 6 on the ninth, developed a very erratic streak, but finally pulled out, winning by 2 and 1.

The cards:

White—Out	4	3	3	2	5	4	4	3	6	35
In	5	6	4	2	5	6	6	4	.	38—73
Sullivan—Out	4	5	5	4	4	3	5	4	5	39
In	6	5	5	3	4	5	5	5	.	38—77

James R. Hyde, National, after being 6 down in his match with E. H. Brown, Detroit Country Club, at the eleventh, drew up even, squaring the match on the seventeenth green. After both landed in the big and little bunkers, playing the eighteenth, Brown holed out in 6 and Hyde in 7, taking three putts.

The summary:

National Golf Links Invitation Tournament.

FIRST SIXTEEN.

First Round—John M. Ward, Garden City, beat H. Solley, Maidstone, 5 and 4; Archibald McIlwaine, National, beat Fred Snare, Havana, 4 and 2; James R. Hyde, National, beat C. H. WINS STATE CHESS TITLE.

Kupchik Regains Championship by Defeat of Chajes at Troy.

Special to The New York Times.

TROY, N. Y., Aug. 8.—By defeating O. Chajes in the final round of the championship tournament at the midsummer meeting of the New York State Chess Association at the Chess Club of Troy, today, A. Kupchik of New York City, champion of the Manhattan Chess Club, finished in first place, with a total score of 4½ to 1½, and regained the title of State champion. Kupchik had the white side of a queen's gambit declined in his match with Chajes, and wound up the game with a pretty combination after thirty moves.

C. Jaffe, who had tied Kupchik yesterday, found his master in Bernstein today, the latter winning in forty-six moves. Bernstein had white in a queen's gambit declined. Jaffe won second prize, and Chajes third.

The final score:

MRS. GAVIN BEATEN AT SHENECOSSETT

Miss Rosenthal's Sturdy, Uphill Game Lands Her in Title Round with Mrs. Barlow.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Aug. 8.—Miss Elaine Rosenthal of Ravisloe will meet Mrs. Ronald Barlow of Philadelphia in the final of the Shenecossett woman's golf championship tournament tomorrow. Mrs. Barlow had by far the easier match to play today, and held up her side of the bracket by defeating Mrs. F. B. Ryan of Craxford by 7 and 5.

The match between Miss Rosenthal and Mrs. W. A. Gavin of South Shore attracted the gallery, which was well rewarded for the trip around the links, as the pair finished all square on the eighteenth green, and it took an extra hole to decide the winner. Mrs. Gavin seemed to have the match well in hand several times, and looked like a winner up to the last hole, but repeatedly threw away her opportunities. She was driving a bit beyond her opponent from nearly every tee, but her short game was wabbly.

The ninth was the turning point. In attempting to carry a trap on her second, when her rival was three shots behind, Mrs. Gavin found trouble, and finally lost the hole by 8 to 7. In the short eleventh she again had the best of it by a stroke, but hit her opponent's ball and got only a half. In the sixteenth, with the match all even, she looked up on a short approach, and could get no better than a half with Miss Rosenthal, who was in the trap on her second. Again on the eighteenth the New York golfer looked to be a sure winner, as she was on the green in two, while her rival was over in her second. The Chicago girl laid her a half stymie, and a half in five was the result. On the nineteenth hole both were in the trap on their second, but made nice shots. Mrs. Gavin took three putts, and the match was over.

In the second sixteen Miss T. Palmer beat Mrs. Alva Oatman 1 up, and Mrs. L. G. Baker defeated Miss V. Palmer 3 and 4.

In the beaten eight Mrs. Charles Bicknell defeated Mrs. J. P. Armstrong 1 up, and Miss Lois Steamer defeated Miss Kate Boman in nineteen holes.

WALKER PLAYS GOOD GOLF.

Wins Two Matches, but Greenwich Lad Gives Him a Battle.

Special to The New York Times.

BENNINGTON, Vt., Aug. 8.—A. L. Walker, Jr., the intercollegiate golf champion, playing as an Ekwanok representative in the Vermont State golf championship tournament here today, came through the second and semi-final rounds of match play with ample margins, but had to play rather keen golf to establish his leads.

This morning Walker played a 15-year-old youth, Sayre McLeod of Greenwich, Conn., and won at the fourteenth green by five up and four to play. Barring a lost ball on the first hole the winner was going close to an even four clip.

This afternoon Walker met George E. Morse, the veteran tournament player from Rutland, and was but two over even fours when the match ended at the fifteenth green. Walker and Morse each had a two to his credit and Walker had one seven, so that his going otherwise was practically par golf. Morse disposed of C. L. Holden, a former Vermont champion, this morning.

RESERVATION HALTS COLOMBIAN TREATY

Provision Protecting American Oil Leases Ordered by Senate Committee.

OWNERSFEAR CONFISCATION

Say Colombia Is Planning Deal Giving Petroleum Monopoly to British Syndicate.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The Senate Foreign Relations Committee today referred the proposed treaty with Colombia to a sub-committee, with instructions to draft a reservation adequately protecting American oil interests in that country against the effects of a drastic decree lately issued by theSuarez Government.

Evidence laid before the committee on behalf of American investors in Colombian oil projects caused the demand for the insertion of a clause to prevent confiscation of American properties. Senator Fall of New Mexico heads the subcommittee, the other members of which are Senators McCumber and Smith, Arizona.

The State Department laid before the full committee a copy of the Colombian decree, which nationalizes all petroleum deposits, declaring the fee simple title in all of them vested in the Government, and preventing the surface owner from executing leases for the oil.

As translated by the State Department the decree sets forth that the petroleum lands belong to the nation in fee simple in accordance with decrees, laws and decisions dating from 1829 and affirmed in July, 1918, by the Council of State. It then makes the following provisions:

"In order to carry on explorations of any kind and on any scale in lands that may be or may not be the property of the nation, in search or in a localization of sources or deposits of petroleum, a permit from the Government must first be obtained.

"All undertakings of individuals or companies, which are occupied definitely or transitorily, and in any section, in making studies of petroleum properties, such as prospectings, soundings and perforations, on any scale, will be required to comply with the following obligations:

"A.—To advise the Government, through the Ministry of Public Works, as to the works that are being initiated, and if they have already been initiated to report on the result of the explorations.

"B.—They will also be required to remit to the Ministry of Public Works, accompanied by their report and duly authenticated, labeled samples of the petroleum which they have extracted and a topographical sketch of the zone or region explored.

"C.—If the explorations were effected on private property this circumstance should be so stated and, moreover, the original title to such lands should be indicated, stating whether they were at any time under appropriation; if so, the date of their cession by the Government.

"The permit for exploring petroleum properties, referred to in Article I., will be granted by the Ministry of Public works whenever deemed convenient by it. And the granting of this permit, or the fact that explorations have been made, will not be construed as involving a license, or expectation of a license, on the part of those who have carried on the work.

"The explorers who, to the satisfaction of the Government, verify the exploration of the zone which may be conceded to them, complying with all the conditions imposed by said permit, will have, dating from the expiration of said permit, a period of six months for proposing to the Government a contract for making explorations in accordance with the laws relating to this matter.

"The period of the permit will be for one year without renewal rights, commencing with the date of its issue.

"The extension of the zones of exploration will be limited in each case. * * * The extension will be from 10,000 to 30,000 hectares.

"Only the party to whom the permit has been granted can explore the zone comprehended by it. The permit cannot be transferred in any manner to another natural or judicial person.

"The concession account will make a monthly report to the Government on the state and progress of the exploration. He will also report immediately on the discovery of outcroppings of sources of petroleum.

According to American oil men at Barranquilla, Colombia, who have protested, through C. E. Guyant, American Consul there, and Hoffman Phillip, United States Minister, the decree of nationalization is based on the Carranza oil land legislation. Two causes were assigned by the oil men for the decree.

1—That the Colombian Government was about to enter into a deal with the Pearson Syndicate, a British concern, giving that company a practical monopoly of oil fields into the discovery, exploration and development of which Americans had put their money.

2—That the Tropical Oil Company of Pittsburgh was having trouble with landowners regarding leases, and wanted blanket protection from the Colombian Government. A report by a Mr. Manning, who has recently made an exhaustive study of both the Mexican and Colombian oil situations, is said to have disclosed that an Anglo-Colombian corporation has agreed to lend the Colombian Government 1,000,000 pounds sterling in return for a blanket petroleum concession.

As a result of the protests, the Colombian Government stated that the decrees would be suspended pending legislation by the present Congress, but it developed that this did not alter the nationalization decree nor a provision preventing surface owners from executing leases.

There are two extensive leases of petroleum land in Columbia owned by American companies. The Demares lease covers about 2,000,000 acres and the Bares lease about 500,000 acres. The former is controlled by the Tropical Oil Company and the latter by the H. L. Doherty Company of New York.

In 1913 Lord Murray went to Colombia and tried to get a large concession for Lord Cowdray, with whose company Lord Murray was associated. The Colombian Congress was ready to grant the concession, but finally refused to issue it on the advice of Mr. Bryan, then Secretary of State, who showed a friendly attitude toward a treaty providing for the payment of $25,000,000 to Colombia for Panama Canal rights and the French Canal concessions.

Subsequently American concerns, invited expressly by the Colombian Government, acquired oil rights by purchase and lease, conforming in every particular to the laws of Colombia. The title to the lands dated back to 1873, and there was never any question raised regarding the lease rights. The Standard Oil Company has producing property near the coast, and among others the Independent Pittsburgh Syndicate has developed lands 600 miles inland and has two large producing properties. The Independent Company is arranging to finance a long pipe line to bring the petroleum to tidewater.

Some Senators have heard intimations that the action taken by President Suarez was inspired by President Carranza of Mexico.

COLUMBIA CONCERTS END.

Subscribers Give Silver Service to Edwin F. Goldman, Band Leader.

The ten weeks' season of free open-air concerts "on the green" at Columbia University came to an end last night. The series was highly successful, the attendance averaging twenty thousand persons a performance. At last night's concert a silver service was presented to Edwin Franko Goldman, the leader of the band, by the subscribers. The members of the band, known as the New York Military Band, presented their leader with a pair of cuff links.

A similar series of concerts is planned for next Summer. Among those who provided the funds for the concerts this year were Murry Guggenheim, Mrs. Daniel Guggenheim, Felix Warburg, Mrs. Helen Hartley Jenkins, Mrs. Elisabeth Milbank Anderson, Mrs. Clarence Mulhiser, Mrs. Simon Frankel.

Referee to Decide Will Dispute.

Surrogate Cohalan decided yesterday to appoint a referee to determine whether Mrs. Duncan Phyfe of the Hotel Buckingham is competent to act as administratrix of the estate of her husband, who died in May, leaving an estate of $300,000. Her sister-in-law, Mrs. Edith Phyfe, applied for and obtained letters on the ground that she was mentally incompetent to manage the property, and the widow then sought to have the administration revoked on the ground that she is competent. The sister-in-law submitted affidavits by nurses and physicians, who attended the decedent, stating that the widow was eccentric and that they believed her mental faculties impaired.

INDICATE DECREASE IN YIELD OF CROPS

Bad Weather and Other Conditions Cut Big Gap in Production of Corn and Wheat.

LACK OF RAIN IN CORN BELT

Output Now Is Estimated at 2,788,378,000 Bushels, While Wheat Is Put at 1,161,000,000 Bushels.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The country's corn crop showed a decrease of 27,052,000 bushels as a result of weather and other conditions during July. The Department of Agriculture, in its August forecast, announced the crop promised 2,788,378,000, based on conditions existing on Aug. 1, compared with a forecast of 2,815,430,000 bushels made early in July.

Wheat production fell off 221,000,000 bushels as compared with the July forecast, the total being placed at 1,161,000,000 bushels. There was a decrease of 124,000,000 bushels of Winter wheat and 97,000,000 bushels of Spring wheat.

A statement by the Department said most of the corn belt suffered from want of rain, serious over large areas, particularly in Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Nebraska, Kansas, and Oklahoma.

Winter wheat continued its downward course, due to the ill effects of rust, scab and blight. The stock in the Southwest was described as the best in years, being above normal; but in the Western mountain districts, dry land wheat is generally poor. In the Northwest also the crop is disappointing owing to lack of rainfall.

Spring wheat, the statement said, is even more seriously affected. Most of the Spring wheat territory was in the area of drought and thus, with serious damage from rust and scab and grasshoppers in North Dakota, reduced the promise by 97,000,000 bushels.

Forecasts of the crops, based on Aug. 1 conditions were announced today by the Department of Agriculture as follows:

Winter wheat	715	Tobacco (lbs.)	1,335
Spring wheat	225	Flax	10.2
All wheat	940	Rice	43.4
Corn	2,788	Hay	111

White potatoes	357
Sweet potatoes	100	Peaches (bushels)	49.8

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—Anticipations which were more than fulfilled that the Government crop would be bullish had a great deal to do with the upward turn the prices of all deliveries of corn took today at the last. The close was nervous, ¼c. to four cents net higher, with September 189¾ to 190, and December 150⅞ to 151½. Oats gained 1⅛c. to 1⅝c. In provisions the outcome ranged from a decline of fifteen to ten cents advance.

Government figures on the prospective yield of corn came too late to have any direct influence on the market. The unofficial estimates, however, indicated such a decided reduction in the eventual crop total that bearish economic and industrial factors were at least temporarily counterbalanced. Almost from the outset, too, the smallness of contract stocks of corn in Chicago made shorts in the September delivery anxious and had forced the price of that month sharply higher. It was not until the last hour, though, that, largely owing to evening up for the Government report, the depression in the December and May options was overcome.

Oats swayed with corn. Guesses beforehand on the Government crop report as to oats were generally bullish.

Labor difficulties that made hog values weak were reflected by provisions. Trading most of the time was very light.

CROWDER ENDS CUBAN TASK

President Menocal Signs Law He Went to Help Frame.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVANA, Aug. 8.—Maj. Gen. Enoch Crowder sailed for New York last night aboard the Cuban cruiser Cuba, after spending the day as the guest of President Menocal and his family at Varadero de Cardenas, where the President signed the three laws which General Crowder came here to frame.

The Cuban press generally speaks highly of the work accomplished by the General, who, in the face of Cuba's mañana habit, has in about four months time endowed Cuba with three laws of the greatest value to the country, although to do so it was necessary that he work the parliamentary committee collaborating with him and himself until late hours almost every night.

In a statement dictated for THE NEW YORK TIMES General Crowder said:

"I am leaving Cuba greatly indebted to the Cuban Government, to which I was accredited, for the most ample facilities and encouragement in the task assigned to me, and to the press and people of Cuba for the co-operative attitude consistently maintained throughout my entire stay.

"It is essential to the success of the revisions which have been enacted that public opinion should support them, with fair criticism uninfluenced by partisanship. It should be in the minds of all that a crime committed against the suffrage of a country is particularly a crime committed against the national sovereignty, and that a discreditable electoral administration here, as in all other countries, threatens the national sovereignty in a very direct way."

The Commission announces for Aug. 20 an examination for assistant in tobacco investigations, for men. Two vacancies in the Bureau of Plant Industry, Department of Agriculture, for duty in the field, at $1,200 to $1,800 a year, will be filled from this examination. Certificates to fill the higher-salaried positions will be made from those attaining the highest average percentages in the examination. The headquarters of one position will be in Virginia, North Carolina, or South Carolina, and the appointee will carry on his work in one of those States; the other appointee will have his headquarters in Connecticut, and will conduct his experiments in the Connecticut Valley. Competitors will be examined in practical questions in tobacco culture, 35; education, training and experience, 65. Applicants must have had at least one year's experience in growing, curing, and handling tobacco. They must have reached their twentieth, but not their forty-fifth, birthday on the date of the examination.

Education Notes.

The end of the six weeks' session of the vacation schools will take place next week. On Tuesday and Thursday final examinations will be held for the 12,000 pupils attending the opportunity classes. The term will end on Friday, Aug. 15. Pupils who pass the tests will receive certificates qualifying them for promotion in the regular elementary school grades in September.

The Board of Education has approved the list submitted by the Board of Superintendents of special and general supplies for use in day and evening high and elementary schools for 1920.

Leaves of absence for three months on half pay have been granted to Jeremiah Clayton, William G. Delamater, and Peter J. Treacey, Inspectors of Repairs in the Buildings Bureau of the Board of Education.

16 HURT IN AUTO CRASHES.

Heavily Laden Cars in Two Accidents—Man Mortally Hurt.

One person was killed and fifteen were injured in two auto crashes yesterday, one accident occurring in Manhattan and the other in Brooklyn. The first accident took place in the morning at Eighth Avenue and Forty-fourth Street, Brooklyn, when an automobile operated by George Smith of 3,110 Fulton Street, Brooklyn, which was carrying to work employes of the Marmon Automobile Company, 42 West Sixty-second Street, Manhattan, crashed into a machine owned by Dr. Morris Cohen of 1,320 Thirty-sixth Street. The Cohen automobile was overturned and Miss Anna Bleinstein of 1,482 Forty-first Street, Brooklyn, a passenger, was pinned beneath it. The other auto swerved to the sidewalk, but did not upset.

Walter H. Priess of 9,520 127th Street, Richmond Hill, was thrown from the Marmon Company's car, striking his head on the pavement. He died on the way to the hospital. The injured besides Miss Bleinstein were: Miss Edna Reilly of 1,730 Forty-sixth Street, Brooklyn; Miss Joanna Lanigan of 18 First Street, Brooklyn; Frank Brinkerhoff of 8,620 127th Street, Richmond Hill; the Misses Mary and Loretta McGuinness of 10 Douglas Street, Brooklyn, and George Smith, chauffeur of the Marmon Company's car.

The second accident occurred shortly after 6 o'clock last night when a touring car, owned and driven by Harry Levy of 1,654 Fifty-ninth Street, Brooklyn, was demolished and its seven occupants thrown to the street in a collision at Broadway and Delancey Street with an auto truck owned by the American Cigar and Soda Water Syndicate, 139 Delancey Street, and operated by William Feinberg of 332 Delancey Street.

Two ambulance calls were sent to Bellevue and St. Vincent's Hospitals, but only Isadore Levy, a brother of the owner of the touring car, was injured seriously enough to cause his removal to the hospital. Levy received a fractured hip. The others injured were Miss Catherine Connelly of 1,563 Broadway, Brooklyn; Miss Martha Walters of 297 Jefferson Street, Brooklyn; Miss Lillian Meiseles of 1,492 St. Mark's Avenue, Brooklyn; Harry Shepherd, 68 McKelvin Street, Brooklyn, and Charles Lange of 181 Stanhope Street, Brooklyn.

TO INVESTIGATE SERVICE.

Telephone Hearing Results in Complainants' Decision to Inspect Plant.

The Public Service Commission of the Second District began taking testimony yesterday on complaints that the New York Telephone Company was not giving adequate service and that conditions were constantly growing worse. Among those who appeared to testify against the company were Stuart Browne of the New York Real Estate Association; Franklin Taylor, M. H. Winkler, representing the Council of Jewish Women; Assemblyman Edward F. Healy, Mark Goldstein, and several representatives of the Merchants' Association. Assistant Corporation Counsel Stanton appeared for the city. F. H. Bethell, First Vice President of the telephone company, was also present.

In the complaint filed by Mr. Browne the charge was made that the company had been underpaying its telephone girls and that the latter had been purposely giving wrong numbers and rendering generally unsatisfactory service. A representative of the company denied this statement, but admitted that the war had in a measure demoralized the service and that while about 6 per cent. of the numbers received were wrong that some mistakes were due to the subscribers.

Franklyn Hawley James of 154 Nassau Street suggested that the company be requested to pay subscribers for time needlessly used on the same basis as the subscriber is charged. He also suggested that monthly statements sent to subscribers show each number called, that the company be barred from refusing service to a subscriber because of the latter's refusal to pay a bill on the ground that it contained errors. The cost of any legal action arising from such a matter should fall upon the company, said Mr. James.

A suggestion was adopted that a committee be selected from among the complainants to investigate the company's plant. Mr. Bethell said that he would gladly welcome the committee. Chairman Hill announced that a further hearing would be called when the committee was ready to report.

EXPLAINS RODMAN INCIDENT

Daniels Says He Only Commented on Admiral's Speech Informally.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Aug. 8.—Secretary of the Navy Daniels authorized a statement today, in which he told briefly of the circumstances that led to Admiral Rodman's announcement last night at a banquet that a speech he had prepared in advance would have to remain in his pocket as Secretary Daniels had censored it and told him not to use it. Secretary Daniels said:

"Admiral Rodman showed me a copy of a speech he had written and I commented upon it and advised that a certain paragraph be omitted. I did not know that I was acting in any official capacity as a censor at this time, nor did I know then that the speech had been sent broadcast in advance. Had I known that copies were in the hands of the newspapers I would have made no objection to the use of the speech.

"The speech was shown me and I commented upon it in an informal manner."

A paragraph in the Admiral's speech which the Secretary thought should be eliminated referred to possible future wars.

Admiral Rodman laughingly said today that the whole affair amounted to nothing, and that "it didn't bother me a bit."

Large Cutters-Up Protected.

Although the small offering of woolen and worsted men's wear and dress goods fabrics for next Spring had been forecast, the actual allotment of such materials on the basis described has caused something of a flurry in the clothing and garment trades. Among the large cutters-up there is a feeling that approaches security because in the main they seem to have received guarantees that a large part of their usual quantities of material will be supplied to them. But the medium and smaller houses have received no such assurances and they see no possibility ahead, if present conditions continue, of obtaining their needs. Even the jobbers who have had a record season are looking forward to the next season with a foreboding that their quick entrance into business may be followed by just as hasty an exit.

Dry Goods Market Dull.

For the time being, at least, buyers have apparently abandoned the local gray goods market to its fate. The result was that yesterday was the dullest day of a dull week, and sales, large or small, were few and far between. Inquiries, from all accounts, were no more numerous. Buyers simply were not interested, and this was as true of fine yarn cloths and specialties as it was of staples. Offerings of staples from second hands at prices that would have been jumped at a week or two ago never raised a ripple.

To Put In House Furnishings.

The eighth floor of the Bush Terminal Sales Building will be opened on Sept. 1 as a house furnishings department. More than fifty manufacturers of such goods will be represented in either the wholesale showrooms, where the manufacturers' representatives will preside, or in the sales service section. The lines covered will be household necessities and kitchen utensils, embracing about 300 separate articles. James Taylor will be in charge of the department, and associated with him will be A. H. Bond, Thomas J. Cronin, and Mrs. K. S. Chaney.

Ostrich Feathers Cheap Here.

Apropos of the assertion that local ostrich feather prices are below those quoted in the other leading world markets, it was said yesterday that a recent cable from Port Elizabeth, South Africa, set the price of second "prime whites," 20 to 25 inches long, at £20 a pound. This would mean a landing cost in this city of about $140 a pound. The same cable quoted third "prime whites," 18 to 22 inches long, at £17 a pound, which means about $125 a pound landed here. Current local quotations on both grades were said to be well under the South African price, but general advances are imminent here.

The Trend in Pianos.

Something of a change has come over the piano trade in the shape of leadership for the player type where formerly uprights and grands had the first call. Manufacturers report now that there are 70 per cent. more player pianos sold than of the other two makes. Between uprights and grands there is very little to choose, the business taken on both being about the same. Two years ago, it was stated yesterday, conditions were just the reverse. Seventy per cent. of uprights were sold to the remaining 30 per cent. of the grand and player types. The popularity of player pianos is ascribed to the demand from workingmen who are receiving high wages and can now afford to have music in their homes.

Adjustment Clause on Contracts.

The order forms of many of the woolen mills represented in this market will bear the adjustment clause prepared by the Mutual Adjustment Bureau of the cloth and garment trades. This bureau has about completed its work of preparing to put goods into mill shape, and, with its readiness to do this, it will be in a position to take care of cases where buyers and sellers disagree. All cases in dispute will be referred to the bureau, thus protecting the seller against unwarranted returns and the buyer against non-delivery or late delivery of material he has on order. The finishing department of the bureau will also attend to regrading of fabrics that do not come up to set standards.

Real Tan Shades Coming Back.

While the color trend for Spring 1920 has not yet been definitely worked out, well-posted men in the hosiery business predict a return to vogue of the lighter tan shades that have been out of the running for some time. This, they assert, will spell the end of the demand for African brown, which was kept in style by Government compulsion on the shoe trade during the war, and which continued good for the Fall season under the momentum thus gained. Another prediction for the coming season is that the trade will again "run wild" on fancies. These, it is contended, will include all kinds of openwork, ribs, novelty stitches, &c.

Taking American Perfumes.

The scarcity and high prices asked for French perfumes and toilet articles is causing the domestic trade, as well as buyers from foreign countries, including England, to seek out American lines. As a result, the business being done by manufacturers in this country is reported to be unprecedented, one department handling both foreign and domestic lines figuring that the increase during the last two months has been 1,000 per cent. The American houses are showing a willingness to meet the requirements of exporters by putting labels on their goods in the language of the country in which they will be sold, and also using different packing where such is necessary.

Dry Goods Exports Booming.

The demand for American dry goods for export has reached boom proportions, and only the scarcity of spot merchandise and the delays in getting new goods from the mills prevent this branch of the trade from writing orders that would make the "man in the street" rub his eyes. The sales of one house dealing in general dry goods for export frequently exceed $100,000 a day, and one day early this week eighteen foreign buyers appeared before the lunch hour. The demand is said to be general, from a geographical standpoint, and to be especially marked in the case of the West Indies, some of the South and Central American countries—especially Colombia—Scandinavia, Russia, Siberia, Manchuria, and India. Argentina is again buying goods in a limited way, but by the middle of next month conditions there, it is expected, will have improved to such an extent that she will again become a big customer.

Silk Shipments Are Very Slow.

As is the case with other manufacturers who use silks as raw materials, makers of men's neckwear here say that they are being badly hampered in their operations by the slowness with which they are getting merchandise that was ordered a long time ago. One of them, as an example, received on Tuesday a small shipment of tie silks that was due on May 1, and which had been holding him back on certain items in his line all that time. Whatever may be the case of the broad silk men, some of whom are charged with holding back deliveries in order to get better prices, it was said that this was hardly so with the tie silk makers. The goods in the delayed shipments cited, for instance, were ordered at prices averaging about 50 cents a yard under the current values of the same merchandise, yet the shipper made no attempt to hold up the neckwear man for the difference.

COMMODITIES PRICES.

Decline in Those of Foodstuffs a Feature of the Week.

For the first time in a long while Dun's list of minimum wholesale prices this week showed an excess of declines over advances. As more than 50 per cent. of the declines indicated were in foodstuffs, it would appear that official investigations into the cause of the high cost of living are already bearing fruit. Of the 313 articles quoted on this week 60 showed changes from last week's levels. While last week showed 48 advances, this week's list contained but 28. The respective declines were 21 and 32. Declines were pretty general in dairy products and provisions.

The following list gives the minimum wholesale prices quoted on selected standard commodities this week. They are corrected to yesterday, and with them are given comparative prices for last week and the corresponding week a year ago:

Seventeen of the twenty-four revisions in foodstuff prices were downward. In vegetable prices alone there were more advances than declines shown. This was due to the sharp upturns in several varieties of beans, which ranged from 50 cents a hundred pounds on choice red and white kidney stocks to $1 a hundred on choice pea beans and $1.50 on choice mediums. New potatoes also advanced, moving up 50 cents a barrel to $5.50, against $4 at this time last year. Onions, which have declined sharply from the high point reached several weeks ago, were still cheaper. They fell 50 cents a bag to $2, against $2.50 in 1918. The only fresh fruits listed were common and fancy apples, neither of which changed. The only change in the dried fruits was a drop in choice evaporated apples.

Flour held more or less firmly in this market throughout the week. Hams also were steady, but bacon dropped slightly. In the Chicago market for provisions live beef was the only item to show an increase. Live hogs and sheep, as well as mess pork, short ribs and Middle Western lard, were quoted lower. The Brazilian coffees were nominally weaker, but no revisions in teas occurred. A rise in Cochin ginger and declines in cloves, mace and black Singapore pepper accounted for the fluctuations in spices.

Another sign of wariness on the part of wholesalers was the fact that, after a period of almost unbroken advances in hides, the only revision this list showed this week was a decline in No. 1 buffs. The same was pretty true of the leathers, although the changes in them were limited to a rise in No. 1 light belting butts.

Changes in grain prices were evenly divided. Corn, prime timothy hay and long rye straw went up, while oats, rye and malting barley lost ground. Nine of the fourteen changes in drugs, chemicals, dyestuffs and oils were upward, among the features being a rise in refined petroleum in barrels and for wagon delivery. In the naval stores both resin and turpentine continued their remarkable advances. Resin advanced $1.25 a barrel during the week, and turpentine went up nearly 35 cents a gallon. Compared with last year, turpentine is particularly high, and shows a rise of nearly 200 per cent. The metals fluctuations consisted only of a gain in furnace coke for prompt shipment, and lower prices for spelter and lead. In the miscellaneous changes were a drop in tallow and a rise in English vermilion paint.

The feature of the week in the woolen goods end of the textile industry was the opening of a small part of the Spring lines of the leading trade factor at prices showing increases of 40 to 60 per cent. over corresponding prices for the Fall season. Silks were firm generally, and burlaps were higher under the combined influences of short stocks here and exceedingly bullish reports from the primary markets. The cotton goods market, on the other hand, had few advances to boast of, but had a number of declines in unfinished cottons to show.

ACTS FOR INSANE SOLDIERS.

Attorney General Safeguarding Interests of 350 in State Hospitals.

ALBANY, Aug. 8.—There are 350 insane soldiers in the various New York State hospitals, virtually all of whom suffered mental breakdown in France. Attorney General Newton has undertaken to prepare applications to the Supreme Court for the appointment of committees to look after the property and money of the soldier-insane.

It was estimated that at least 1,000 New York soldiers will have been admitted to various insane asylums by the time demobilization is completed. The Attorney General said he would apply promptly for the appointment of committees for each insane soldier to insure the absolute safety of his property.

To Appeal Non-Resident Tax Decision.

ALBANY, Aug. 8.—The decision of Federal Judge Knox that the section of the New York State income tax law levying a tax upon the incomes earned in the State by nonresidents is unconstitutional, will be appealed by Attorney General Newton. Announcement to this effect was made at the Attorney General's office today.

New Willys-Overland Factory.

ELYRIA, Ohio, Aug. 8.—With the announcement today of the purchase of 160 acres on the outskirts of this city, it was learned that the Willys-Overland Company will build at once the largest engine works of its kind in the world. Sleeveless engines and an engine for home lighting plants will be manufactured, it is said, giving employment to 9,000 persons.

WANTS BUSES ON BROADWAY

Business Association Advocates Abolishing Surface Car Lines.

Major Henry G. Opdycke of the Broadway Association said yesterday that a Special Committee on Transportation of the Broadway Association had given considerable time to the investigation of the congested traffic condition on Broadway, and some time ago it was decided that the only way to furnish substantial relief for congestion on Broadway and to provide means for practically quadrupling the traffic was to remove the tracks and substitute a modern low platform bus which would accommodate nearly twice as many passengers as the present Fifth Avenue bus. The type which the committee has particularly in mind is one similar to that used on the Avenue des Italienne in Paris, which is operated at a comparatively low cost, and accommodates as many people as the side-door cars.

Investigation has proved, Major Opdycke added, that the congestion on Broadway, the effect of which has been to discourage automobile use of the street, is caused by the surface car lines, as any accident to the car or vehicle using the street which would hold up the car line, blocks the whole street until the cause of trouble is relieved, whereas a bus could go around the cause of trouble, or, in case the bus became disabled, it could easily be moved to the side of the street.

Industrial Stocks Score Fair Recovery After Secondary Decline—Wheat Prospects Reduced.

A secondary wave of selling forced a number of new low records in the current movement of stocks yesterday, being followed by a substantial recovery among industrial shares, which had suffered the most in the week's decline. Railroad issues were under pressure throughout the day, and at the same time it was noticeable that various miscellaneous stocks which had been more or less neglected in the hurly-burly of Thursday's dealings were offered down without finding ready takers. The product at the close of business was an irregular price list, many industrials being from 1 to 3 points higher than the day before, while rails and some of the inactive specialties were lower. The turnover was in excess of 2,000,000 shares, the trading in the first two hours being exceptionally heavy. Call money was 5 and 5½ per cent., the supply being large, and a sizeable total of time loans was reported put through at 6 per cent., on collateral consisting of railroad and industrial securities.

A survey of the day's dealings as a whole disclosed much indecision among traders over the course of prices in the near future. The market started off well enough and held an appearance of strength for an hour. Then a sudden break developed, which was much similar in character to the one-hour decline which occurred the day after the initial slump in the middle of December, 1916, when the Parliaments of the Central Powers were called together to consider the Kaiser's famous move for peace. There was some precipitate selling, which savored of a drive by the professional trading element, and worked to cause the elimination of insecure accounts that survived Thursday's decline. Around noon the list steadied, the steel, automobile, rubber, tobacco, and equipment issues experiencing a good recovery, which held through the afternoon.

The market community appeared to be thinking more about the address which President Wilson was scheduled to deliver to Congress than anything else. The possibility of some drastic recommendations being made about controlling prices of necessaries was uppermost in the mind of traders. As far as the railway situation was concerned, the Street took comfort in further indications that Congress was not being impelled to radical action along the line of the Brotherhoods' demands. As the week has progressed it has seemed as though the remarkable program of the unions was being studied as much from the point of view of its possible effect in retarding legislation to return the roads to their stockholders as from the angle of a socialistic régime for the railways. The news that striking shopmen were returning to their posts was received with considerable satisfaction. The lack of real rallying power among several of the standard railroad shares betokened, however, an unwillingness of buyers to take the shares while the situation was so clouded.

The Government's crop report bore out expectations previously established on the basis of private estimates. Adverse weather conditions in July cut heavily into Spring wheat prospects, lowering the condition from 80.9 per cent. a month before to 53.9 per cent. There has seldom been so great a depreciation as this reported for the season. However, the worst of the growing and much of the harvesting periods are now past, and the Government experts look for a total wheat crop amounting to 940,000,000 bushels, which will stand second in our history to the 1,025,000,000 bushel yield of 1915. The corn crop condition was cut 27,000,000 bushels from the estimate of early July.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

A Shifting of Interests.

Yesterday's stock market was somewhat of a puzzle to observers in that trading was erratic and there seemed to be a continual shifting of interests throughout the day. Improvement in the trend was in evidence at the opening, and for about an hour thereafter, when there was a sharp break which wiped out most of the gains and was attributed to professional selling. In the break prices quoted on the ticker tape were again far behind the market, and in some instances losses ran to more than a point between sales. Subsequently short covering and a resumption of speculative buying, which was reported in good volume, brought about an upturn and last prices in many instances were as good as the opening figures. But this could not be said of the entire list and it appeared that aside from the professional element those who sold stocks did not come back into the market again, new interests supplying the buying power.

A 2,000,000-Share Day.

Trading on the Stock Exchange yesterday amounted to 2,050,950 shares. This is the third time this year that the turnover has exceeded the 2,000,000 share point. Yesterday's business was the second largest of the year. The record for 1919 is 2,199,235 shares, made on June 3. On July 7 the volume was 2,031,732 shares. The number of issues traded in yesterday was 312, compared with a record of 325 when the bull market was at its height.

President Wilson's Address.

Throughout all of yesterday's trading there was keen interest manifest regarding the recommendations that President Wilson would make to the joint session of Congress in the late afternoon. Word that the address would not be delivered until 4 o'clock was construed as a bit ominous by some traders, and there was undoubtedly a fear in the minds of many that the proposals would be so drastic as to further undermine the market position. Although the address did not begin to come over the ticker until an hour after the close of the market there were eager readers, and the opinion appeared to be general after a hurried survey of a summary of the address that the word conveyed could not be construed as either bullish or bearish.

A Change in Sentiment.

At the close yesterday many of the brokers' letters sent out to customers reiterated the change in sentiment which became manifest before the opening. The belief seemed to be general that the market had touched bottom, and particular attention was called by some houses to the fact that the high-priced stocks had been weak while the low-priced issues had held well in the recent market.

Clerks Work All Night.

One of the results of the wild closing hour on the New York Stock Exchange on Thursday was an all-night session for clerks in a number of brokerage offices. With more than 2,000,000 shares turned over in yesterday's market, Wall Street clerks again worked late into last night straightening out the purchases and sales of brokers on the floor of the Exchange. And these late sessions came at the end of an almost continuous five months of million-share days. The Governors of the Exchange have already declared a number of Saturday holidays to enable brokers to catch up with the transactions on the Big Board, and there has been some discussion in financial circles of the advisability of closing on all of the Saturdays remaining in August as a relief measure.

American Car and Foundry Up.

One of the outstanding features in yesterday's trading session was American Car and Foundry. The stock was in good demand at the opening, sold off to 113 in the second hour break and then gained ground rapidly, closing at 117½, with a net gain for the day of 5 points. Much of the buying was speculative and was based on persistent rumors that when the Directors meet in a few weeks an increase in the dividend rate may be announced. This could not be verified but it gained a wide circulation and brought a considerable following to the stock.

A Recent Favorite's Action.

The action of Chandler Motor shares attracted attention in yesterday's trading because of the recent popularity of this issue. The stock opened off 11 points and on a turnover of only a few hundred shares regained all but a point of that loss before the close. This was taken as an indication of the sensitiveness of some of the issues which have been popular in recent weeks with the speculative element.

Rails Hit New Low.

Many of the railroad stocks sold off to new low levels for the year in yesterday's stock market. The uncertainty surrounding the railroad situation has brought about liquidation in the rails with the following new low records among those established in the railroad group yesterday: Atchison, 88; Atlantic Coast Line, 94¼; Baltimore & Ohio, 41½; Canadian Pacific, 153¼; St. Paul preferred, 61⅝, and Chicago Northwestern, 91.

Lack of Unity.

In discussing the Plumb plan and Government ownership of the railroads, a prominent steel man said yesterday that he felt certain the country at large did not want Government ownership, but he considered that there was a real danger in the lack of unity which was evidenced in the ranks of those who were opposed to Government ownership. Every one, he said, seemed to have a different plan for the return of the railroads, while the fight for Government ownership would be made on one definite line as embodied in the Plumb plan with all the interests aligned on that side behind it.

Food Stocks Irregular.

The food stocks were irregular yesterday, with a number showing declines for the day. The ruling factor in connection with them was the hue and cry which has been raised in connection with profiteering in food products. Traders were inclined to wait for direct news on the food question before dabbling much in the shares of this group. Loose-Wiles was the heaviest loser of the day, the common declining 10 points. Corn Products dropped nearly 3 points.

Unfilled Tonnage.

The unfilled tonnage figures of the United States Steel Corporation for the month of July will be announced today, and it is expected that another large increase will be shown. There was rumors yesterday that the increase would be in the neighborhood of 500,000 tons, and if this figure is approximated the unfilled tonnage on the books of the company will amount to more than 5,000,000 tons. The June figures showed a gain of slightly better than 600,000 tons. Orders have been flowing in freely throughout the steel trade during the last month, and the chief reason for believing that the increase in unfilled tonnage will not be greater than in June is because of the increased operations and the greater shipments which would naturally cut into orders. Steel common was strong yesterday. When the bear raid was made on the market there was apparently an endeavor to send steel below par, but it failed, and the stock rebounded to 103, its high for the day. The excellent conditions in the steel industry do not provide any foundation for repeated attacks on stock market values without firm opposition being encountered.

Demand for Copper Slackens.

The copper market is a bit dull, with no great amount of metal changing hands. Perhaps for this reason the price is soft. While the big producers are holding for 23½ cents, a figure that has prevailed for several days, the smaller producers were reported yesterday to be shading quotations.

Graphophone Co. to Increase Stock.

The Columbia Graphophone Company has called a special meeting of stockholders for Aug. 19 to ratify a plan to increase the capital stock from 150,000 shares of $100 par value to 1,500,000 shares without par value. Present stockholders, when this proposal is carried out, are to receive ten shares of new common stock for each share of old stock now held. It is provided that each ten shares shall have one vote. On and after Sept. 2 present stockholders are asked to surrender their stock to the Franklin Trust Company and receive in exchange temporary certificates in the ratio of ten for one.

United Opens Candy Stock Sale.

The United Retail Stores Corporation announced yesterday that stockholders of record at the close of business on Aug. 19 would have the right to purchase on or before the close of business on Sept. 10 Class A common stock of the U. S. R. Candy Stores, Inc., at $10 a share to the extent of their holdings in shares of United Retail Stores. The Candy Stores Company was formed recently to manufacture and sell candy through a system of chain stores throughout the world.

COPPER EARNINGS SHOW IMPROVEMENT

Reports of the Porphyry Group Better Than for the Preceding Quarter.

THREE HAVE LOWER COSTS

See Stimulation in Foreign Demand and Increase in Domestic Consumption.

The reports of the porphyry group of copper companies—Utah Chino, Ray and Nevada—for the second quarter of this year, which were issued yesterday, show that in the case of the first three mentioned the cost of production is lower than in the first quarter of the year by a substantial amount. Nevada, on the other hand, reports an increase of more than a cent a pound. In each case costs are figured without taking into account allowances for the gold and silver content of the ore.

All four companies show earnings which are highly favorable as compared with the reports for the first quarter of the year. Utah was the only one of the companies which had a surplus available for dividends in the March quarter, the others reporting a net loss after depreciation charges. The earnings for the June quarter while not large show a marked recovery. Chino, for instance, reports net earnings equivalent to 42 cents a share, as compared with a net loss in the preceding quarter. Utah's earnings were the equivalent of $1.63 a share for the June quarter, whereas there was only 29 cents a share in the March quarter.

The report of the Utah Company shows total profits of $2,862,103, as compared with $481,324 in the preceding quarter and $6,493,377 in the June quarter a year ago. For six months the total profits amounted to $3,133,437, or the equivalent of $1.93 a share. The first half of 1918 showed profits of more than $10,000,000, or the equivalent of $6.35 a share. The reduction in the cost per pound was more than 2 cents. In the first quarter of the year the figures were 13.72 cents, and in the June quarter 11.59 cents. The production of copper by Utah in the second quarter amounted to 27,523,600 pounds, whereas in the first quarter the production was 28,971,089 pounds.

The second quarter report by the Chino Copper Company shows total profits of $370,415, or the equivalent of 42 cents a share. In the first quarter there was a net loss of $173,441. The second quarter of 1918 showed $1,918,513 available for dividends, or the equivalent of $2.20 a share. For six months of this year the total profits were $196,974, or the equivalent of 22 cents a share. The first six months of 1918, on the other hand, showed profits of $3,040,767, or $3.49 a share. The cost per pound of producing copper was 14.16, as against 15.03 in the preceding quarter. The total output of copper was 10,541,471 pounds, or about 1,000,000 pounds less than in the first quarter. It is explained in this report that cost figures do not include any charge for Federal taxes.

The net earnings of the Ray Consolidated Copper Company were $316,365 for the second quarter or the equal of about 20 cents a share on the capital stock. In the preceding quarter there was a net loss of $152,298. The June quarter of 1918 showed $2,253,217 available for dividends, or $1.43 a share. For the first six months of this year the earnings are $164,067, or the equivalent of 10 cents a share. The cost of copper produced in the second quarter was 14.64 cents a pound, as compared with 15.15 a pound in the first quarter. Nevada's earnings for the second quarter of $184,778 are the equivalent of 9 cents a share on the capital stock. In the preceding quarter there was a net loss of $111,159. The June quarter of 1918 showed a net income of $2,191,518, or $1.09 a share. For the six months period of this year the earnings available for dividends amount to $73,619, or about 3 cents a share. The cost per pound of copper increased from 16.85 cents in the first quarter to 18.07 cents in the second quarter. Against this, however, there is a higher credit for gold and silver recovered than in the first three months. The report predicts a decided stimulation in foreign demands for copper and a steady increase in domestic consumption.

START MEDICAL CENTRE.

Dr. Henry O. Reik Engaged as Association's Secretary.

The New York Association for Medical Education formed recently by a group of New York physicians, surgeons and medical teachers to establish a clearing house for medical education yesterday announced further plans for the extension of the work. A Bureau of Information and Correspondence will be established immediately at the Academy of Medicine, 17 West Forty-third Street, where reliable data concerning facilities available for teaching purposes will be assembled. Information concerning the details of courses, dates, fees, qualifications demanded, and attendance requirements will be issued by bulletins and letters. A central residence or meeting place will be provided for visiting physicians and surgeons. Those seeking opportunities in clinical, laboratory or field work will be directed to the best teachers and best facilities in the country. Co-operation will be had with the committees in London and Paris which are organizing the medical resources of England and France for the benefit of visitors from America.

"An Executive Secretary has been engaged to devote his entire time to the development of the project," says the statement. "The Executive Committee has selected Dr. Henry O. Reik of Baltimore, recently Lieutenant Colonel in the Medical Corps of the United States Army and Commanding Officer of Base Hospital No. 67, American Expeditionary Forces, formerly associate in ophthalmology and otology, (1900 to 1912,) at the Johns Hopkins University Medical School, and Secretary Treasurer of the International Otological Congress of 1909 to 1912."

A Committee on Education has been selected, whose duty will be "to prepare plans and standards that shall insure a permanent improvement in the character of medical teaching in New York City, to keep themselves informed concerning, and to pass upon the qualifications of teachers and the character of the courses they offer to graduate students of medicine, and to observe and regulate the manner in which engagements are met by those offering courses under the auspices of the association." The statement also emphasizes the necessity of obtaining and properly distributing funds for the various medical institutions.

The officers of the association are: President, Wendell C. Phillips; First Vice President, George David Stewart; Second Vice President, Glentworth R. Butler; Secretary, Haven Emerson; and Treasurer, Arthur F. Chase.

The National Cloak and Suit Company reports net sales Jan. 1 to June 27, 1919, amounting to $17,198,128, as compared with $15,542,476 in the six months ended with June 30, 1918, while profits from operations before provision was made for Federal and State taxes were $979,471, as compared with $660,553 in the corresponding 1918 period. Net profits for the first half of 1919 were $700,507, as compared with $511,497 last year. On July 1, 1919, the company distributed $73,957 to employes under the extra compensation policy adopted March 1. Distributions of this character will be made at the end of each quarter hereafter.

Nickel Quarterly Profits $174,929.

The report of the International Nickel Company for the June quarter of this year shows profits after all charges and taxes of $174,929, or the equivalent, after preferred dividends, of two cents a share on the common stock. The same period of 1918 showed earnings of $1,846,364, or $1.02 a share on the common.

ARGUE FOR FORD AND AGAINST HIM

Four More Lawyers Heard in Summing Up of $1,000,000 Libel Suit.

HIS PHILANTHROPY LAUDED

MOUNT CLEMENS, Mich., Aug. 8.—Arguments closing the $1,000,000 libel suit of Henry Ford against The Chicago Daily Tribune continued today. Neil E. Reid, Judge of Probate of this county, and Attorney John H. Weeks of Mount Clemens addressed the jury on behalf of Mr. Ford, and Attorneys William T. Hosner of Romeo and Horace K. Tenney of Chicago for The Tribune. Other counsel will resume the arguments next Monday.

Mr. Weeks drew a graphic picture of the industrial greatness of Mr. Ford, and of his philanthropies. His enterprises, Attorney Weeks asserted, would support a city of the size of St. Paul, Cincinnati, or Louisville.

"It is this man that The Tribune asks you to stigmatize as an anarchist," declared the speaker. "He is the only anarchist I ever heard of who doubled the wages of his employes. The welfare of his employes is his constant care, the welfare of humanity his hope. If Henry Ford is an anarchist, what a wonderful country this would be if we were all that kind of anarchist."

Mr. Tenney, when he faced the jury, asserted that it was not Henry Ford's private character, but his public character, that the jury had to consider.

"Counsel for Mr. Ford have reiterated that he had a right to express his opinion," said Mr. Tenney. "We admit it, and it is on that right that The Tribune relies."

Mr. Tenney expanded the theme of the "right of fair comment" as a privilege and a duty of newspapers in connection with public men. The alleged libelous editorial, Mr. Tenney argued, was not an isolated attack on Mr. Ford, but an incident of the public controversy in which Mr. Ford bore a prominent part.

Mr. Tenney claimed for The Tribune the same right of comment as that exercised by Mr. Ford in his controversy with Henry B. Joy, President of the Packard Motor Car Company. In this controversy Mr. Joy opposed the pacifism of Mr. Ford and was in reply characterized by Mr. Ford as "an apostle of murder."

Mr. Reid pictured Mr. Ford as a kindly man with a love of birds and trees and his fellow men; one whose life ambition was to leave the world a better and happier place to live in than he found it, yet one who, when his country was at war, devoted every energy and every resource to answer his country's need. It was absurd, he said, to try to outweigh Mr. Ford's established character by distorting the rhetorical flourishes of his published sentiments into the fulminations of an anarchist.

Mr. Hosner said that if Henry Ford had remained in the field where he made so conspicuous a success there would have been no lawsuit. "If," the lawyer went on, "he had attended his own school where American principles are taught to foreigners in his employ, he never would have permitted the propaganda which went broadcast in his name, nor would The Tribune ever have characterized him as an anarchist."

GERMANS FACE COAL FAMINE

Say French Admit That Demand Cannot Be Complied With.

BERLIN, Aug. 7, (Associated Press.)—A commission of employers and workers was appointed at yesterday's coal conference of experts from all parts of Germany to devise means of increasing the production of coal so that Germany will not freeze or starve during the coming Winter. Its first session was held today at the Ministry of Labor.

The only result of yesterday's conference seemed to be the pointing out that the situation is desperate. No concrete steps were decided upon, but the conference was unanimous in its view that the situation must be improved at any price. Although experts made a large number of suggestions, it was recognized that hard work would be one of the best solutions of the problem.

Germany has succeeded in inducing France to admit that supplying her demand for 40,000,000 tons of coal annually was a physical impossibility, but it appears that Germany cannot even hope to have enough to meet the country's most urgent needs. The people have been warned already to prepare for the Winter, and laymen are rapidly being converted to the opinion that the Government should sacrifice some of the national forests, arguing that it would be better to encroach on part of Germany's potential capital than to allow freezing and starvation. The idea, however, does not appear to attract much attention in Government circles.

According to present plans, the first call for coal will come from the railroads. This will assure the transportation of food. Industry will come next so that credit can be created abroad by the production of articles of commerce. The people will next receive coal for heating and cooking. The prospects for the latter class are seemingly slim.

The Imperial Coal Commissioner reports that the production of coal in the Ruhr region has not been improved and is not sufficient for current needs. The President of the Chamber of Commerce declares that only a few industries are now being supplied with coal and that the remainder are attempting to use wood as fuel. Workingmen are employed for fewer hours, and the working capacity of the country's industries is greatly decreased.

COSTA RICA ACCUSES AN AMERICAN CONSUL

Denies That Police Fired on the Consulate—Says He Aided Strikers.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—George C. Hazelton, an attorney, has sent a letter to Senator Lodge, Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate, defending the Government of President Tinoco in Costa Rica and charging Benjamin F. Chase, American Consul at San José, Costa Rica, with pernicious activities against the Costa Rican Government. Mr. Hazelton, in his letter, says:

"On behalf of the Government of Costa Rica, I respectfully submit for your consideration and that of the Committee on Foreign Relations, the following statement showing the true facts bearing upon Senate Resolution 128, of June 21, 1919, 'Requesting the President to inform the Senate whether Benjamin F. Chase, American Consul at San Jose, Costa Rica, was fired upon by its authorities about June 12, 1919,' and duly referred to your committee.

"First, as to that part of the resolution which points an inquiry as to the incident that occurred on June 12 last: About two months ago the school teachers of San Jose went on a strike to enforce a raise in their salaries. The strike was conducted in an orderly manner, but while marching and passing the American Consulate, Consul Benjamin F. Chase called the strikers. Mr. Chase opened the doors of his residence and permitted the strikers to go to the windows of his office, from which place the strikers hurled insulting remarks at the Government and the President of the Republic.

"The strikers became so excited that one of them drew a revolver and from one of the windows of the Consulate shot a police officer, the bullet hitting him in the foot. The police officer fired his pistol, pointed at the ground, to frighten the crowd and to restore order. This strike would have passed unnoticed but for the prominence given to it by the unwarranted interference of the American Consul, as stated. Neither himself nor his premises were fired upon by the police. As soon as this manifestation was over, notwithstanding the course Mr. Chase had taken to shield the strikers, President Tinoco sent his messenger to the residence of Mr. Chase to assure him that the matter would be judicially investigated as soon as the policeman had recovered from his wounds, and that he would immediately look into the matter and take such steps as might be required to correct any wrong on the part of the policeman, if one had been committed.

"The American Consul took advantage of the disorder of the strike and asked the Government of the United States to send a warship to Costa Rica to land marines. The American warship arrived and her Captain consulted with some other American Consuls, with members of the Diplomatic Corps and with many important American residents. As a result, he deemed it not to be necessary to disembark the American marines. The sensational story fabricated by Consul Chase was found to be wholly false, without any foundation in fact, and Mr. Chase failed to create a situation in Costa Rica to cause American intervention.

"Some time ago Consul Chase advised the Department of State that the Government of Mr. Tinoco had made certain threats to him and that he could not count upon the guarantees of that country. This representation was made by Consul Chase with the object of bringing about intervention, so as to satisfy in that manner the wishes of the enemies of the country with whom said Chase is co-operating.

"President Tinoco, when told of this action, asked the Diplomatic Corps to learn from the American Consul the basis of his complaints against the Government and the reasons for his fears, that he should send such a report to the United States Department of State. At the same time the Diplomatic Corps offered to Mr. Chase all kinds of guarantees as to his safety. Mr. Chase, in answer, said that he entertained such fears because one of the Costa Rican Senators had told him that if the American Government would dare to intervene the Costa Ricans would kill the American residents in the country and, he added, that he did not want, nor was he asking, any kind of guarantees from such a Government."

If you are looking for a safe and permanent investment we believe this 7 per cent stock will appeal to you. It is an old established business. The net earnings available for dividends after the Federal tax and all other taxes were paid during the past four years have averaged nearly four times the dividends on the preferred stock outstanding. W. L. Douglas name is known throughout the world. The trade mark is a very valuable asset worth millions of dollars, and is the property of the stockholders. It is one of the most valuable trade marks in the United States.

You would make no mistake to order at once as many shares of this stock as you can afford to buy, price $100.00 per share. If you care for more particulars fill out the coupon and mail at once. Application will be made to have this stock listed upon the stock exchange.

This company owns and operates 106 W. L. Douglas shoe stores located in the large cities. W. L. Douglas shoes are also sold by over 9,000 shoe dealers in the United States.

The past few years our shoes have been more extensively advertised than ever before. Stamping W. L. Douglas name and the retail price on the bottom of the shoes before they leave the factory has saved the wearers millions of dollars, and guarantees them the best shoes in style, comfort and service that can be produced for the price.

A great demand for W. L. Douglas shoes has sprung up in leading countries in Europe and Asia. Our domestic business has increased so that our sales have actually doubled in four years. In 1915 the sales were $8,089,628.41 and in 1918 $16,660,343.46. The past six months' business was at the rate of over $20,000,000 per year.

In common with other great businesses we need additional capital to meet the urgent requirements of increasing domestic and foreign trade. The new conditions of business also demand more capital. The cost of labor and material has nearly doubled so that twice the amount of capital necessary under the old business conditions is now required.

COTTON DEVELOPS SHARPTURNUPWARD

Market Declines at Opening, but Trade Buying in Afternoon Strengthens Prices.

LIVERPOOL ALSO IMPROVES

After a further decline at the opening yesterday, which extended from 33 points for October contracts to 10 points for December, 4 for January, and a three-point advance for March, trade buying, coupled with a demand from Wall Street as well as a sympathetic increase in speculation following the trend of the stock market, served to stiffen prices, future contracts closing steady, with an advance of from 68 to 73 points over the preceding close.

Early declines were attributable to an expected break in the Liverpool market, which gained greater proportions than had been expected, as well as to sales from out of town, which arrived too late for execution in the break on Thursday.

On this early break near contracts suffered most, but the tone of the market improved as soon as the accumulation of out-of-town sales was disposed of. The Liverpool market improved, and when advices showed that that market would probably close better than had been expected, there was enough short selling, as well as substantial trade buying by local interests, to bring about an upturn. This continued until in the early afternoon there was a sharp upturn, when a fair speculative interest developed.

In this movement, prices advanced 80 and 100 points, October contracts selling at high as 31.91; December, 32.10; January, 31.90; March, 31.95, and May, 31.92.

While the demand for contracts continued there was little evidence of the southern selling which has been heavy in recent days.

Caution by the local trade, which did not assume a strong buying position, was a disappointment to some of the speculative element but the trade was apparently not ready to commit itself before knowing just what the President's message might hold for the future of the cotton industry. The foreign exchange situation was also a deterring factor.

Before the close profit taking was sufficient to substantially decrease the big advance of the earlier trading.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

There was an improved market tone on the Consolidated Stock Exchange yesterday, on which prices finished generally better than the final figures of Thursday, despite an early morning drive brought about by free offerings of the railway shares, which for a time threatened general price demoralization. United States Steel common, which at the outset was bid up 2 points to 102¾, later falling to 100¼ and rallying 3 points to 103¼, was the most active trading feature, while Crucible moved up 8¾ points from its early low and Bethlehem Steel B 5¼. Mexican Petroleum rose 6¼ from its early low. Baldwin Locomotive advanced 6¼ from its early low, while American Car and Foundry gained 6½ to a new high record for this movement. United States Rubber was bid up 6¾. United States Food Products in the final hour moved up 3½. United States Industrial Alcohol 5. The copper and tobacco issues were slightly improved over the final figures of the previous day.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 7,517 packages. General trade quiet, and there is a little loss of tone except possibly on very fancy creamery, which rules steady. Creamery, higher than extras, a lb., 55@55½c; extras, 92 score, 54½c; firsts, 88 to 91 score, 52@54c; seconds, 83 to 87 score, 49½@51½c; lower grades, 48@49c; unsalted, higher than extras, 58@58½c; extras, 57@57½c; firsts, 54½@56½c; seconds, 52@54c; State dairy tubs, finest, 53½@54c; good to prime, 50½@53c; common to fair, 46@50c; renovated, firsts, 50@51c; lower grades, 46½@49½c; ladles, current make, firsts, 48@49c; seconds, 46½@47c; lower grades, 45@46c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 46½@47c; No. 2, 46c; lower grades, 43@45½c.

EGGS.—19,337 cases. General conditions unchanged and unsatisfactory. High qualities of eggs continue scarce owing to the general prevalence of hot weather defects. Any stock suitable for the best trade is taken quite promptly at sustained prices, but there is very little such. Bulk of the supply is pressing for sale at extremely irregular, generally weak prices, all reasonable offers being gladly accepted owing to the further deterioration by holding and the scarcity of refrigerator accommodations. Nearby white eggs also very largely more or less defective and pressed for sale at reasonable offers. Very fancy goods not plentiful and the limited trade is reported in these at sustained prices. Fresh gathered, extras, a dozen, 54@55c; extra firsts, 51@53c; firsts, 47@50c; seconds, 43@46c; under grades, 30@42c; dirties No. 1, 39@40c; No. 2 and poorer, 30@38c; checks, good to choice, dry, 34@36c; under grades, 25@33c; refrigerator, special marks, fancy, buyer to assume charges, 50c; firsts, 47@49c; seconds, 44½@46½c; State, Pennsylvania and nearby Western, hennery whites, fine to fancy, 67@70c; fair to prime, 55@66c; gathered whites, common to prime, 50@68c; Pacific Coast whites, 58@68c; other Western and Southern, gathered whites, 45@66c; State, Pennsylvania and nearby, hennery browns, fancy, 58@62c; gathered brown and mixed colors, graded, fancy, 53@57c; fair to prime, 45@52c.

PROPOSALS.

OFFICE OF THE COMMISSIONERS, District of Columbia, August 4, 1919.—Sealed proposals will be received at the office of the Secretary to the Board of Commissioners, Room 509, District Building, until 2 o'clock P. M., August 18, 1919, for furnishing and erecting portable school buildings at the locations within the District of Columbia designated by the Board of Education. Blank forms of proposal, plans, specifications and all necessary information may be obtained from the Chief Clerk, Engineer Department, Room 427, District Building, Washington, D. C. A deposit of five dollars will be required from bidders to insure the return of the plans and specifications. Louis Brownlow, W. Gwynn Gardiner, Charles W. Kutz, Commissioners, D. C.

DISSOLUTION NOTICES.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT THE partnership between Harry Rogovin and George Tonkonogy was dissolved by mutual consent on the 6th day of August, 1919. All debts due to the said partnership and those due by it will be settled with and by the said Harry Rogovin, who has just entered into copartnership with Melvin Feinberg, and will continue the business under the firm name of Rogovin & Feinberg.

CONTRACT NOT YET SIGNED.

Minneapolis & St. Louis Railroad Still at Variance with Government.

The pamphlet report of the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railroad Company for 1918 shows that the company has not yet signed a compensation contract with the Director General of Railroads, the Directors of the road believing that the average net for the three-year period ended with June 30, 1917, does not make provision for additions and betterments which have been made. The standard return for the road is set at $2,639,857. In his remarks to stockholders Charles Hayden, Chairman of the Board, says in part:

"You will recall that under the readjustment plan of Jan. 1, 1916, the stockholders, by a contribution of $20 per share upon their stock, provided the company with $4,500,000 for its corporate purposes. The standard return, as fixed in the Federal Control act, does not allow us a return upon this money.

"In addition, we put into service between July 1, 1917, and Dec. 31, 1917, following the close of the test period, 1,500 freight cars at a total cost of $2,048,070.89, for which the standard return gives us absolutely nothing. During the test period also we bought thirty locomotives, costing $615,951.36. Our position is that when the Government took this road it took this equipment, whose earning power was not fully reflected in the standard return, and therefore the Government should compensate us for it.

"We embodied these claims and other items into a claim for additional compensation, and have presented it to the Director General. So far it has been declined. We do not, however, expect to abandon the claim unless developments in the general situation convince us that it is wise to do so.

"Not having executed a contract with the Government, the Director General can advance us only 90 per cent. of the standard return. During 1918 he advanced a total of $420,000, but from time to time loaned us sufficient funds on demand notes at 6 per cent. to meet necessary cash requirements."

PUBLIC NOTICE.

IN CHANCERY OF NEW JERSEY.

To David Solomon; Louis Solomon and his heirs, devisees and personal representatives; Mrs. Louis Solomon, wife of said Louis Solomon; Henry Solomon and his heirs, devisees and personal representatives; and Mrs. Henry Solomon, wife of said Henry Solomon.

By virtue of an order of the Court of Chancery of New Jersey, made on the day of the date hereof, in a cause wherein Emma Claus, executrix and residuary legatee under the last will and testament of Christian Oruber, deceased, of the City of Jersey City, in the County of Hudson and State of New Jersey, is complainant and you are defendants, you are required to appear, plead, answer and demur to the bill of said complainant, on or before the second day of October, 1919, next, or the said bill will be taken as confessed against you.

The said bill is filed to quiet the title to the following described lands and premises, situated in Jersey City, Hudson County, N. J., viz.: ALL that certain tract or parcel of land and premises, situate, lying and being in the City of Jersey City, in the County of Hudson and State of New Jersey, bounded as follows: Commencing at a point on the easterly side of Brunswick Street distant forty feet northerly from the intersection of the northerly line of South Sixth Street with the easterly line of Brunswick Street and running from thence northerly along the easterly side of Brunswick Street a distance of fifty-eight (58) feet and one inch to the southwesterly side of Newark Avenue or Turnpike Road; thence southeasterly along the southwesterly line of Newark Avenue or Turnpike Road a distance of forty (40) feet; thence a southwesterly course a distance of forty-two (42) feet in a straight line to the place of beginning. Being part of block numbered 247 lying on the westerly side of said Turnpike Road or Newark Avenue, and which lots are more particularly described on a map made by Clerk and Bacot in 1850 of a part of the property of I. B. Coles Estate, lying south of Brooks Street and west of Jersey Avenue as lot No. 33, in block 247. And you, David Solomon, and you, Louis Solomon, and you, Henry Solomon, are each of you made a defendant because you claim or are alleged to claim some right, title and interest in, or encumbrance upon, the said premises, or some part thereof, as one of the sons and one of the heirs, devisees or personal representatives of Sarah Solomon, formerly of the City, County and State of New York, who formerly owned the said premises and conveyed the same to said Christian Gruber by deed dated on or about February 22, 1862, in which deed Isaac Solomon, the husband of Sarah Solomon, did not join; and you, Mrs. Louis Solomon, are made a defendant because you claim or are alleged to claim some right, title and interest in, or encumbrance upon, the said premises, or some part thereof, as the wife of said Louis Solomon; and you, Mrs. Henry Solomon, are made a defendant because you claim or are alleged to claim some right, title and interest in, or encumbrance upon, the said premises, or some part thereof, as the wife of said Henry Solomon; and you, the heirs, devisees and personal representatives of Louis Solomon, are made defendants because the said Louis Solomon was a son of said Sarah Solomon, and you claim or are alleged to claim some right, title and interest in, or encumbrance upon, the said premises, or some part thereof, as one of the heirs, devisees or personal representatives of said Louis Solomon; and you, the heirs, devisees and personal representatives of Henry Solomon, are made defendants because the said Henry Solomon was the son of said Sarah Solomon, and you claim or are alleged to claim some right, title or interest in, or encumbrance upon, the said premises, or some part thereof, as one of the heirs, devisees or personal representatives of said Henry Solomon. The object of said suit is that the said complainant may be decreed to have a perfect title to the said premises, and that you, the said defendants, have no estate, interest in, or encumbrance upon, the said premises or any part thereof.

You are further notified that if you claim any right, title to, interest in, or encumbrance upon said lands, you are required to answer the said bill of complaint, but not otherwise.

Dated, August 2, 1919.

REAL ESTATE FIELD

Operators were active in yesterday's realty market, especially in the Bronx, where several big apartments changed ownership. One of the largest transactions was the resale by the Benenson Realty Company of the St. Regis, at 830 East 163d Street.

The property, which was sold to Samuel Williams, consists of a six-story elevator structure occupying a plot 100 by 106 on the southwest corner of Prospect Avenue. It was held at $250,000 and acquired by the sellers last week from Bernheimer and Schwartz. Goodwin & Goodwin were the brokers.

Another Bronx deal involved the two apartment houses, each occupying a plot 41.8 by 80, on the northeast corner of Longfellow Avenue and Lowell Street. The property was sold by Leitner, Breuer & Starr for M. Silverman, who acquired the property last month in a trade for Concourse lots. The buyer is Morris Leight, an attorney, who will operate in real estate. This is his first purchase. The houses have accommodations for thirty-six families and rent for approximately $15,000.

The estate of Josephine E. Leeds sold the four-story and basement brownstone dwelling, on a lot 22.6 by 100, held at $100,000, at 12 East Fifty-sixth Street, to a client of Alger & Coughlin through Pease & Elliman.

Private Dwellings.

Henry U. Singhi sold the five-story dwelling, on a lot 38 by 133, held at $150,000, at 314 West Seventy-fifth Street, to a client of Brooks & Momad.

John J. Aaron sold the four-story dwelling, on a lot 18 by 102.2, held at $30,000, at 112 East Seventy-sixth Street, to a client of Theodore A. Kavanagh for occupancy.

Mrs. Sidney Ashman bought for occupancy from Lucy A. Trippe a three-story house, 18 by 102.2, at 157 East Seventy-eighth Street.

Alexander MacKenzie sold the four-story high-stoop dwelling, on a lot 18 by 125, at 766 St. Nicholas Avenue, to John J. Glennon through W. D. Morgan.

Grace M. Lichten sold a four-story and basement dwelling, on lot 20 by 102.2, held at $60,000, to a client of Pease & Elliman.

Midtown Deal.

The Merit Realty Corporation sold the old four-story building, on lot 25 by 98.9, at 145 West Twenty-fourth Street, to a client of Oscar D. & Herbert V. Dike and P. A. Finneran.

Apartment House Sale.

Hyman & Oppenheim sold the five-story apartment house, 50 by 80, at 556 and 558 West 185th Street, to a client of Freidus & Co.

Tenement Deals.

James H. Cruikshank resold the five-story double flat, with two stores, on a lot 25 by 95, at 1,555 Lexington Avenue, between Ninety-ninth and 100th Streets, to Sydelle Katz through Samuel Carner.

The Weather.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—Pressure is high over the lake region and moderately low over the Canadian maritime provinces and in the South Atlantic and Gulf States. During the last twenty-four hours showers and thunderstorms have occurred in portions of the North Atlantic States, in the South Atlantic and East Gulf States, and at scattered points in the Rocky Mountain and plateau regions. Temperatures have fallen to below normal over the north portion of the country east of the Mississippi River and are near the seasonal average elsewhere.

The outlook is for generally fair weather Saturday and Sunday over the central and northern portion of the country east of the Mississippi River and for showers and thunderstorms in the South Atlantic and East Gulf States. Temperature changes will be unimportant east of the Mississippi, except that it may become warmer Sunday in the lake region. There are strong indications at the present time of a tropical disturbance over the Eastern Caribbean Sea. It is probable that it will move westward.

Winds off the Atlantic Coast: North of Sandy Hook: Moderate northwest winds, partly cloudy weather; Sandy Hook to Hatteras, moderate northwest to north winds and partly cloudy weather; Hatteras to Florida Straits, moderate variable winds, mostly south to southwest, showers and thunderstorms; East Gulf Coast, gentle variable winds, showers and thunderstorms.

FORECAST, TODAY AND SUNDAY.

New England, New Jersey, Eastern New York, Western Pennsylvania, District of Columbia, Delaware and Maryland—Fair weather Saturday and Sunday.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

6 A. M.	74	80	6 P. M.	74	94
12 M.	84	86	11 P. M.	64	83

This thermometer is 414 feet above the street level. The average temperature yesterday was 76; for the corresponding date last year it was 87; average on the corresponding date for the last thirty-three years, 73. The temperature at 8 A. M. yesterday was 76; at 8 P. M. it was 70. Maximum temperature, 85 degrees at 1:45 P. M.; minimum, 68 degrees at 10 A. M.; humidity, 90 per cent. at 8 A. M.; 52 per cent. at 8 P. M.

The barometer at 8 A. M. yesterday registered 29.78 inches; at 8 P. M. it stood at 29.88 inches.

COSBY SEPARATION SUIT DISMISSED

Court Expresses Hope That Ex-Rough Rider and Wife May Yet Be Reconciled.

FINANCES CAUSED TROUBLE

Mrs. Cosby, Who Brought Action, Alleged That Husband Was Parsimonious and Cruel.

In an opinion giving advice to both husband and wife and expressing the hope that they may yet be reconciled, Supreme Court Justice Giegerich dismissed yesterday a suit for separation by Mrs. Virginia D. Cosby against Captain Arthur F. Cosby, lawyer and Chairman of the Military Training Camps Committee, who as a member of Colonel Roosevelt's "Rough Riders," was wounded at the battle of Santiago. He is a son of the late Admiral Frank C. Cosby of San Francisco.

Mrs. Cosby, who married the defendant in 1904 in Wisconsin, brought her suit in 1917 on the ground of cruelty. When it was first tried in March, 1918, it was adjourned for a year in the hope that the parties would become reconciled. Captain Cosby made a counterclaim for a separation on the ground of cruelty and desertion, but when the trial ended he withdrew his request for a decree in his favor.

Justice Giegerich in his opinion states that the case is a "difficult and distressing one," and it is clear that the parties have been unhappy for the past six years, but he does not believe the plaintiff is free from responsibility, and is, "not convinced that she is not chiefly responsible for the domestic troubles." The court said:

"She was reared in luxury, but after her father's death his estate was lost, so that she has been dependent on the earnings her husband was able to make. No claim is made that he has not been diligent and used every effort to obtain as large an income as possible. The claim is made, however, that he has been hard, cruel, and parsimonious. It is plain from the evidence and from the brief that the troubles generally had their origin in differences arising between the parties as to expenditures, the defendant struggling to live within his means and the plaintiff struggling for larger allowances for living expenses."

The court says that the couple have two children, both girls, one thirteen and the other seven years of age, both of whom were crippled by infantile paralysis in 1916, at which time a third child died of the same disease. Justice Giegerich says he believes Captain Cosby has been right in his attitude as to expenditures and the plaintiff wrong, and says that no marriage can be a success, or at least is put under a "severe strain," if one party wishes to live within the family income and the other to exceed it.

WILL FIGHT NEW YORK TAX.

New Jersey Law Officer Advises Residents of His State Not to Pay.

TRENTON, N. J., Aug. 8.—Attorney General Morgan, in a statement made today, advised residents of New Jersey employed or conducting business in New York, who may be taxed under the New York income tax law, to refuse to pay. If threatened with compulsion, they are asked to notify the Attorney General, who says he will take legal steps in their behalf.

The Attorney General said that Federal Judge John C. Knox's decision in the suit of the Yale & Towne Manufacturing Company of Stamford, Conn., attacking the New York State income tax as applied to non-residents, was along the line of New Jersey's contentions against the imposition of the tax on New Jersey citizens.

He said further that he anticipated that the case would be appealed to the United States Supreme Court, and in that event he, as Attorney General of New Jersey, and ex-United States Attorney General John W. Griggs of Paterson, as special counsel, would participate on New Jersey's behalf.

'FLYING CIRCUS' GOES NORTH

"Wild Goose" Recruiting Triangle Leaves Mineola for Providence.

MINEOLA, L. I., Aug. 8.—Five airplanes of the United States army "Flying Circus" which are flying from Dallas, Texas, to Eastern cities and return, left Hazelhurst field about 1 o'clock this afternoon on the second half of the trip. Their next stop was to be Providence, R. I., whence they were to go to Boston, then to Springfield, Mass., and thence West.

The planes left in V, or "wild goose," formation, led by the plane of Major Jack W. Simmons. This plane is known as "The Rover." The other pilots are Lieutenants Benjamin Adams, Maurice J. Plumb, Ward F. Robertson, and Robert Midkiff. Seven planes started on the flight, but two remained in Washington.

The planes are of the De Haviland type, with Liberty motors. The purpose of the trip is to encourage recruiting. The total distance so far traversed is 3,801 miles, and the total time is 2,518 minutes (forty-one hours and fifty-eight minutes). When the planes get back to Dallas they will have traversed 7,000 miles. Besides the pilot each plane carries a passenger, who throws out literature.

Major Simmons is the officer who fell from one of the planes into New York Bay near Fort Hancock about three weeks ago.

CALDER BOOM IN BROOKLYN.

Senator's Name Suggested for Vice Presidency if Johnson Runs.

There was much discussion in Brooklyn yesterday among the politicians of a reported movement on the part of friends of United States Senator William M. Calder of that borough to boom him for the Republican nomination for Vice President next year. On the assumption that Senator Hiram Johnson would be the leading candidate for the Presidential nomination, Mr. Calder's name was coupled in the talk with that of the Californian.

Some of the friends of Senator Calder seemed disposed to think that Johnson men themselves had inspired the Calder boom report. These were of the belief that if there was anything in it at all, it was a move on the part of the Johnson forces to placate the former supporters of Charles E. Hughes, who resented the treatment he received in California as a Presidential candidate three years ago.

Beef and "Pep"

Beef is the Body Builder.

There are few foods that put such pressure behind human energy.

Nothing is more savory than a cut of fine, juicy beef.

How many ever think of the months and years of effort that have gone into the making of this healthful food.

Producers have given years to improvement of breeds of cattle in order that your piece of beef may be more juicy and tender.

There is no substitute for beef.

Easy of digestion, its life-giving properties promote growth and stimulate appetite.

New vim and vigor are imparted to growing children.

The worker has his labor-worn tissues replaced by beef.

Camel CIGARETTES

Smokers realize that the value is in the cigarettes and do not expect premiums or coupons!

If you want to know what rare and unusual enjoyment Camels provide smoke them in comparison with any cigarette in the world at any price!

CAMELS are a cigarette revelation any way you consider them! Take quality, or refreshing flavor and fragrance; or, that wonderful mellow-mild-smoothness you never before got in a cigarette smoke! Yet Camels are so full bodied and so full-of-satisfaction you marvel that so much delight could be put into a cigarette!

Camels expert blend of choice Turkish and choice Domestic tobaccos makes them so irresistibly appetizing! And, the blend explains why it is possible for you to smoke Camels liberally without tiring your taste! You will prefer Camels to either kind of tobacco smoked straight!

You'll realize pretty quick, too, that among the many reasons you smoke Camels is their freedom from any unpleasant cigaretty aftertaste or unpleasant cigaretty odor!

Once you know Camels you won't take much stock in premiums, coupons or gifts! You'll prefer Camel quality!

B. R. T. STRIKE ENDS; ARBITRATION ACCEPTED; CONGRESS TO RUSH ANTI-PROFITEER LAWS; LABOR WILL TAKE PLUMB PLAN TO WILSON

WILL HEED WILSON'S APPEAL

Senate and House Eager to Curb the Hoarders and Profiteers.

TO ATTACK STORAGE EVILS

But the Proposal to License Corporations Is Opposed as Too Drastic.

SOME FOR FIXING PRICES

Need of Relief Legislation Admitted by All—Committees to Act Quickly.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Leaders in Congress began today to consider legislation to embrace features of Governmental control and regulation of foodstuffs and other necessities, as urged by President Wilson in his address yesterday.

Although it was impossible in the complexity of the situation for leaders of either branch to venture opinions as to what legislative program might be evolved, they seemed to agree that Congress would enact some of the measures advocated by the President. It was pointed out that measures were already under consideration in committees to deal with storage warehouses and other phases of foodstuff handling, while efforts to solve the wheat problem were begun some time ago. The chief end in view is drastic regulation of the stocks handled through packing houses or exchanges, so as to lower the cost of commodities to the consumer.

Congress will soon have before it many bills dealing with articles of necessity. Outside of inquiries by committees, the object of which is to offer corrective measures, many members of the House and the Senate are drafting proposals. Out of the maze of suggestions as to legislation these stand out today:

1—Measures to limit the time in which meat, eggs and other foodstuffs may be left in storage warehouses.

2—Drastic regulations against profiteering, including a penalty for the offense.

3—A system of licensing corporations or individuals engaged in interstate commerce in foodstuffs and other necessaries.

4—Marking of goods destined for interstate commerce with the price at which they left the producers.

All these proposals were put forward by the President in his address yesterday.

Senators and Representatives do not agree as to the practicability of a licensing system in the handling of storage warehouse products. Many Republicans and Democrats regard such a move as striking at the independence of individuals and putting legitimate trade under unreasonable restriction. Those favoring the idea argue that, as the commodities mentioned are public necessities, they should be under regulation as drastic as that relating to common carriers or other public service.

All Favor New Legislation.

Hardly a Senator or Representative can be found who does not agree that some legislation is imperative. Some want to go the limit with the President, while others argue that Congress must not go too far, lest legitimate business interests be injured. All favor curbing profiteers, but many insist that Congress must be careful not to interfere with "reasonable" profit.

The Senate Interstate Commerce Committee will begin on Monday consideration of the measures suggested by the President. Senator Cummins, the Chairman, will appoint a sub-committee to outline the preliminary work. Mr. Cummins today said that the whole problem of the cost of living would be exhaustively considered.

One phase of the committee's early investigation will be as to the hoarding of supplies in warehouses, from which they go into interstate commerce. Directly related to this inquiry is the President's proposal to limit the time that commodities may remain in storage. Some members of the committee favor restricting the time to one year; others would make it a shorter period. Nearly all members of the committee are said to favor some limitation of time.

Senator Watson declared today in favor of limiting the time for holding commodities in warehouses, but opposed the licensing of warehouse owners.

"The licensing system, as applied to those who handle essential commodities, would be an invasion of the rights of individuals in competitive business," he

Wilson to Talk Cost of Living on Coming Tour of the West

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—Reports that President Wilson would take up the high cost of living as well as the Peace Treaty in his addresses on his forthcoming tour to the Pacific Coast were current today. At the White House it was stated that plans for his journey were still going forward. According to one report, the President may start West on Sunday, Aug. 24, if developments at that time seem to make it advisable.

Some of the advisers of Mr. Wilson have indicated that they think his visit to various parts of the country would have a favorable effect on the campaign to bring down living costs. He himself is said to hold that the importance of the economic issue warrants discussion of it almost equally with the vital question of peace.

A few days ago, when the railroad crisis loomed up, it was accepted as a foregone conclusion that the President could not absent himself from Washington for some time. The attitude of Congress toward his recommendations for food control legislation and the railroad situation will be factors in guiding the President as to his departure.

SHOPMEN'S STRIKE SITUATION BETTER

Railroad and Union Officials Expect Tomorrow to Break Its Backbone.

WORKERS IN SOUTH DEFIANT

Heads of Six Shopmen's Organizations Go to Washington to Confer with Government.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—While a number of messages, especially from the Southeastern district, were received today to the effect that the striking railroad shopmen were maintaining a defiant attitude in the face of President Wilson's warning, the Railroad Administration and the national representatives of the railroad workers expressed the view tonight that conditions generally would be much better by Monday and the backbone of the strike situation broken.

Bert M. Jewell, acting President of the Railway Employes Department of the American Federation of Labor, who has been doing everything in his power to get the strikers back to work since President Wilson stated that their demands for increased wages would be considered, but only in the event that the unauthorized strike was ended and full transportation revived, feels that a satisfactory solution of the problem will be found.

"I am convinced," he said today, "that it will be found necessary to comply with the wishes of the majority and remove the only obstacle now in the way to secure what we believe will be a satisfactory settlement. We cannot delay the conference for any length of time because of refusal to go back to work."

Mr. Jewell said also that the laws of the different railway labor organizations supplied the machinery for handling the situation in the case of those who failed to return to their work as requested by the national leaders. He added that reports were being received from a good many points to the effect that the men were returning to their work.

In the meantime the officials of the six organizations of shopmen who are causing the most trouble will come to Washington, probably all of them arriving by Monday, to lend their efforts to the plans for a peaceful settlement of difficulties with the Government. An early conference will be sought with Director General of Railroads Hines, it was said, to go over the situation and make plans for the coming week.

Some of the reports which were received here today were to the effect that the workers were not holding as many mass meetings, and that the question of returning to work or defying the President and the Director General of Railroads was being discussed more generally in the lodges of the railroad organizations. This was accepted as a favorable indication of what may be expected to develop next week.

LEAGUE CONFERENCE BEGINS

Decides, After Reading President's Message, to Seek a Meeting with Him.

ALLEGED LOOTING REVEALED

Secret Evidence Against Railroad Managements Shown—Unions Assailed in the House.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—The railroad brotherhoods and unions backing the Plumb plan for the nationalizing of railroads, together with a group of men described as in sympathy with the scheme, decided late this afternoon to seek a conference with President Wilson at an early date and find out just where the President stands with relation to their proposal. The decision to put the issue squarely before him was reached after an all-day conference during which the conservative and radical elements among the labor men debated just how far it would be possible to go in nationalizing the industries of the nation.

Ever since the passage of the Adamson law in 1916 the brotherhood chiefs have been hopeful that the President stood ready to accept their demands. Stone and Garretson, two of the chief figures in forcing that law through Congress, are among those behind the Plumb plan. It is said they have counted strongly on what they believed to be their influence with the President and, through him, the Democratic Party.

The declaration of the President, in his message yesterday, that the extreme leaders should "act like true Americans," and that strikes would be the most dangerous thing for the country, apparently produced a profound impression in labor's ranks. If the President does not support them in their present plan they may begin concentrating their efforts in other political directions. And so the advocates of the Plumb plan have determined to obtain a decision at once.

The announcement that it is "unavoidable" that a conference shall be held with the President was made in relation to a statement regarding the meeting held today under the name of the National Conference on Railroad Control. Part of this statement, given out tonight, reads:

"While this conference of liberal thought was called before the mind of President Wilson became known on the question of a constructive policy to be pursued toward the present acute state of industrial unrest throughout the country, it falls naturally into line with his desires as since expressed, and is in this sense an interesting example of America's quickness in action.

"President Wilson, in his speech before Congress on Friday afternoon, said:

"'There are many things that ought to be corrected in the relations between capital and labor, in respect of wages and conditions of labor and other things even more far reaching, and I, for one, am ready to go into conference about these matters with any group of my fellow-countrymen who know what they are talking about and are willing to remedy existing conditions by frank counsel rather than by violent contest. No remedy is possible while men are in a temper, and there can be no settlement which does not have as its motive and standard the general interest. Threats and undue insistence upon the interest of a single class make settlement impossible.'

"While no definite action toward that end was taken at the afternoon session of the conference, the question of conferring with President Wilson, in the spirit of this statement, was discussed. It is unavoidable that a meeting with the President will be sought at an early date, when the essential principles of the Plumb plan will be presented and the state of facts outlined which lends such power to the proposal of the Brotherhoods for the nationalization and democratization of the railroads."

There is little doubt that the Plumb plan will play a part in the next Presidential campaign, as hope of its acceptance by Congress at this session practically has been abandoned by the railway men. Plumb has intimated that his followers would try to have the plan inserted as a plank in the platform of the Democratic Party. Stone said a week ago: "It may become a big Presidential issue." Secretary Morrison of the American Federation of Labor told the House Interstate Commerce Committee that labor would use the ballot to obtain success.

Some of the more radical of the rail-

Famine and Disease Now Raging in Petrograd

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 8.—Famine in Petrograd has attained terrifying proportions and an epidemic of dysentery is beginning to rage throughout the city, according to messages received here.

M. Zinovieff, Bolshevist Governor of Petrograd, issued a proclamation to agricultural organizations and the corn producing districts, in which he said the population of the city was receiving famine rations.

Food prices in the Russian capital became fantastic when the rations were reduced recently, the dispatches say, a small lump of sugar costing from 10 to 12 rubles and a pound of white bread selling at 120 rubles.

ARCHDUKE ASKS FOR RECOGNITION

Sends Word to Paris Conference He Will Carry Out Hungarian Armistice Terms.

RUMANIA'S PART DEFENDED

Peace Delegate Says She Has Done World a Service—Martial Law in Budapest.

PARIS, Aug. 9.—The members of the Supreme Council of the Peace Conference had for their consideration today a message from Archduke Joseph, head of the new Hungarian Government, announcing the intention of his régime to execute the terms of the armistice and asking recognition and authorization to send delegates to Paris.

The message received from the Archduke outlines the policy of the new Government and says that it will call a properly selected Constituent Assembly to reorganize labor with a view to increasing production.

While the Supreme Council held no stated meeting today the members of the Council discussed the Hungarian situation informally. The conversations among the members bore more upon the question of Rumania's attitude than upon the status of the new Hungarian Government, as the former phase of the situation is interesting the conferees more than any other.

Dispatches from American relief officers who have been co-operating with British and Italian representatives in Hungary report that Budapest is quiet but that all transportation, including that on the Danube, is being help up. As this involves great danger of famine, the allied officials have appealed for an effort to lift the embargo placed by the Rumanians on supplies, as well as all other embargoes on food transportation and distribution affecting the region.

Defends Rumania's Course.

"We are at a loss to understand why the Allies, and the Americans above all, should criticise Rumania for its action in defeating the Bolsheviki in Hungary," said Nicholas Misu of the Rumanian peace delegation today.

"We feel that we have done the Peace Conference and the entire world a service by giving the Hungarians an opportunity to set up a representative Government. Furthermore, we were forced to march against Budapest in self-defense. Hungary attacked us and the Bolsheviki threatened to overwhelm us from two sides. For tactical reasons we had to advance beyond the armistice lines fixed between us and the Hungarians.

"When other armies refused to move against the Hungarian Bolshevik we moved alone. We shall move our troops from Budapest when the Hungarians have been thoroughly disarmed and no longer threaten our very existence.

"Meantime, we hope the whole world will take pains to learn the truth about the peril which forced us to fight for our lives. We have never left the Peace Conference and shall obey all its orders, but we cannot sign the Austrian treaty if it contains the provisions fro the protection of minorities. We believe it is wrong for the big powers to force such conditions on the small powers. We favored a clause proposed for the League of Nations which would have guaranteed the rights of all persons, regardless of race or religion, and believe that such action should be taken by all the nations acting together and imposed upon all alike, rather than upon a few small powers, by the great powers."

M. Misu said that the Central Powers took 2,000 locomotives from the Rumanians, leaving them only 200, of which 80 were really in good repair. Rumania will probably get back about 1,000 locomotives under the armistice terms it is enforcing against Hungary, M. Misu declared. These are necessary for reconstruction work and the feeding of Rumania.

Rumania's crop is excellent, M. Misu said, and Rumania will be able to ex-

Burlesque and Vaudeville Called Upon to Fill Out Broadway Vacancies.

WINTER GARDEN PICKETED

Holbrook Blinn Resigns with Godspeed—Stage Hands and Musicians Undecided.

Another theatre was closed by the striking actors yesterday, and two houses which had been showing big musical attractions were so crippled by the strike that they played to only a fraction of their accustomed audiences. Inclusive of these two, the number of New York theatres now affected is twelve. Of these, ten are closed tightly.

One or two houses which had expected to reopen yesterday afternoon or last night failed to do so, but it was expected by the managers that three or four of the stricken attractions would resume tomorrow night.

The first move on the part of the managers to draw from the burlesque field to fill their houses will be made tomorrow night, when the Shuberts will present "Peek-a-Boo" at the Central Theatre. This show has been playing for some weeks at the Columbia Theatre, a burlesque house.

Holbrook Blinn, star of "The Challenge," resigned yesterday from the Actors' Equity Association.

"She's a Good Fellow," which had been playing at the Globe Theatre, fell under the hammer of the strikers yesterday afternoon, following a definite statement from Charles B. Dillingham, the producer, that he was a member of the Producing Managers' Association. Mr. Dillingham returned from out of town yesterday morning and, when asked as to his stand by the Actors' Equity Association, sent the following reply:

"Although I have just arrived in town after a month's absence, and am not familiar with the situation, the Actors' Equity Association, by its threat to close my theatre and force actors to break their contracts with me against their will, compels me to take a stand and join with my fellow managers in protesting against any such arbitrary and illegal methods."

Globe Actors Called Out.

Jefferson de Angelis, as delegate for the Actors' Equity, met the company at the stage door before the matinee and formally called out the Equity members. Among those who declined to play were Joseph Santley, Ivy Sawyer, James C. Marlowe, and Scott Welch.

There were fewer circus aspects to the situation at theatre time last night, and both sides seemed to have settled down to the business in hand. The theatres enjoyed the usual Saturday night prosperity in most cases, and the fact that ten houses were closed contributed to the patronage at the others. Picketing was confined largely to the Winter Garden, where actors on the sidewalk informed prospective purchasers that the cast within had been depleted.

An automobile bus loaded with actors and bearing a banner announcing "Lightnin' Has Struck," careened through Forty-second Street to the great delight of the assembled actors.

There was a difference of opinion as to the possible action to be taken by the stagehands and musicians. The Equity officials said that they had received assurances that they would go out tomorrow, but the managers insisted that they had announced that they would remain loyal to their side.

William A. Brady challenged Francis Wilson to a public debate, to be held in the Metropolitan Opera House, but Mr. Wilson did not reply to the challenge.

Doubt existed until curtain time at the Selwyn Theatre last night as to whether Jessie Glendinning, an Equity member, would go on as usual in the leading feminine rôle of "The Challenge," but Miss Glendinning finally played.

One prominent manager, not affiliated with the Managers' Producing Association, said that with the reopening of all the shows during the coming week, as now seems certain, the striking actors would become panic-stricken and flock back to their jobs. He likened the situation to a play, and said that the actors were still enjoying the thrills of the third act climax, but said that when this was once past, and the steady business of striking began, then the ranks would break.

1. A count of the B. R. T. employes in the classification affected by the strike to ascertain whether 50 per cent. belong to the Amalgamated Association, the result to form the basis of future dealings between Receiver Garrison and his employes.

2. Receiver Garrison is to receive a committee of employes to present the grievances of the strikers.

3. In case of failure of the Receiver and the committee to reach an agreement, a board of arbitration is to be called into being.

4. All parties agree to abide by the decision of the Board of Arbitration.

REDS PLOTTING BIG STRIKE

German Government Warns of Move to Tie Up Railroad Traffic Sept. 1.

BERLIN, Aug. 9, (Associated Press.)—Fifty persons were killed in disturbances yesterday near Chemnitz, Saxony.

Troops were overpowered and disarmed by a mob. The soldiers' horses were slaughtered and the flesh was distributed to the crowd.

Many wounded persons are in the Chemnitz Hospital. Additional troops are being sent to quiet the disorders.

The riots are due to the shortage of food. Spartacide agitators persuaded a mob to storm the railway station. The mob dispersed the Government troops sent against it and then stormed the prison and released several Communists.

Telegrams have been sent to Dresden, the capital, demanding the lifting of martial law, the withdrawal of the troops and better food.

The Government announces the discovery of an extensive secret strike movement, which, if successful, will lead to a general railroad strike in Central, and perhaps all, of Germany on Sept. 1. Spartacide and Communist agitators are charged with being the leaders of the movement, which the Government is using every means to suppress.

"The discovery was made just when Germany believed itself quieting down, while the rest of the world rioted and struck," the official statement says. "The object of the Communist strike leaders is to appropriate power, the first necessity of which is the stoppage of transportation to prevent the distribution of food and coal.

"The movement, which is already widespread, began at Erfurt, where a huge meeting controlled by Communists was held last night, the strike being decided upon. This action is not understandable, because the Government has not only carried out promises made at the time the last railroad dispute was settled, but has introduced other reforms."

The Government says that the strike is being forced against the wishes of a majority of the railroad men. It charges Herr Manne Secretary of the railroad men at Erfurt, with being the head of the movement. The statement says he participated in conferences with Gustav Adolf Bauer, then Minister of Labor, on June 20, and agreed that there should be no strike when the promotion of certain officials was promised. Yet, the Government charges, he began immediately a secret campaign to bring about the strike.

Economic Minister Schmidt conferred yesterday with German industrial leaders for the purpose of determining whether Radical Independent newspapers have any justification for their repeated charges that employers are engaged in so-called sabotage—shutting down plants arbitrarily to keep workmen from their jobs or punishing strikers' representatives.

Men from every large industry were unanimous in making the statement that such practices were not going on. They said that their plants have been frequently kept running at a loss to enable workers to earn a living.

The Minister, with the advice of the plant owners, framed a series of questions which will be submitted to all employers of labor in Germany and which will aim, among other things, to elicit the facts, said if the charge is proved, what counter measures are desirable.

A Weimar dispatch announces that a representative of the Government told the National Assembly today that the expenditures of the soldiers' and workers' councilliors amounted to at least 100,000,000 marks. Most of this sum was used for personal expenses, but amounts utilized for party purposes were included in the total.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Advices received here from Copenhagen under Friday's date say that a large number of workmen at Chemnitz have gone on strike, marching to the Koenigsplats and demanding the raising of the state of siege. The food depot was stormed, the dispatches say, and the demonstrators attacked the railway station, which is reported to be in their hands.

200 CARS OF FOOD FOR THIS STATE

Army Allots That Quota to New York—May Be Increased Later.

MAIL ORDERS OPEN AUG. 18

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—The State of New York is to be allotted at least 200 carloads, or approximately 6,000,000 pounds, of the surplus army foodstuffs now in storage at Schenectady and other points in the State, the War Department announced today following a conference of State and army officials. The request made by the State that all of the surplus foodstuffs stored in New York be turned over to the municipalities of that State was refused, as part of it has been allotted to New Jersey, Connecticut, and other sections.

New York's hope of obtaining more than the 200 carloads rests on the attitude of the other States involved toward purchases. If the other States fail to take their full quota then this additional supply may go to New York. This State also may obtain considerable supplies from shipments held at army posts in other States, but the total has not been estimated.

In order to obtain the full quota of New York State for direct sale by various municipalities application must be made by Aug. 15, as the arrangements to sell surplus foodstuffs to the people by parcel post will become effective on Aug. 18. These applications should be sent to the surplus property officer in New York City or Schenectady. If the orders sent by State and municipal authorities cover all foods on hand they will be filled and no sales will then be made by parcel post in New York.

Arrange Details at Conference.

The details were gone over today at a conference attended by Dr. E. S. Porter, State Commissioner of Foods and Markets for New York; Frederick E. Foster, Secretary of that department, and C. E. Morse, First Assistant Director of Sales for the War Department. It was announced that a conference would be held in New York on Monday, when Dr. Porter will take up with the city authorities the part of the foodstuffs allotted to New York State which will be distributed in New York City.

Governor Smith of New York sent Dr. Porter and Mr. Foster to Washington as a result of the meeting of the Mayors of sixty municipalities in New York State held on July 30. The purpose of the latter meeting was to determine means by which the surplus of army foodstuffs could be obtained by municipalities which were hampered by charter restrictions. The Government will be liberal in this connection, and if necessary will permit municipalities to buy foodstuffs on the condition that they can return any part which is unsold after a lapse of sixty days.

After today's conference Director of Sales Morse wrote this letter to Dr. Porter as a memorandum to confirm statements made verbally:

Confirming our conversation this morning, all municipalities of the State of New York are privileged to buy all surplus subsistence that is allotted to the State of New York under conditions as outlined in publicity statement of Aug. 2, a copy of which is attached, and revised price list as of Aug. 8, copy of which is attached. You are privileged to distribute the entire State quota of food, provided your orders are received at either Schenectady or New York City prior to orders received from parcel post sales.

Surplus property officers at both Schenectady and New York City will have price lists and instructions to distribute such surplus as is located at each of the above points.

We would ask that you advise us how much surplus is to be taken by the municipalities not later than Aug. 15, so that we can give proper report to the Post Office Department.

Information will be forwarded to

GARRISON TO MEET UNION

Refuses "Recognition" But Will Deal With Its Representatives.

TO PRESENT GRIEVANCES

Leaders of Employes Must Also Show How Many Belong to Amalgamated.

MUST ABIDE BY DECISIONS

An agreement providing that the striking employes of the B. R. T. return to work immediately was reached last night in accordance with a plan suggested by Public Service Commissioner Lewis Nixon at a conference in the chambers of Judge Mayer, attended by representatives of the strikers, Receiver Lindley M. Garrison, the Public Service Commissioners and city officials.

A meeting of the strikers was called to take place late at night at the Labor Lyceum in Brooklyn for the purpose of ratifying the agreement, so that normal service may be resumed on all lines this morning. Receiver Garrison did not recede from his refusal to recognize the Amalgamated Association, but agreed to treat with a committee of their members, regarding them as a committee of B. R. T. employes.

After listening to speeches by Louis Fridiger, counsel for the Union, and President Shay, the strikers voted unanimously early this morning to ratify the agreement and to return to work.

Superintendent of Surface Operation Siebert of the B. R. T. said at midnight that a few additional cars would be placed in operation on the surface, subway and elevated lines between that time and 5 o'clock this morning, and that at 5 o'clock it was expected the service on all lines would again be normal. The first trolley car to be sent out in Brooklyn without police guard left the Flatbush barns at 11:10 o'clock.

The agreement contains four conditions, of which the first is an actual investigation to ascertain how many employes of the B. R. T. were members of the Amalgamated Association on Aug. 4, when the strike was called, and how many are members now. Receiver Garrison has refused to deal with this group on the ground that they are controlled by outsiders and that they represent only a small minority of the employes in the classes which are striking. The union leaders, on the other hand, insist that 90 per cent. of the surface car employes and of the elevated and subway guards belong to the organization.

"Recognition" Not Official.

Receiver Garrison has previously been dealing with committees of the motormen on the subway and elevated lines who belong to the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. He has dealth with them as employes of the company, not as representatives of the Brotherhood, and while he has not "recognized" in an official sense, the Brotherhood has been satisfied that they have recognition for practical purposes. This precedent furnishes the plan on which the Receiver is to deal with members of the Amalgamated Association.

The following is the text of the agreement signed at the conference:

"At a conference with Judge Mayer on Aug. 9, 1919, the following is herewith agreed:

That the pending strike be called off at once and the men return to work at once upon the following conditions:

(1) That if it is established to the satisfaction of Judge Mayer and Public Service Commissioner Nixon that at midnight, Aug. 8, 1919, employes of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit system eligible to membership in the Amalgamated Association were enrolled members of said association to the extent of over 50 per cent. of such employes, so eligible, then the Receiver will entertain the grievances presented by the committee headed by Mr. E. D. Smith or such substitutes for such committeemen as may be properly substituted in place thereof, according such committee at least the same recognition as is now accorded the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

(2) The receiver will receive the committee presenting the grievances and take the same up with such committee and with such advisers or counsel as such committee selects.

(3) In the event that such grievances, or any which may hereafter arise cannot be adjusted by and between the receiver and the committee, they will be arbitrated by a board to consist of P. J. Shea or his nominee, and Lindley M. Garrison or his nominee, and if necessary a third member to be mutually agreed upon by said Shea and said Garrison, and in the event of said Shea and Garrison being unable to agree upon a third member, and so stating to Mayor Hylan and Commissioner Nixon, the two gentlemen last named shall thereupon designate the third arbitrator.

(4) All parties agree to abide by the decision of the said arbitrators.

The agreement was signed and witnessed by the following: Julius M. Mayer, Lindley M. Garrison, John F. Hylan, Corporation Counsel Burr, P. J. Shea, and Louis Fridiger.

Mr. Fridiger said that the agreement had to be ratified by the men, but that he was positive that it would be acceptable to them and that they would vote in favor of it without delay.

After the agreement had been reached, Mayor Hylan made the following statement:

"I am always glad to do my little bit for the public. The shutting down of the B. R. T. system was a great hardship to thousands of Brooklyn residents and others, and it was quite apparent that the service would have to be restored immediately. I am glad to have been of some service in bringing about a mutual understanding."

Calls It Union Victory.

P. J. Shea, Vice President of the Amalgamated Association, and leader of the strike, said last night on his arrival in Brooklyn:

"It is a wonderful victory. We have gained every point we have been fighting for. I am thankful to Mayor Hylan and Public Service Commissioner for the part they took in bringing about a settlement. The men themselves are to be congratulated on their wonderful spirit and courage."

Colonel Timothy S. Williams, President of the B. R. T., and Frederick P. Royce, General Manager of the transit lines, returned to the offices of the company after the meeting in Manhattan but would make no statement. "The agreement speaks for itself" was all they would say.

"It's up to the men themselves now as to when the operation of the cars will be resumed," said one of the officials late last night. "We are ready to start the cars and as soon as the men report for work the cars will be started."

Superintendents at the various barns were notified that the strike had been settled and preparations were soon under way for getting the cars on the roads. It was not expected, however, that the men would take out the cars until early this morning.

Public Service Commissioner Nixon, who was accepted on Friday as a mediator by Receiver Garrison and representatives of the strikers, arranged with Federal Judge Mayer, who has jurisdiction over the B. R. T. receivership, yesterday, for a conference of all parties interested. The meeting was called to order by Judge Mayer in his chambers at the Woolworth Building.

Contradictory Versions.

There was a flat contradiction in the statements of Receiver Lindley M. Garrison and Police Commissioner Enright as to the quality of police protection afforded. Mr. Garrison asserted that it had been impossible to operate the surface lines since Wednesday afternoon because mobs of strikers, generally unopposed by the police, attacked the cars and dragged off or beat up the crews as fast as the cars left the barns.

The Police Commissioner asserted that there had been no more disorderly conduct in Brooklyn than in normal times. He asserted, amid laughter, that people in Brooklyn were always attacking employes of the B. R. T. on surface cars for one cause or another and that such attacks had shown little or no increase during the strike. He quoted reports from his subordinates purporting to show that Receiver Garrison's accounts of violence had been so vague as to make it impossible to verify them. Commissioner Enright read a letter which he had sent to Inspectors ordering that any policeman who failed to act efficiently should be put on trial.

Receiver Garrison asked the date of this letter. On learning that it was sent yesterday, he said:

"I will admit that real police work was done today."

In his review of the strike, however, at the request of Judge Mayer, Mr. Garrison charged weakness and ineffectiveness on the part of the police, and was reciting instances by the score of alleged violence and failures by the police when Mayor Hylan threatened to leave the room if the receiver continued in this vein, instead of addressing himself to the solution of the strike.

Denying that he had made himself inaccessible to the men, Receiver Garrison asserted that, since the controversy last March, he had received every person who had come to his office with a grievance, either individually or for his department, and he said that every grievance, individual or group, had been satisfactorily adjusted up to last week, when the present strikers, who had never suggested previously that they had any grievance, left their ultimatum at his office when he was out of town one day before the strike. After a long catalogue of violence by the strikers and alleged inefficiency by the police, he continued:

Garrison's Statement.

"The effect of this upon the men was that they would not go out until they were assured that the streets of Brooklyn were peaceable, and that the lives of the men would be safe in going out. That was the situation throughout Saturday.

"On Friday I was away all the afternoon at a hearing of the Public Service Commission, and could not give my personal attention to the situation, but I am advised by reports that the situation was largely the same, except that the strikers by now had adopted the method of going to the men's homes and terrorizing their wives and telling them that if they permitted their husbands to go to work that they would never see them again; that they would be killed, and the like of that, and many of them that did go on previous days were held back by their women folks, terrorized by these men who have been able up to now to keep Brooklyn in a state of terror.

"The situation with the receiver is simply this: I am entirely willing and will remain entirely willing to take up with the men employed by the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company any grievance or any question of any kind, sort, or description that they have in the utmost spirit of fairness, equity and justice, to settle the thing along right lines. I have not been willing and I will not be willing, as far as I am concerned, to allow any outside organization to come to me and say to me, 'You have got to deal with us concerning the working conditions of your men which you employ in your system, and if you don't do that we will create such a reign of terror that you will have to do it.'

"It seems to me the whole question can be put in a nutshell in this case as: Whether or not you are willing to concede the right to an organization, street car company or any other kind of industry that is trying to carry on a peaceful vocation to deal with its own people or not, or whether they are going to have to deal with somebody who intrudes himself in between this company and the company's employes, and whether or not we have got a right to pursue our peaceful vocation in peace and not by violence be compelled to yield to what it would otherwise be utterly improper to ask us to yield to."

Hylan Interrupts.

Here Mayor Hylan asked to be heard and said:

"It seems to me, Judge Mayer, that this is an attack by Mr. Garrison on the Administration rather than an endeavor to try to settle the strike. If we are here for the purpose of trying to settle the strike, let us find out what the grievances of the men are, and see if it is not possible to bring Mr. Garrison and the men together."

Judge Mayer than called on Louis Fridiger, counsel for the strikers, who told the history of the strike at length from the strikers' point of view. He admitted that the men had been organized by himself and P. J. Shea, representing the Amalgamated Association, described as "outsiders" by Mr. Garrison. But he asserted that the "outsider" had come in at the request of the rank and file of the B. R. T. workers, and that the strike was the spontaneous action of the B. R. T. men, not inspired by the "outsiders" but rather held in check for them.

Mr. Fridiger asserted that the representatives of the Amalgamated Association had not bargained for a strike or any immediate action by the men. He said that they looked for a gradual period of organization, but that the grievances of the men, particularly low pay, were so strong that the men turned out in overwhelming numbers at the first meeting and unanimously demanded a strike, when their appeal for recognition was turned down. He said that Vice President Shea sought to check headlong action on their part, and even threatened to withdraw from their counsels if they persisted in their first plan to strike at 11 o'clock on Tuesday night. Mr. Shea, he said, reluctantly consented to the strike at 5 o'clock the next morning, when the men would not listen to suggestions of a further postponement.

Mr. Fridiger did not support statements by the police that there had been no violence, but he insisted that the usual victims of violence were the strikers. He said that strikers had been carried into their meetings in a terrible state from the beatings which had been inflicted upon them.

Garrison Denies Recognition.

He assailed Receiver Garrison for inconsistency in recognizing the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, although asserting that he would recognize no union composed of only a part of his employes. The receiver asserted that he had not recognized them. He said that he had a contract with the motormen on the elevated and subway lines of the company, but that it contained no reference to the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and that they were in no way recognized.

Mr. Fridiger then read from the recent letter of President Wilson to Railroad Administrator Hines, urging the return to work of striking shopmen, and saying that the Government could not deal with these men except through the duly authorized representatives of the organizations of the men. He asserted that Mr. Garrison's stand was just the opposite of that taken by the President, the receiver refusing to receive duly accredited representatives of the men, while President Wilson would deal with none other.

This argument interested Mayor Hylan, who picked up the newspaper clipping read by Mr. Fridiger. The Mayor read it aloud twice, and said that it struck him that the letter contained the doctrine applicable to the case.

"There is a great difference," said Mr. Garrison. "The Government had a contract with the organization to which these men belonged. They repudiated their contract and struck. The President, quote properly, holds that the Government can only deal with the men who made the contracts. Now we have no contracts with these men.

"We have contracts with various groups of our men, and we deal with the committees who make the contracts for them. In this case we had no contract with them. We are ready to deal with them, but not with outsiders, with whom we have no contract or other relation."

Charges Provocation.

Asserting that he and Mr. Shea had advised the men against violence, Mr. Fridiger asserted that B. R. T. cars had been deliberately sent out where large groups of men had gathered for the purpose of provoking them to acts of violence, which the Receiver could point to, for the purpose of estranging public sympathy for the strikers. Judge Mayer said that he would not listen to any such charges against Mr. Garrison. The counsel for the strikers argued vehemently that he was as much entitled to draw inferences regarding Mr. Garrison as the Receiver had been to cast reflections on the good faith of the Mayor and police authorities regarding the manner in which the strike had been conducted.

When Mr. Fridiger closed Public Service Commissioner Nixon unfolded his proposal for arbitration. Mr. Fridiger said that he stood ready to arbitrate all questions except recognition of the union and an increase of at least a few cents in pay.

"We have to have the increase of a few cents to go back to the men with," he said. "Agree to pay 55 cents an hour and recognize us, and we will arbitrate the difference between 55 cents and 75 cents an hour, the eight-hour day, and all other matters."

"Now, why not arbitrate everything if you get recognition?" asked the Mayor.

"At your request we will," said Mr. Fridiger. "We arbitrate all other questions."

"Then I understand that the strikers are ready to arbitrate everything except recognition?" said the Mayor.

"Yes," said Mr. Fridiger.

"So am I," said Mr. Garrison. "I am prepared to arbitrate all questions except that of recognition."

"Well, now," said the Mayor, "I was addressing the representative of the men in order to get a little light on the question."

At this point Judge Mayer asked the Mayor, Receiver Garrison, Corporation Counsel Burr, and Public Service Commissioner Nixon to confer with him in his chambers.

2,000 STRIKERS CHEER NEWS OF AGREEMENT

At 8:45 last night 2,000 strikers gathered in the Brooklyn Labor Temple cheered wildly when Edwin Smith, Chairman of the Brooklyn local of the union, announced that he had had a telephone call from Louis Fridiger, counsel of the union, informing him that at a conference held at the office of the Public Service Commission, the strike had been settled on terms favorable to the men.

More than 1,000 strikers could not gain admission to the hall during the early part of the evening, so they were hurried off in motor trucks to continue their picketing duty. Smith's comments upon the settlement was extremely brief. They were summed up in the statement that the "strike would have been settled long ago if Garrison had met us half way."

After the announcement had been made trucks were sent out to inform the men on picket duty of the decision and to round them up to go back to work at the earliest possible moment. Those in the hall remained to receive the formal announcement of the settlement from P. J. Shea and Louis Fridiger, and to ratify it.

When Colonel Timothy S. Williams, President of the B. R. T., and Frederick P. Royce, General Manager of the Rapid Transit system, arrived at the B. R. T. offices last night they refused to be interviewed, but later issued a formal statement to the effect that no further announcement would be made last night. They said that Judge Mayer's statement to the newspaper men fully covered the situation. Operation of the roads, it was announced, would be resumed as soon as the men could be got back to work, but no prediction was made as to how soon that would be.

"FLYING SQUADRON" ARRESTED EN MASSE

Thirty-seven Men and Two Women Taken from Motor Truck.

Shortly before the strike was called off last night the self-styled "Flying Squadron" of strikers that had been riding along the street car lines in a motor truck seeking to prevent loyal motormen from taking out the cars was arrested en masse by the police while it was "working" on a car at Fifty-eighth Street and Third Avenue, Brooklyn.

The squadron included thirty-seven men, and two women who had been employed by the B. R. T. as conductorettes, and all were taken to the Fourth Avenue Police Station on a charge of disorderly conduct. They will have a hearing in the Fifth Avenue Police Court this morning. The women told the police they were May McKenna, of 12 Emerson Place, and Elizabeth Fitzgerald of 584 Pacific Street.

On the side of the motor truck was a large sign reading: "How Long Can the B. R. T. and Garrison Hold Out Against the Army of Liberty?" A "flying squadron" of police surrounded the truck on its way to the station and none of the strikers was able to escape.

TELL OF TERRORISM IN BROOKLYN STRIKE

POLICE GAVE LITTLE AID

One Patrolman Accused of Refusal to Protect Crew—Families of Loyal Men Threatened.

Word that Federal Judge Mayer would begin a conference on the strike situation yesterday brought to a summary close the taking of testimony by employes of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company by Public Service Commissioner Lewis Nixon. It was expected that representatives of the Amalgamated Association would accept the invitation of Mr. Nixon to act as arbitrator and appear at the hearing, but the union officials could not get together in time to appear.

Louis Fridiger, counsel for the union, with several of the union men, called later and had a conference with Mr. Nixon. The talk was behind closed doors. After the men emerged they were asked what had taken place, and Mr. Nixon replied that the outlook was encouraging. He would add nothing to this statement. It was said that it was thought wiser to take no definite action until after the conference before Judge Mayer was ended.

During the hearing before Mr. Nixon a number of witnesses told tales of how they had been "man-handled" by strikers and their sympathisers, and then the hearing was adjourned until tomorrow morning, when more testimony will be taken unless Judge Mayer's efforts to settle the strike are successful in the meantime.

No Union Witnesses Appear.

At the close of the hearing on Friday Mr. Nixon had invited representatives of the union to appear before him and tell their side of the story of the strike and make use of him as a mediator if they cared to do so. None of the union men had appeared up to noon, when it became known that Judge Mayer was hurrying here to take charge of the situation so far as the B. R. T. Company is concerned. Then the reason for their absence became apparent.

Employes of the company who came before the commission told stories of hard experiences in attempting to keep the cars in operation. Their testimony was similar to that given by other employes, and all of it ran along the lines of assault on loyal workers and property with a vein of complaint against the alleged coldness and apathy of the police.

William Gardner, a conductor, related several occurrences to show that the police were indifferent. Gardner is not a member of the Amalgamated Association. He has been a conductor for twenty years, he said, and knew his business as well as anybody. On Aug. 8, he stated, he was serving on a car which left the East New York barns in the morning, and which had journeyed as far as Richmond Hill Avenue when strikers appeared in large numbers. Many of these were on a motor van, which was stopped on the tracks. Two policemen were on the car, the witness said, and the one who had been riding with him on the rear platform left him and went forward, leaving him to face the mob. The strikers, he said, pulled the pole from the cable and he shouted for the police, but there was no response. After a bit a mounted policeman rode up and dispersed the mob. Then Gardner said he tried to replace the pole, but the car would not start, and then he learned that two fuses had been taken away by the strikers. Finally he improvised fuses from scrap metal and got the car going again.

Conductor Runs a Gantlet.

In reply to a question Gardner said that he had been assaulted at Broadway and Willoughby Avenue on the morning of the strike, and that for a long distance his car traveled through a rain of broken glass, bits of concrete, and other missiles. He had been injured in the leg. Asked what the feeling among the employes of the company was the witness said that many of the old men were willing to work if they could be protected, but that the general impression was that handling a car under present conditions was too hazardous.

Practically all of the witnesses on both days of the inquiry stated that strikers had followed them to their homes, had frightened their wives by threatening to injure the workers, and had created such a panicky feeling in the homes that the women folks had coaxed the men not to attempt to work. One of the witnesses said:

"The way the neighbors treat us you would think we were murderers."

Mrs. Harry Bents and Mrs. George Heineman, testified that their husbands were employed by the B. R. T. Company, and that yesterday strikers had visited them at their homes and told them their husbands would be injured if they did not stop working. The women were warned to keep their husbands at home. Mrs. Bents added that those who had called upon her threatened to "get her" if her husband continued to work. So she persuaded her husband to stop, and he left the East New York depot, where he had been employed.

Policeman Directly Accused.

Direct testimony against a policeman was given by Henry Pignalis, an inspector on the Greene and Gates Avenue line, who said that on Thursday he was riding on a car with three policemen; that the car was stopped at Fulton Street and St. James Place by a crowd of strikers who pulled out the fuse. He stated that the policemen did not interfere with the strikers, and that when the reserves arrived one policeman said:

"Why the hell should we take care of scabs?"

Assistant Corporation Counsel John P. O'Brien asked:

"What was the number of the policeman?"

The witness searched through his pockets and then pulled out a paper from which he gave the policeman's number as 2305.

Another witness came to the stand with a badly swollen jaw. He said he was Patrick Kiernan, a conductor, and that while he was trying to replace a trolley pole which the strikers had pulled off the cable a striker struck him in the face. He testified that there were three policemen on the car but that none of them made any effort to protect him. In reply to a question by Commissioner Nixon the witness said that the policeman assigned to the rear platform was inside the car. He also said that the assault had occurred on Thursday afternoon and he stated that neither policeman paid any attention to him. Asked if the policeman inside the car made any effort to arrest the man who had struck him the witness replied with emphasis:

"Sure he didn't. He didn't even come out of the car to the platform and there was no disorder in the car at the time, because he was the only one who was in there."

MAYOR FINDS NO DISORDER.

Tells Enright After a Personal Tour That Police Are Doing Their Duty.

In a letter to Police Commissioner Enright, the Mayor told yesterday the results of a personal inspection he made in Brooklyn on Friday night. In his letter he said:

"Last night, about 9 P. M., I made a visit to two of the largest car barns of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, the first located at Halsey Street and Broadway, the second known as the East New York car depot, located at Alabama and Jamaica Avenues. My visit was unannounced, and I was not accompanied by any member of your department. At both of these places there was a large number of policemen present and ready to respond to any duty that they might be called upon to perform.

"At the Halsey Street depot there was no crowd and no disorder whatsoever. I met a Mr. Hackett, who stated that he was in charge of the depot, representing the railway company. In answer to my inquiry as to whether or not there were a sufficient number of policemen on hand to handle the strike situation he responded that they had plenty of policemen. He also stated that there had been no disorder, and that he had no complaint against any member of the department, except in one instance where an employe reported that an officer had failed to afford him proper protection. This was reported to Captain David H. Kane, in charge of this depot, who preferred charges against the officer. I then instructed Mr. Hackett to notify the captain, the Police Commissioner and myself immediately when it was brought to his attention that any member of the department failed to perform his duty in connection with the strike. I also asked him why they were not operating cars from that depot, and he stated that they had no men, but expected to have five crews ready for service in the morning.

"At the East New York depot I found there was also a large number of policemen present and ready for any duty that they might be called upon to perform. There was no crowd present and absolutely no disorder. I talked with Mr. Jones, who was in charge of this depot, and he informed me that there were a sufficient number of policemen on hand and that there had been no disorder and that ample protection had been afforded. I asked him why there were no cars being operated from that depot, and he informed me that they had no men, but would send out five crews in the morning.

"Passing through many of the streets of Brooklyn, and particularly in the Eastern District, I observed there were scarcely any cars moving, but that there was absolutely no disorder, nor had any crowds collected at any point.

"I have carefully read your report on the instances of disorder cited by the Receiver of the B. R. T. in his letter to me under date of Aug. 7, in which you point out that most of these alleged instances of disorder are so vague and meager in detail that it is impossible to substantiate the report, but that in the more important cases which are cited you have submitted a report which completely refutes the allegation that the police failed to perform their duty.

"From my personal observation and from reports which I have received from you officially and from various independent sources, I am convinced that there is far less disorder in connection with this strike than any strike which has taken place in the city, and that the failure of the company to operate its cars is not due to inadequate police protection.

"Pursuant to my previous instructions you will continue to protect life and property and enforce law and order throughout the city in connection with this strike. You will instruct the members of your force to promptly disperse any assemblage of people who without reason or business may gather at any place and obstruct traffic, or in any way tend to a breach of the peace. I assume that you have already taken precaution to protect any particular points where trouble may be expected, and if there are any additional points which the company believe require special police protection, meet their demands."

EMPLOYES WRITE TO WOOD.

Head of New York and Queens System Is Asked About Union Views.

Although no extensive organisation along union lines had been effected among the employes of the New York & Queens County Railway Company up to last evening, certain demands alleged to have been formulated by employes of the transportation department of the company were forwarded to the office of President William O. Wood yesterday. The letter, which was addressed to President Wood, was:

At a meeting of the employes of the transportation department, called to order at 8 P. M., Aug. 8, the following communication was drawn and a copy ordered sent to you with the request that you post the answer to said letter on the bulletin board at the Woodside car barn not later than Tuesday, Aug. 12, 1919:

What is your objection to the men organising, if any?

When are you going to dismiss the women conductors?

Does your word still hold good that you will give us the same rate of pay as in New York?

After the adoption of said communication the meeting was adjourned until Aug. 12 to await your answer. Very respectfully yours, COMMITTEE.

At the office of President Wood it was said that he was not in and no information regarding the receipt of the letter or the manner in which it would be treated was given out.

However, immediately after the receipt of the letter, the executives of the company in the operating department went immediately to the big car barns at Woodside and in secret session there, it is said, mapped out plans for the future.

Up to the present time the officials of the company have maintained very friendly relations with the employes, and some of them declared that the letter did not represent the sentiments of the employes. These men have been receiving for a long time the same rate of wages as is paid in Manhattan.

FEWER PICKETS ON STREETS

Prospect of Settlement Reduces Activity of Strikers in the Afternoon.

Subway and elevated lines of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company continued to operate last night and yesterday with some improvement in their schedule. Violence on the streets continued to keep down surface car service until at times less than a dozen of the 1,300 surface cars in normal operation were moving on the streets of Brooklyn. They were all withdrawn from operation at 6 o'clock at night as on the previous days of the strike. The elevated trains, according to Receiver Garrison, were in some instances stoned from the roofs of houses. Mr. Garrison said that the police yesterday had done "some real police work."

The majority of travelers in Brooklyn, however, were moved in motor trucks, vans, and automobiles running over regular routes. One hundred subway and elevated trains were being operated, according to the following table made public in the afternoon by the B. R. T.:

Line.	Trains Operated.
Sea Beach subway	8
West End subway	8
Fourth Avenue subway	11
Fifth Avenue elevated	6
Myrtle Avenue elevated	11
Brighton Beach elevated	11
Lexington Avenue elevated	16
Canarsie elevated	13
Bay Ridge elevated	3
Total	100

Though insisting that criticism of the police work had been without foundation, Police Commissioner Enight sent out an order which was read to policemen; instructing charges to be prepared against any policeman accused of failing to do his duty. Knowing that the conference was in progress, which might put an end to the strike, the pickets were generally quieter in the afternoon, although the morning was a strenuous one. The B. R. T. bulletins of trouble telephoned to their offices yesterday were as follows:

8:10 A. M.—Three Grand Street cars stalled at Grand and High Streets. Auto trucks with several large rocks drove on rails ahead of cars and dropped rocks. Cars stopped, and carload of police with crowbars sent to clear road.

8:25 A. M.—It is reported that a crowd of about 500 are waiting for Grand Street cars at Metropolitan Avenue bridge. Depot notified, and they will have carload of police follow three Grand Street cars down line.

8:30 A. M.—Police have cleared rocks off Grand Street, and three cars, followed by carload of police, have gone down to meet gang at bridge.

9:07 A. M.—Superintendent Riley reports fifteen cars went out on Grand Street. First trouble experienced at Grand and High Streets, where the strikers dumped large rocks from a van on the rails. A carload of police sent from the depot. Cars then diverted by way of Flushing Avenue, and at Flushing Avenue and Creek Street, offices of lumber company, the strikers pulled down telegraph poles and put them across the rails. These obstructions finally cleared and cars proceeded.

9:17 A. M.—There was considerable rioting when cars stalled at these points. Each car carried four policemen. Cars proceeded to Park Row and finally returned to depot. The depot master was instructed to send the cars out again, with a carload of police preceding the cars and another carload of police following the cars, and to make every effort to keep the line open.

9:20 A. M.—Woman, refusing name, called up and stated she was a passenger on Halsey Street car which was attacked by strikers at Classon Avenue. She stated the strikers stoned the car, took the draw bar from the side of the car, while men on the other side of the car emptied the air tank. During this time the four policemen never even told them to stop. The motorman and conductor, both old men, practically begged them to let them take the car back to the depot. One of the strikers attempted to pull the pole down and cut the rope, and one of the policemen, a red-headed man, chased him away. He was the only policeman that even opened his mouth in protest.

9:25 A. M.—Ninth Street and Fourth Avenue, westbound. Six men tripped a Fourth Avenue train, throwing the train into emergency. These men were dressed in civilian clothes.

9:25 A. M.—At 9:14 A. M. trains from Eighty-sixth Street dropped. No police.

10:20 A. M.—A citizen called up and stated that five or six strikers rolled a few boulders on the tracks at Grand and High Streets while twenty policemen stood by and watched them. He said the police protection is a disgrace. He said a man living near him was beaten as he was leaving his home while a policeman stood by and watched him. Strikers boarded a car and beat the crew, and all the police do is to say, "Here, that's enough." This man does not want his name made public, for he feels he would have the strikers after him.

10:30 A. M.—Chief Inspector Dempsey, Williamsburg Bridge, reports about 200 strikers on Plaza. Will run the cars as long as the crews will take them out.

1:20 P. M.—A Fourth Avenue subway train stalled 15 minutes on Manhattan Bridge and 15 minutes at Pacific Street on account of plugging up electric brass receptacle.

1:30 P. M.—Williamsburg Bridge locals stopped running at 1:15 on account of crowd on Plaza.

1:30 P. M.—Inspector Allman on Williamsburg Bridge Plaza reports strikers caught Inspector McLaughlin and took him away in an automobile.

2:50 P. M.—Auto truck filled with strikers passed the B. R. T. offices on Clinton Street, shouting and yelling, but did not stop.

3:50 P. M.—Six truck loads of strikers left Labor Lyceum to meet the Halsey Street car on the return trip. Auto loads of police left the Halsey Street depot, also to meet the car and the strikers. Depot Master Williams notified the police.

4:00 P. M.—Car arrived at the Halsey Street depot.

4:15 P. M.—Four truck loads of strikers are on the way to Canarsie barns to interfere with the Church Avenue car. Police notified. Auto with police and five mounted officers sent out to meet the car.

MAN IS KILLED IN TRAFFIC JAM

Pedestrian Suffers Fractured Skull —Two Hurt When Autos Crash.

The congested traffic yesterday resulting from the B. R. T. strike was the direct cause of several accidents, one of which ended in death. To accommodate the hundreds of people from the Greenpoint section of Brooklyn, who have been passing through Long Island City to get to Manhattan numerous passenger automobiles and business trucks have been used and have crowded the Vernon Avenue bridge.

In the jam that resulted at Jackson Avenue and Fourth and Fifth Streets yesterday Michael Irvige, 28 years old, of 77 Borden Avenue, Long Island City, was caught while attempting to cross the street. He was struck by a motor truck, belonging to the Tidewater Oil Company of 11 Broadway, Manhattan, driven by Edward Schmidt of 23 Eighteenth Avenue, Long Island City. He was taken to St. John's Hospital, where the surgeons diagnosed his injury as a fracture of the skull. He died in less than an hour.

As the result of a double collision between a touring car, a motor coal truck, and a motor cycle at Nostrand and Lafayette Avenues, Richmond Hill, two persons were injured yesterday afternoon. The touring car, driven by Emil Beyer of Liberty Avenue and Napier Street, Richmond Hill, collided with a coal truck of the S. Tuttle Coal Company, operated by Edward Anderson of 1,013 Pacific Street. A motor cycle, going in the opposite direction and operated by Vincent Halslach, 21 Cedar Street, also collided with the automobile. As a result, Joseph Minner, 38 years old, of 354 Gold Street, was thrown off the coal truck and suffered a fractured rib and several cuts and bruises, while Halslach was cut and lacerated.

BOY'S GRIT MAY SAVE HIM.

Max Kaufman, the 12-year-old boy of 436 Snediker Avenue, Brownsville, who is in the Lutheran Hospital as the result of a shot fired accidentally into his stomach by a policeman who aimed at a striker, is displaying remarkable grit. He was cheered up yesterday by a personal visit from Police Commissioner Enright, who told him he was "a brave little man."

According to Miss Augusta Abel, superintendent of the Hospital, the boy's determination to live is greatly adding to his chances of recovery. "He is progressing well," she says, "and it is hoped that his life may be saved."

TIE UP BERKSHIRE ROAD.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., Aug. 9.—The appointment of a receiver for the Berkshire Street Railway is to be recommended by Charles G. Wood of the State Board of Arbitration as the only means of restoring service on the line, tied up today by a strike of 400 of its employes. Mr. Wood also will recommend that the men return to work pending the action of the court in naming a receiver.

The principal towns and cities served by the road are Pittsfield, North Adams, Great Barrington, Lenox, and Stockbridge, Mass., and Canaan, Conn.; Bennington and Pownal, Vt., and Hoosick Falls, N. Y.

The road admittedly is unable to meet demands for a 40 per cent. increase in wages with shorter hours, which the men want. State Arbitrator Charles G. Wood is in charge of the situation here

BURLINGTON, Vt., Aug. 9.—Trolley service here was crippled today by a strike of motormen and conductors for shorter hours, increased pay and the reinstatement of nine discharged men. Many of the cars were left in the street last night when the strike started, and the passengers were forced to walk.

A few cars were running today, being operated by men who refused to join the strike. Leaders of the strikers said that nearly all the night shift had joined the movement.

TO END STOCK YARD STRIKE.

Workers Vote to Return Monday, Following Removal of Militia.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Striking Stock Yard workers at a mass meeting today decided to return to work Monday. Withdrawal of the militia from the yards yesterday and of the deputy sheriffs today was satisfactory to the men. The decision, if adhered to, will remove a serious situation that had promised to become a general strike with resultant reduction of meat products for a large part of the nation, with a possible increase in prices.

In some quarters it had been believed the union leaders would demand a closed shop with discharge of the 9,000 negroes not members of the unions. About 3,000 negroes are said to be members of the unions.

The Stock Yards were placed under guard of militia and police during the race riots last week. The return of negroes to work two days ago was followed by a strike of union workers. The union leaders, however, said the presence of armed guards was the cause of the strike.

The militia was withdrawn yesterday upon the request of Mayor Thompson made upon Governor Lowden. Sheriff Peters withdrew the deputy sheriffs today, but Chief of Police Garrity declared the 600 policemen would remain on duty in the vicinity of the Stock Yards to prevent any recurrence of racial trouble.

The larger packing companies had been crippled by the walkout, but said they were operating today on a 50 per cent. basis. While many of the smaller companies were seriously affected, the "Big Five" reported not many more than 10,000 of their men were out.

Basle Strike Ends in Failure.

BERNE, Aug. 8.—The general strike at Basle ended today in a complete failure, like the one at Zurich. The Communist Party and the Extremist labor leaders who hoped to spread the strike over all the country, even prophesying the establishment of a Swiss Soviet, have been entirely defeated.

HYLAN ASKS HEDGES TO SEE UNION HEAD

Advises Him to Meet Shea and Adjust Differences "if There Are Any."

CALLS "THREATS" UNWISE

Answering the request of Job E. Hedges, Receiver for the New York Railways Company, for ample police protection should the B. R. T. strike extend to his lines, Mayor Hylan yesterday said he was positive that the Police Department would be equal to any emergency that it may be called upon to meet and suggested that Mr. Hedges and P. J. Shea, National Executive Officer of the Carmen's Union, "instead of indulging in threats" get together and adjust any differences. Replying to the Mayor, Receiver Hedges denied that he had used threats.

This is the Mayor's letter:

City of New York,
Office of the Mayor, Aug. 9, 1919.

Job E. Hedges, Esq., Receiver New York Railways Company, 165 Broadway, New York City:

Sir—Receipt is hereby acknowledged of your letter bearing date of Aug. 8, which carries the following statement attributed by you to P. J. Shea, National Executive Officer of the Carmen's Union:

"There is not a damn thing surer on earth than that the street railway employes of Manhattan and the Bronx including subway and 'L' employes, will go out as soon as we can get leaders here to direct them. W. D. Mahon, President; Thomas Shine, Vice President, and other officers of the union are on the way here."

It also carries the following statement made by you in your official position to which you were appointed by a Federal Judge as Receiver of the New York Railways Company in which you ask protection for a strike that you imply is being contemplated by your employes:

"Upon failure to receive such protection I shall appeal to the Sheriff and through him to the Governor of the State of New York. Upon the failure of any public official in the City of New York to perform his constitutional duty in fact and in full sincerity as embodied in his oath of office, I shall lay charges before the Governor asking for the removal of that official by the Governor on account of such failure of duty."

Should the employes of the systems under your control declare a strike it is and shall be my duty as Mayor of the City of New York to see that police protection is accorded to the lines under your control and also to the traveling public. I am positive that the Police Department of the city is equal to any emergency that it may be called upon to cope with. Should a condition arise that might place the enforcement of law and order beyond the control of the Police Department that condition will be instantly met with. The City of New York and the State of New York are fully equipped and competent to enforce law and order to the fullest extent within its confines.

May I not say to you as receiver of the New York Railways Company and to Mr. Shea as an official who claims to represent the men that instead of indulging in threats first on his part against the railways company, second, you, on your part, representing the Federal Court as receiver of the railways company against the Mayor of New York and the officials charged with the enforcement of law, that you both try and get together and adjust your differences should there be such differences to adjust. Your threats against the officials of the City of New York charged with the enforcement of the law are most unwise and uncalled for, coming as they do from a representative of the United States court appointed as a receiver of a railway company by a Judge of that court. Very truly yours,

JOHN F. HYLAN,
Mayor.

This is Receiver Hedges's reply:

Honorable John F. Hylan, Mayor City of New York, City Hall, New York, N. Y.:

Dear Sir: In acknowledging yours of even date I am pleased to receive your assurance that should a condition arise that might place the enforcement of law and order beyond the Police Department that such condition will be instantly met with and that the City of New York and the State of New York are fully equipped and competent to enforce law and order to the fullest extent within its confines.

I agree with you that the City and State of New York are equipped and competent, and ask, as of right, its demonstration, and have sought to aid you in that preparation by early stating existing conditions. You further say, "May I not say to you as Receiver of the New York Railways Company and to Mr. Shea as an official who claims to represent the men, that instead of indulging in threats, first on his part against the Railways Company, and, second, on your part representing the Federal Court as Receiver of the Railways Company, against the Mayor of New York and the officials charged with the enforcement of law, that you both try and get together and adjust your differences should there be differences to adjust."

The propositions that I presented to you and repeat as I view them are as follows:

1. Can a man labor for whom he chooses at a wage on which he agrees without physical molestation or intimidation?

2. Can property be protected inviolate at all times?

I do not consider these two propositions open to discussion or argument. If these questions cannot be answered in the affirmative without debate and without discussion, and if public authorities are not constituted as a means of demonstrating that they are each established finally and firmly, there is no government in the United States—city, State or national—and the fundamental propositions of the Constitution are hypocracy and the citizen is left without hope against disorder.

You say that "threats against the officials of the City of New York, charged with the enforcement of the law, are most unwise and uncalled for, coming as they do from a representative of United States Court, appointed as a receiver of a railway company by a Judge of that court."

I have made no threat, shall make no threat, and you know and I know that no threat was made or contemplated. There is a Constitution. There are statites and judicial decisions. That law provides a method of procedure. You are an executive. I speak for human rights and physical property. If it is a threat for a citizen of the United States, whether a receiver or otherwise, to appeal as the law provides, to constituted authorities to do their duty, and tell these constituted authorities that they are expected to do, there no right in law, and government is a failure. You labor under misapprehension in apparently assuming that rights do not vest in individual, and that the exercise of executive authority is a personal perquisite, which enables you to impugn the motives of others and to condemn lines of conduct which are fundamental in the Constitution and prescribed by statute. You avoid the issue in injecting the question of an insult to a public official when the law has prescribed the only method of procedure open to me, and that I have followed. Very truly yours,

I. R. T. WANTS 8-CENT FARES.

Increase Is Only Way to Avoid Transit Chaos, Public Is Warned.

The Interborough Rapid Transit Company in an advertisement published in this morning's papers warns the public that "Manhattan and the Bronx are threatened with the same transit chaos that exists in Brooklyn," and insists that the only way it can be forestalled is to increase fares to 8 cents to permit wage increases, and to "take vigorous and prompt action to prevent disorder and the intimidation of our loyal employes."

The company asks that the people of the city "immediately authorize an increase in the rate of fare to 8 cents so that wages may be readjusted to the cost of living," and in commenting upon the proposal, says that the "company will agree that the city may retain 1 cent out of each 8 to insure interest and sinking fund upon the city subway investment, that the company is facing bankruptcy and cannot increase wages without such an increase in fare, and that the company is at peace with its employes, and will agree with them through their brotherhood upon a readjustment of wages, or submit any difference with them on that matter to arbitration if the fare be increased."

The company asserts that the "organizers, lawbreakers and followers of the association which has tied up Brooklyn in order to force their outside organization upon the B. R. T. employes is now threatening our employes here," and then comments that "the police must be sent to all meetings (of agitators) at the commencement in sufficient numbers to see that the groups of so-called 'picketers' are prevented from breaking the law. Their mobs must instantly be dispersed and enough policemen must be placed on the trains and platforms to protect every employe and must act for their protection. Such action by the police during the first fifteen minutes of trouble will preserve order, maintain proper service, and save the dignity of the City of New York."

The statement, in conclusion, says "our employes through collective bargaining are under contracts which last until the end of the year, and they have declared their intention to live up to their agreements. But they should have more pay to meet the cost of living, and we believe that this is the view of the fair and generous public."

NATION-WIDE MOVE TO LOWER FOOD COST

State and City Officials Act to Curb Profiteering and Reduce Prices.

PALMER'S AGENTS BUSY

Force of Secret Investigators Throughout the Country Seeks for Evidence in Food Costs.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—All special agents of the Department of Justice throughout the country have been ordered to assist District Attorneys in uncovering evidence of profiteering in foodstuffs and other necessities.

Attorney General Palmer's instructions are that these special agents, who comprise the Secret Service of the Bureau of Investigation, shall drop everything but the most pressing cases now pending and devote their entire attention to assisting in the campaign to reduce the cost of living. The result will be to put hundreds of trained investigators in the search for men who have inflated prices exorbitantly.

Officials of the Department of Justice said that reports from many sections of the country showed that the search for evidence of extortion in the necessities of life was proceeding vigorously and it was indicated that many prosecutions might come soon.

FARMERS ANXIOUS TO HELP.

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 9.—Representatives of farmers' organizations in twenty-four wheat and corn growing States will attend a conference in Washington Monday to discuss the high cost of living and lay plans for united action in the high cost of living investigation, according to John G. Brown, President of the Indiana Federation of Farmers' Associations. Mr Brown returned from Chicago yesterday, where he attended a meeting of farmers' representatives of Indiana, Illinois, and Iowa, at which it was decided to call the meeting at Washington.

Mr. Brown said that the farmers were anxious to do their share in solving the price problems now facing the country, but that the farmers were first to feel the effect of a general tieup. They expect to carry their side of the question to the President and stay in Washington until a solution is reached.

NEW ENGLANDERS ORGANIZE.

Plan for Better Distribution and Home Farm Development.

BOSTON, Aug. 9.—Organization of the New England Farm and Food Foundation to reduce the cost of living by developing more direct distribution of food products from producer to consumer, was effected at a meeting here today of business men from many parts of New England. By making it easier for the farmer to market his products the organization hopes to encourage production and at the same time reduce costs to the consumer.

It is estimated that there are 5,000,000 acres of uncultivated farm lands in New England, and the men who have taken up the movement hope to bring much of this under cultivation, and at the same time to re-establish New England's livestock industry. A considerable amount has been pledged for the work.

Reginald W. Bird of this city is President of the foundation. Associated with him are George A. Galliver of Holyoke and Horace A. Moses of Mittineague as Vice Presidents, and G. W. Wheelwright of Boston, and John A. Scheuerle of Springfield, as treasurer and secretary, respectively. Among the trustees are Silas B. Adams of Portland, Charles L. Allen, Louis H. Buckley, George F. Fuller, and L. J. Knowles of Worcester, Wilson H. Lee of New Haven, Fred T. Ley, Albert Steiger, and Joshua L. Brooks of Springfield, Henry B. Endicott, Theodore N. Vail, James J. Storrow, and William M. Wood.

STATE BUYS A FLOUR MILL.

North Dakota Also Arranges to Build Mills and Elevators.

BISMARCK, N. D., Aug. 9.—The State through the State Mill and Elevator Association announced today the purchase of a flour mill and the locating of four large mills and terminal elevators in the State.

Construction of the latter will be pushed in an effort to aid in reducing the cost of living.

PRISON FOR PROFITEERS.

Fines Not to be Accepted, Says Chicago Federal Official.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Food hoarders and profiteers convicted of violations of the law will not be let off with insignificant fines, according to District Attorney Clyne, who returned today from Washington. The penitentiary is the only place for those who prey upon the public, Mr. Clyne said.

"No quarter," Mr. Clyne declared, "will be shown those who have taken advantage of conditions brought about by the world war to hoist prices to such a high pitch that necessaries of life have in so many cases become prohibitive. The Government is going to this matter with hammer and tongs. We are going to prosecute to the very limit with a view to sending to the penitentiary every individual and every clique of men banded together to rob the public."

Harry A. Wheeler, former Food Administrator for Illinois, came out today in favor of the immediate revival of Government food control and its principal features: Licensing of all producers and merchants and prevention of cross-selling among dealers.

FINDS CINCINNATI PROFITEERS.

Grand Jury Blames Federal Bureau in Part.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 9.—The Hamilton County Grand Jury, which is investigating the high cost of living, stated in a partial report to the court today that it had found evidence of profiteering and hoarding in the county. No indictments and no names were mentioned. The investigation will continue.

The jury held that the Federal Bureau of Markets in Cincinnati was one of the causes of the high cost of living. It was charged that the bureau's food price-lists were fixed arbitrarily and not based on cost of production, supply and demand.

PITTSBURGH FINES FARMERS.

Thirty-one Accused of Not Marking Containers Properly.

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 9.—Thirty-two farmers were arrested here today on warrants charging them with misdemeanors by Murray Livingston, City Ordinance Officer, in an effort to check profiteering among farmers who sell foodstuffs in the city at abnormal prices. All but one of the thirty-two were fined in court $1 each for every basket and container that was not marked properly according to the law.

BROAD MICHIGAN INQUIRY.

Grand Jury Investigation to be Started by State in Lansing.

LANSING, Mich., Aug. 9.—A meeting of the eighty-three prosecuting attorneys in Michigan has been called by Attorney General Alexander J. Groesbeck, to organise for co-operation in the Grand Jury investigation into the cost of living which is likely to begin in the Circuit Court here Aug. 13.

Decision to start an investigation was announced yesterday when the Attorney General filed with Circuit Judge Howard Wiest a complaint charging that between Feb. 1 and Aug. 1 "persons unknown to the complainant" conspired to restrict production and enhance the market price of foodstuffs, articles of wearing apparel, and other commodities. The hearing is to be open to the public.

The investigation, according to Mr. Groesbeck, will take in every line of business having to do with necessities of life.

TO CONFER ON FOOD SALES.

City May Decide Not to Handle Army Supplies.

Whether New York City will have the opportunity to buy surplus army foods depends upon a conference to be held by Deputy Commissioners of Public Markets O'Malley and Smith with the War Department today or tomorrow. Commissioner of Public Markets Jonathan C. Day said yesterday that after a conference with Captain A. A. Stewart of the Zone Surplus Supplies Department, at 481 Eighth Avenue, the Deputy Commissioners had come to the conclusion that any of the large chain stores could sell food practically as cheaply as the city could sell the army supplies. Therefore the Commissioner said he could see no advantage in the plan to have the city handle the Government foodstuffs unless the prices were considerably lower than those published.

Commissioner Day said that he had been informed on good authority that the big packers had bought enormous quantities of meat and other commodities from the Government at prices ranging from 33 1-3 to 50 per cent. lower than the prices at which they originally sold the goods to the Government, and consequently they could cut prices to a lower level than the city's prices if they so desired.

Deputy Commissioners O'Malley and Smith were to go to Washington last night, Dr. Day said, to clear up the situation regarding the prices of foodstuffs. They will present a letter from Mayor Hylan to Secretary of War Baker, in which the Mayor states that the deputies are the authorized agents of the city, and that their mission is to settle the matter of prices, quantity, and quality. Dr. Day said that his instructions to them were to "bring home the bacon."

CUT RATES ON ARMY FOOD.

Syndicate Head Offers Supplies at Less Than Government Prices.

Oliver G. Tyrrell of Ridgefield, N. J., head of a $32,000,000 syndicate which recently purchased surplus food supplies from the army, yesterday offered to sell all or part of the syndicate's food holdings to Mayor Charles P. Gillen of Newark at prices below those now being charged by the Government. Tyrrell recently declared that retailers in New York were intimidated and kept from buying the food by agents of the packers and other large interests, who warned the dealers that if they did business with the syndicate they would be unable to purchase other goods. Mayor Gillen took Mr. Tyrrell's offer under investigation.

Mayor Gillen yesterday ordered 150,000 pounds of bacon and 72,000 cans of vegetables, in addition to goods now being sold. Hams, canned bacon, and canned vegetables sold rapidly at the city sales depots yesterday, and within a week it is expected that the vast supplies now in the city warehouses and being carted from the army terminals in Jersey City will be sold.

FOOD FRAUD STIRS PREMIER.

Clemenceau Changes Paris Victualing Methods After Experience.

PARIS, Aug. 9, (Associated Press.)—Premier Clemenceau recently thought he would like to try "frigo," as the Parisians call frozen meat. He told his cook to get some. She searched the whole quarter in vain, because the butchers were selling it as fresh meat.

"This state of affairs must stop," said the Premier, according to the newspapers. He summoned to a conference two members of the City Council, M. Vilgrain, Under Secretary of the Ministry of Provisions, and Henri Roy, Under Secretary of Food, and M. Autrand, Prefect of the Department of the Seine. The Councilors remarked that there were other things besides "frigo" missing.

"This must change," the Premier declared. "Henceforth Vilgrain and Roy will have charge of the victualing of Paris, Prefect Autrand undertaking the trucking of supplies and each being held responsible. I give you fifteen days to have everything in order."

As a first step M. Vilgrain will open a hundred more sheds for the sale of foodstuffs. The sale of "frigo" will be taken from ordinary butchers and will only be permitted at the municipal shops. Enough additional municipal stores will be opened to make 200 in all.

Jersey Food Stocks Grow.

TRENTON, N. J., Aug. 9.—The vast quantities of food held in the cold storage warehouses of New Jersey were increased by millions of pounds in July, according to a report of the State Department of Health made public today. In fresh meats alone the increase was more than 1,000,000 pounds, and 1,500,000 pounds more of cheese and butter were stored away.

Britain to Resume Control of Food Imports.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—George H. Roberts, Food Controller, announced tonight that the Government had decided to resume control of the supply and distribution of imports of bacon, ham, and lard, and that the prices to be charged would also be under supervision.

said. "It would give the Government intimate control over private enterprise. I favor anything that would put down profiteering and assure the flow of commodities to the market. Licensing, however, is not necessary; it is imperialistic."

He suggested that one method of solving the cost of living problem would be to curtail exports. He may offer a bill to that end.

Some Would Fix Maximum Prices.

The Interstate Commerce Committee will consider the question of fixing maximum prices that may be charged for necessaries in time of economic stress. More than one member of the committee favors such a plan. Others attack it as an invasion of the rights of individuals in legitimate trade.

Senator Pomerene suggested today that, while new laws against hoarding and profiteering would undoubtedly be found advisable, there were statutes, both Federal and State, that afforded some means to deal with the situation.

He called attention to a decision of the Federal Supreme Court in 1876 touching on an Illinois law to regulate and license grain elevators, which clearly defined the right of a State to regulate commerce in commodities. It also ruled that reasonable prices might be fixed upon them.

The decision, Mr. Pomerene said, appeared to bear upon the existing situation. When the owner of property devotes it to a use in which the public has an interest, he in effect grants to the public an interest in such use, and must to the extent of that interest submit to be controlled by the public for the common good as long as he maintains the use.

Rights of property, and to a reasonable compensation for its use, created by the common law, cannot be taken away without due process, but the law itself, as a rule of conduct, may, unless constitutional limitations forbid, be changed at the will of the Legislature.

The limitation by legislative enactment of the rate of charge for services, rendered in a public employment, or the use of the property in which the public has an interest, establishes no new principle in the law, but only gives a new effect to an old one.

The Interstate Commerce Committee, Mr. Pomerene said, would consider how far the States might go in regulating the storage warehouses, with a view to determining what supplementary legislation Congress might enact.

Two bills in the Senate Agricultural Committee, framed by Senators Kenyon and Kellogg, and aimed to regulate the meat industry, will be taken up next week. Mr. Kenyon's bill provides for licensing packing houses, and Mr. Kellogg's for licensing yards now owned by the packers. Under these measures any monopoly by the big packing houses of yard facilities would be ended, and independent interests would share in their use. It is also proposed in the Kellogg bill to license refrigeration cars, throwing them open to the use of the independents.

President Wilson's suggestion that food prices in the capital should be taken up by Congress was anticipated some time ago by the District of Columbia Committee of the Senate, which has had several hearings, during which meat packers and others have testified.

House Will Be Swift to Act.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9, (Associated Press.)—Representative Mondell, the Republican Leader, stated in the House today that Congress was ready to act promptly on such legislation as was needed to carry out the suggestions made yesterday by President Wilson for reducing the high cost of living. The further appropriations suggested by the President would be made quickly, Mr. Mondell said.

"Congress stands ready to consider any estimates," declared the Republican Leader, "and hopes such estimates as are necessary and essential will be submitted to Congress as promptly as possible. All appropriations found necessary and needed will be made as soon as possible."

In regard to legislation, Mr. Mondell said that some of it would be enacted promptly, while that affecting profoundly the policy of the Government would be debated. All would receive the active and quick consideration of the House, he added.

After concluding his statement Mr. Mondell suggested that the House adjourn until Tuesday because of a "lack of imperative business."

This led to a protest from the Democrats, after former Speaker Clark had announced that every Democratic member would be notified to return to Washington as quickly as possible.

"We're stuck here without a possible vacation until Fall," Mr. Clark said, "and I think we should continue with business."

Representative Mann said that members should "go home and rest their souls," adding that it was "not in the interest of the country to have the House in session."

After some further discussion the House finally adjourned until Tuesday.

Hearings on new cold storage legislation, recommended by the President, will begin before the House Agriculture Committee on Monday, Chairman Haugen announced today. It is understood that the measure as proposed will limit the time in which supplies may be held and compel disposal of them after the permitted period.

LABOR MEN DENY STRIKE THREAT

way men and their sympathizers favor the nationalization of all industry. Mr. Plumb, testifying today before the Interstate Commerce Committee, said the plan might be extended over all industries where grants had been given to private interests. In view of the attitude of this extreme wing of the labor group, the more conservative are anxious to ascertain the President's view. His declaration yesterday that the industries of the United States could not and would not be revolutionized overnight has disturbed the ranks of the Plumb plan advocates, and they feel that they must know his mind in shaping their plans for pushing the proposal further.

Intense anxiety to refute the charge that they had threatened a strike in case the Plumb plan was not adopted by Congress was reflected today in statements from the labor leaders. Plumb declared without qualification to the House Committee that no such action was threatened in relation to his plan and had been mentioned solely in reference to the enforcement of wage demands. While he was testifying his headquarters gave out a statement, signed by many leaders, disclaiming that violence would be used to force the nationalization scheme upon the American people.

This statement, however, said that, so far as the wage demand and the incidental checking of profiteering were concerned, if "this request" was not met, "we shall have to try to find another solution."

The announcement that the visit would be paid to the White House was made after a conference, in which the railway men's leaders were joined by a number of men who figure in public life, including Frank P. Walsh and Basil Manly, both former Chairmen of the National War Labor Board, and Frederic C. Howe, Commissioner of Immigration at New York; former Governor E. F. Dunne of Illinois, and Governor Henry J. Allen of Kansas. Judge Walter Clark, Chief Justice of the North Carolina Supreme Court, presided, and others present were Professor Edward F. Bemis of New York, an economist; J. A. H. Hopkins, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Committee of Forty-eight, and Morris L. Cook of Philadelphia, a consulting engineer. Former Representative Edward Keating, who is described as the manager of the Plumb Plan League, said that all those present were in general sympathy with the idea of handling the railroads under the three-cornered scheme, with labor reaping part of the benefits.

Governor Allen said later, however, that he attended in the interest of the farmers, and that his presence must not be taken to commit him to the plan.

"On the basis of the principle enunciated in President Wilson's message of May 20 last for 'the genuine democratization of industry based upon a full recognition of the rights of those who work, in whatever rank, to participate in some organic way in every decision which directly affects their welfare in the part they are to play in industry,' will you join conference in Washington on Saturday, Aug. 9, with representatives of the national and international railway labor organizations for a right solution of the railway labor problem in the present public emergency? Will be in session three days. We crave and will give respectful ear to your counsel, trusting only that the decisions arrived at shall be just in the twofold interest of the public and labor. On behalf of the committee of the railway labor organizations."

Official Account of Meeting.

The official statement given out thus described the meeting:

"Leaders of national thought gathered in Washington this afternoon in response to an invitation sent out by Glenn E. Plumb, counsel for the organized railway employes of America, and Edward Keating, manager of the Plumb Plan League, and went into executive conference with labor leaders for the purpose of considering a course of action and outlining a program. Judge Walter Clark, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of North Carolina, was elected temporary Chairman of the conference. After remaining in session all afternoon they adjourned until Monday, when a definite policy will be agreed upon to protect the public's interest in the solution of the railway program. The purpose of the movement is to effect a clarification of national thought upon the basic principles involved in the so-called Plumb plan for the nationalization of the railroads under tripartite control with especial reference to the principle loosely known as 'industrial democracy.'

"The afternoon session of the conference was devoted to a presentation of the theory of the brotherhoods' rail road plan by Glenn E. Plumb and to an examination of the evidence in Mr. Plumb's possession showing the railroad properties of the country have been ruined by the manipulations of the private owners. This is the new and secret evidence referred to by Mr. Plumb in his testimony before the House Interstate Commerce Committee on Thursday morning."

On the floor of the House today there was a discussion of the course of the brotherhoods during the passage of the Adamson law. "Uncle Joe" Cannon said he was sorry he had voted for the act and Representatives Blanton and Black, both Texas Democrats, said the law was only passed at Presidential request, under threat of a nation-wide strike. The Texans both assailed what they said were strong-arm methods of the brotherhoods. Representative Hardy, another Texas Democrat, held that the President forced the railway executives to accede to the demand after they had once refused.

Senator Hitchcock, the Democratic leader in the Senate, sent this telegram to the Nebraska brotherhoods who asked his stand on the measure:

"In my opinion Congress would not be justified in enacting such radical legislation without a mandate from the people. The railroad organizations have raised a very large question—one that should not be passed upon by Congress without becoming the issue in a general election. I am opposed to the bill."

While Plumb was on the stand today he replied emphatically to questions put by Representative Dewalt, Democrat, of Pennsylvania.

"I do not believe the workingmen intend that the Government should be overthrown, because they wish to build their new order upon this Government."

Again, he asked about the meaning of the man who said to him after his St. Louis speech:

"By God, if we cannot get something like this plan, there will be a revolution."

The explanation Mr. Plumb gave today was that by "revolution" the man meant "a reconstruction of the industrial situation." Mr. Dewalt put the witness on record as saying that he, as the representative of labor, did not believe in force, but in lawful processes in order to obtain demands.

"As a representative of labor, you do not believe in any measure of force, but in confining yourself to legitimate, legal processes?" asked Mr. Dewalt.

"Absolutely," responded Plumb.

"There's been a great deal of misrepresentation in the newspapers that a strike was intended in connection with this plan," he proceeded. "No one has said that. It has been positively denied by Mr. Stone, Mr. Morrison, and myself. There is a wage discussion going on, and any mention of a strike was in connection with that.

The Brotherhood's Statement.

"This is a question of statesmanship. We would be blind to our interests if we attempted to bring into this question the method of settling a wage dispute."

"You never said anything truer than that," interjected Mr. Dewalt.

"Nobody ever said anything else," persisted Mr. Plumb, "and when we say that if the question is not solved there will be trouble in the country, we are merely stating that the necessity for finding a solution is because of the feeling of unrest."

When Mr. Dewalt was finishing his questions, he said he was glad to hear that violence was not contemplated.

"If I thought the men I represented contemplated violence and controlled my activities, I would not be here one minute," exclaimed the witness, beating the table sharply with his clenched fist.

The statement given out during the meeting, and which paralleled so closely Mr. Plumb's declarations, follows:

"To prevent any misunderstanding as to the policy of the organized railroad employes, we unite in a definite assertion that we have no desire, and have had none, to impress upon the public by violence, or by threat, our proposal that the railroads be nationalized under tripartite control.

"Two distinctly separate considerations now confront the people, the wage requirements of the railroad employes, and the Sims bill.

"In the matter of wages we have submitted an eminently just proposition.

"We have said that if we are to continue to live as Americans should live, and are to care for our families as American families should be cared for, the profiteers must be restrained and our wages increased. Every fair-minded man and every intelligent housewife will recognize the reasonableness of this request. If Congress and the President cannot meet this request, it is still a living question and we shall have to try and find another solution.

"This, however, bears in no way upon our sponsorship of the Sims bill. We do hold to our conviction that the railroad employes are in no mood to consign themselves finally to the autocratic control of financial dictators, but in proposing the elimination of capital and the tripartite directorate, we have no purpose of intimidation. We appeal to the statesmanship of America and to the common sense of American manhood and womanhood. We are all voters, and unless our democracy in government is a failure, our democracy in industry need not be. We believe in the native ability of American labor. What we ask is the Americanization of the railroads."

Not Socialism, Insists Plumb.

Ever since Mr. Plumb took the stand, last Wednesday, he has been asked often whether he would extend his scheme to other industries and resources. Mr. Dewalt asked today whether such an extension should not cover all commercial enterprises. Mr. Plumb could see no barrier if it was for the "public benefit." He intimated he considered the plan would be a good thing for the Post Office Department.

"Where would you stop?"

"Where grant and privilege stop," he answered, adding: "When you stop doing business in privileges which individuals can't enjoy."

"Then," went on Mr. Dewalt, "every industry that received a grant should be governed by these principles; isn't that the final analysis?"

"Yes, if the word 'grant' is defined correctly."

"Does that not lead to socialism?"

"Not at all. It preserves for the public grants given to corporations."

Other questions dealt with the composition of the Board of Directors, five of whom are appointed by the President, and five each by "classified" and "official" employes. Representative Montague of Virginia, Democrat, said that it would be only human nature for either the "classified" or "official" employes to wish to enlarge their numbers on the board.

"It's a mistake to view human nature as the capitalists see it, and not as we see it," said the witness.

Representative Merritt, Republican, of Connecticut, expressed belief that a "huge" political machine might be built up by the directors who represented the railwaymen on the board. Mr. Plumb doubted this. Further question on possible politics in the organization developed that he believed that there might be an "industrial political policy." Asked if many great railroad executives had not risen from the bottom, the attorney for the railway unions replied:

"They did not rise by the selection of their fellow employes, but by the autocratic selection of the employes, who realized they could extort more profits from human effort in that way."

Representative Montague said during the civil war officers were selected by the privates and "it did not work very well." To this Mr. Plumb answered:

"We had some very able officers in the late unpleasantness, and might have had more if the privates had been able to select them."

The witness did not know that any other laboring class had received a wage increase similar to that given to railway men by the Adamson law. He said he was not informed on the subject of wages. Representative Montague asked if the Government should pay for double tracks when roads had built these tracks out of the surplus earnings.

"All the money put back in property from public earnings belongs to the public and should not be included," was the answer.

During the day Representative Dewalt said that the "very men for whom you are appealing," meaning the 2,020,000 railway workers, owned a large part of the stock in the railway systems today. Representative Watson, Republican, of Pennsylvania, declared he did not believe that the workers would strike as they owned too much property, and were too patriotic.

The hearing will be resumed Monday, when Mr. Plumb will again testify. A. B. Garretson, former President of the Order of Railway Conductors, will follow him. Garretson will no doubt consume two or three days. Next in order will be S. Davies Warfield, representing the National Surety Holders' Association.

NEW HAVEN CANCELS NINE MORE TRAINS

trains canceled Friday, nine of the regular Saturday trains, including five of the most important of the week-end expresses to points in New England, were canceled yesterday. The State of Maine Express and the Bar Harbor Express were consolidated, and the train left the Grand Central Terminal at 7:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. It was also announced in the course of the day that four of the regular Sunday trains will not leave today.

While the railroad officials expect the shopmen to return to their jobs within the next day or two the strikers were augmented yesterday by 150 "technical" inspectors of the Harlem River yards. These men quit work yesterday morning. They gave no advance notice to the company and filed no grievance claims with the Regional Director in New York. The strike, it was stated, was a sympathetic one to support the shopmen.

"The strike of these inspectors, whose work is of the highest importance," said Assistant Superintendent Robert Hull, "affects the whole New York Division of the system. These are the men charged with the last minute inspections at the yards, one of their duties being to see that the engines and cars are properly coupled before leaving the yards for the terminals."

The Saturday trains canceled yesterday were:

12:41 P. M.—Seashore Express to Providence.
12:42 P. M.—New Rochelle Express.
12:45 P. M.—Pittsfield Express.
12:47 P. M.—New Canaan Express.
1:06 P. M.—Bridgeport Express.
1:09 P. M.—Winsted Express.
1:12 P. M.—New Rochelle Local.
1:35 P. M.—Danbury Express.
2:12 P. M.—New Rochelle Local.

The Sunday trains canceled are:

6 A. M.—Springfield Express.
9 A. M.—New Haven Express.
10 A. M.—Boston Express.
3:35 P. M.—Springfield Express.

The effect of the freight embargo, it was said, is being felt in various parts of New England. In all instances preference is being given to the transportation of milk and foodstuffs.

The cancellation of the New Rochelle trains worked a hardship on hundreds of commuters yesterday. The trains that did run were crowded to capacity, and great numbers, in order to reach their homes, traveled by trolley or paid high rates for taxicab service. In some instances a taxicab to New Rochelle cost, it was said, $35 for the one-way trip.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Aug. 9.—A meeting of shopmen of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, held here today, instructed its delegates to a system federation meeting to agree to end the strike provided the shopmen at the Boston end of the system desire to return. The strike may be ended immediately, in the judgment of the delegates.

BOSTON, Aug. 9.—No improvement was noted in the strike situation on the railroads of New England tonight after a number of meetings of strike leaders and unions had adjourned. Strike leaders on the New Haven said that if the men at New Haven had voted to follow the lead of Boston they would "wait a long time before returning to work." The situation on the Boston & Albany was uncertain.

Leaders of Boston & Maine workers said the sentiment was unanimous to remain on strike until the full demands are granted, regardless of the statements of Grand Lodge officers that those who do not return to work will not be allowed to participate in the negotiations that are to be opened for adjusting wage grievances.

The Boston & Maine Railroad today declared an embargo against all freight from connecting points, except milk and perishable foodstuffs. Officials announced, however, that they would continue to handle local freight for the present.

The strike on the New England Railroads caused further curtailment of passenger train service and additional delays in the movement of freight today. Suburban traffic suspensions on the New Haven and the Boston & Maine lines continued.

Upward of 300 more roundhouse employes quit the Boston & Maine Railroad today, and officials of the Boston & Albany said some of their fire cleaners and coal pocket men had joined the strike.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Aug. 9.—Decision was reached by the striking Boston & Albany shopmen here today to remain on strike until strikers on the Boston & Maine and New Haven roads, as well as on other parts of the Boston & Albany, also decide to return to work. The stationary engineers and firemen employed in the Boston & Albany shops here struck this afternoon, when word was received that their demands for wage increases had not been granted. A report was received from H. M. Biscoe, Federal manager of the road, that he had referred the demand to th Washington authorities.

Demand Definite Assurances.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Representatives of the Chicago District Council of the Federated Railway Shopmen's Union, which called a strike Aug. 1 in defiance of the international officers of the shop crafts unions, today dominated conferences at which some of the international officers sought to have the men return to work. The council sent a telegram to the President stating that until some concession had been made the attitude of the men would be unchanged, and that they would remain on strike.

At the request of the District Council, former Senator James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois last night telegraphed to President Wilson recommending that the Director General take up the subject with a view to bringing harmony between the international officers and heads of the men's committees or confer with the committees direct by having them go to Washington and sit with the Grand Lodge presidents in the conferences, so that an agreement to get the men back to work at once might be reached.

Federal railroad managers admitted there was small improvement today in the Chicago district and that the situation still was serious.

BALTIMORE, Aug. 9.—The 2,000 shopmen in this city of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad tonight voted to return to work Monday pending action by Director General Hines on the question of an increase in wages.

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 9.—At a meeting today 400 shopmen who have been on strike at the Moorefield shops of the Cincinnati, Indianapolis & Western Railroad voted to return to work.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 9.—Refusal of 1,200 striking shop employes on the C. & O. and the L. & N. railroads to return to work, after a meeting of the strikers, representatives in Covington, Ky., today, blasted the hopes of operating officials and the United States Railroad Administration for an immediate lifting of the embargoes in the Cincinnati district. The men voted to remain on strike until their demands are met by the Railroad Administration.

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 9.—Striking railroad shopmen in this city and Birmingham, Ala., voted today not to go back to work. At a mass meeting here they decided to remain on strike until their demands were met. Reports from other parts of the Southeast indicate that some men either are returning to work today or voting to return Monday. In Macon 2,000 voted to end the strike. In Savannah mechanics voted to go back if assured they would participate in any advances granted other shop workers. Shopmen on the Tennessee Central at Nashville went back to work today.

FRANKFORT, Ind., Aug. 9.—Shop employes of the Toledo, St. Louis & Western Railroad went on strike here today following a strike vote taken last night. Union officials said 500 men quit work.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Aug. 9.—Local shopmen on strike at a mass meeting today voted unanimously not to return to work.

HERRINGTON, Kan., Aug. 9.—Three hundred Rock Island employes on strike here since Monday returned to work today.

CONNOLLY DEFIES UNION.

Borough President of Queens Refuses to Hear Technical Men.

Borough President Maurice E. Connolly of Queens yesterday refused to negotiate with or receive a committee and delegates from Local Union No. 16,388 of Technical men, which is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, to discuss an increase in salaries of the members of the union, and he declared that those of the Queens employes who started anything in the way of a strike, "would find their legs cut from under them."

When President Connolly's position was reported to representatives of the union a decision was reached to force the issue, after which the union will call upon the American Federation of Labor to take charge of the matter.

Local Union No. 16,388 is made up of technical men and engineers employed in all of the boroughs in the city. There are about 250 members from Queens. It had been decided to request from department heads an increase of approximately $500 a year for all engineers and technical men. It is said that practically 100 per cent. of the men of this class in Queens belong to the local.

George Morton, Chairman of the committee, said, "We went into President Connolly and told him what we had come for. As soon as we finished speaking President Connolly said most emphatically that if we came to him as the representatives of a union, he would have nothing to do with us. However, if we came as individuals or as representing the employes as individuals, he was willing to discuss the matter with us. We told him that we came as representatives of the union, and then he replied, 'I know what you will do as a union. You will go out on a strike and attempt to tie up things here. I give you warning that if you do anything of that kind, you will have your legs cut from under you.'"

GIVES ARBITRATION PLAN.

Warren C. King for Strict Ruling in Public Service Differences.

BOUND BROOK, N. J., Aug. 9.—Compulsory arbitration between public service corporations and their employes, to safeguard the interests of all the people of the State, was one of the policies set forth this afternoon by Warren C. King, President of the Manufacturers' Association of New Jersey, one of the four Republicans seeking the nomination for Governor of New Jersey, during a reception which he tendered to newspaper men at Beechwood Heights here.

Mr. King said that the Governor should appoint men of the calibre of Supreme Court Justices to the Public Utilities Board, and he promised, if elected, to fill those places with competent men.

He says he stands for an impartial investigation of the public utilities of the State; the conduct of the State affairs on a business basis by business men; reducing the tax burden of the people and the granting of equal suffrage to women.

FRENCH RELEASE AUSTRIAN.

Capitalist, Held Since 1917, Was Charged with Entering Forts.

MARSEILLES, Aug. 9.—The war council today acquitted an Austrian capitalist named Margulies, interned during the Summer of 1917 on a charge of having entered French forts while claiming false nationality and of having had dealings with the enemies of France.

Margulies was a wealthy resident of Nice and Monte Carlo and had a social footing in Paris. When the war broke out he had a Belgian passport, and when this was challenged he claimed Rumanian origin. It later developed that he was an Austrian. Various documents were then seized at his villa in Nice and he was sent to an internment camp.

After an interpellation in the Senate shortly afterward as to the status of his case it was decided to make it the subject of a judicial inquiry.

MESDAMES CALLOT SOEURS, 9, Avenue Matignon, Paris, heard with pleasure through the letter (published in the papers) of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs addressed to the United States Government that France is prepared to receive American visitors and that our country will do her best so as to facilitate the formalities necessary to the visa of passports. Mesdames Callot Soeurs wish to send the American Ladies their best compliments, and in the hope of receiving their visit they have intentionally prepared for them a special collection of robes, cloaks, furs, linen, and furniture.—Advt.

Strikes Spreading in Japan; Tokio Newspapers Suspend

TOKIO, Friday, Aug. 8.—Virtually all the newspapers of Tokio have suspended publication, owing to the demands of the printers for higher wages, which the owners refuse to grant.

Numerous strikes are in progress elsewhere in Japan, some of the governmental establishments being affected. There have been no disorders.

CHILEAN MISSION COMING.

Will Visit United States This Month on Way to England.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—The State Department announced today that a mission of the Chilean Government, headed by Don Ismael Tocornal, President of the Senate, as special Ambassador, and Pedro Iniguez, representing the Chamber of Deputies, a military and naval representative, a secretary and several others, is expected to sail from Santiago on the steamer Aysen Aug. 15, en route via the United States for England to return a visit made to Chile by Sir Maurice de Bunsen.

The mission will proceed from Santiago by way of Panama and Cuba and thence to Key West, and New York and Washington. It will remain only a short while in the United States, and its stay will be unofficial. The plans contemplate sailing for England from New York on the Adriatic about Sept. 15. Señor Tocornal is recognised as one of the most able men in Chile. Señor Iniguez has been secretary of the Chilean posts in Paris, Berlin, and Rome, and is active among the Liberal members of the Chilean House of Deputies.

The mission, which will be joined in London by Admiral Luis Gomes Garreno, who recently visited the United States, and by Roberto Lyon, a member of the Chilean Senate and a well known financier, probably will remain in London two weeks and then travel unofficially through France and Great Britain to study construction and agriculture.

DYING MAN NAMED SLAYERS.

Italian, Shot on East Side, Gave Clue to Police.

An Italian, who said he was Tony Santino, 28 years old, of Eighty-sixth Street, Brooklyn, was shot in a lot which was formerly used as a cemetery on Twelfth Street, between Avenue A and First Avenue, about 3 o'clock yesterday morning, and died before the arrival of Dr. Sykes of Bellevue Hospital. Five empty shells were found alongside the spot where Santino fell. All five shots entered Santino's body, and he was just able to give the police a meagre description of his two assailants, who are being sought today.

Policeman Farrell of the East Fifth Street Station, found Santino all but unconscious when he reached his side a few moments after the shots were fired. The policeman was unable to learn the street number of the house in which the dying man lived, or whether he was married or had any relatives.

After the finger prints of Santino had been taken at the Morgue following his death his picture was found in the Rogue's Gallery at Police Headquarters. This picture bore the name Tony Constino, and the address given was 1,520 Eighty-sixth Street, Brooklyn. The records show that the man was sent to Elmira Reformatory in 1918 to serve a sentence for robbery.

DRUG ADDICTS UNDESIRED.

Staten Island Residents Against Housing Them in Sea View.

Staten Island commenced yesterday to organize for an aggressive campaign to prevent Health Commissioner Dr. Royal S. Copeland from bringing drug addicts to the Sea View Hospital, now used for tuberculosis patients. Dr. Copeland did not take possession of Sea View yesterday as he planned to do, and some of the residents of Richmond said that he would meet with opposition when he did.

A vigilance committee of 150 members has been formed who threaten to picket the ferries in the effort to prevent drug addicts from being brought to Sea View. A former assemblyman, who led the successful fight to prevent the city from locating a garbage disposal plant on Staten Island, has volunteered to lead the fight against the use of Sea View by Dr. Copeland.

The Staten Island Civic League, of which Dr. Louis A. Dreyfus is the President, forwarded to Mayor Hylan yesterday about 150 letters of protest. It is planned to ask District Attorney Alfred Sach of Richmond to take action to prevent the use of Sea View for drug addicts.

GERMANS RECEIVE OLD MAIL

First Direct Uncensored Batch from America Arrives.

BERLIN, Aug. 7, (Associated Press.)—The first direct uncensored mail from America to Germany began arriving yesterday. The letters received ranged from business communications held up for weeks, months, and even years by the English to letters from only three to five weeks old.

One bank communication more than three years old bore the seal of the British censor, but all recent letters were untouched except by Germans, who, it is charged, might have been looking for money or trade secrets. Another shipment of nearly 1,800 sacks is due in Copenhagen the middle of August.

IRISH FRIENDS OPEN BRANCH

Washington Bureau to Urge Freedom on Congress and Administration

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—The organization known as the Friends of Irish Freedom, which is working for the recognition of Ireland as an independent republic, has opened Washington headquarters in order to keep in closer touch with the Administration and the Congress and strive for their assistance.

The national headquarters are at New York, and for the last ten days the New York offices have been engaged assigning many of its activities to the Irish national bureau in Washington.

Daniel T. O'Connel, a Boston lawyer, has been chosen director of the bureau. Katherine Hughes, the Canadian writer who has been in charge of the work here for several months, will continue as Secretary of the bureau and writer and lecturer for the Friends of Irish Freedom.

GIVE MANY REASONS FOR FALLING FRANC

TRADE BALANCES A CAUSE

Conditions of Settlement of American Claims and Agreements for Food Supplies Are Factors.

By WALTER DURANTY.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Aug. 9.—The feature of the last week has been the sensational fall in the franc not only as against the dollar and sterling but as compared with neutral and even German money. Between Monday and Thursday evening the dollar advanced 10 cents, from 7.25 francs to 7.75, and sterling nearly 40, from 32.20 francs to over 34. On Thursday it was necessary to pay 8 francs for dollars to a considerable amount, and the market closed in a state bordering on panic.

Yesterday there was a slight reaction, attributed to Government intervention. Importers of foreign goods, in despair, declare business is impossible under present conditions, whereby the actual price they pay in foreign money may be 10 or 15 per cent. higher than expected in the period of a single month.

The wildest rumors are current as to the cause of the franc's depreciation. One story blames a German financial manoeuvre to ruin France commercially after having failed by arms. Others suggest the purchase of money for the American Army stocks, to be paid for immediately in dollars.

This is not the case. The Echo de Paris is the first French newspaper to get the correct facts and gives the figure as $400,000,000—upward of 2,000,000,000 francs at the rate of exchange when the agreement was signed—adding that the terms of payment are such as not to affect the value of the franc.

I learn, too, that one of the conditions of the deal is for the French to take over all claims for damages, &c., outstanding against the American Army in France. Though the sum is declared to run into millions, it is unquestionable that many claims have no legal basis. But in getting rid of the whole business the Americans will be saved long drawn out and onerous litigation.

Another explanation of the exchange flurry is that a new agreement with the Allies and neutrals for the supply and transport of food will involve the payment of large sums of foreign money by the French Government. Neither from the banks nor the Stock Exchange is a better reason forthcoming, and the fact of the matter probably is that the situation is the logical outcome, as Minister Loucheur foresaw, of the removal of import barriers at a time when France had everything to buy abroad and next to nothing to export.

The fall of the franc doubtless is being hurried by speculation and by nervous importers who fear higher rates later. If this be the cause the dollar may well go to 10 francs and sterling to forty before Christmas unless definite action is taken to relieve the situation.

HOLD GABELL IN BANK CASE.

Director of Ruined North Penn Is Charged with Conspiracy.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9.—William T. Gabell, a Director of the North Penn Bank, proclaiming his innocence and insisting that it was "all a mistake," was arrested this morning.

He was held in $10,000 bail, charged with conspiracy with Ralph T. Moyer, the cashier, now held in $25,000 bail, and Lewis H. Michel, President of the bank, who is held in $10,000 bail, in having knowledge regarding the unsoundness of the bank, and of accepting deposits when he knew the institution to be tottering.

He was arrested this morning at the Market Street ferry, by Samuel C. Wynne, deputy chief of the District Attorney's detectives, as he stepped off a train from Wildwood. William C. Felton, 1,153 West Venango Street, a former chief of the Bureau of Street Cleaning, and a personal friend of Gabell, offered to enter bail for the prisoner.

Invitations to call at the District Attorney's office have been extended to Ewood H. Strang, former teller of the wrecked bank, and James J. Boland, head of the insurance companies whose affairs are alleged to be interlinked with the ruined concern. Colonel Fred Taylor Pusey, head State investigator, said he had received word from Boland's attorney that Boland would be in the city on Monday. Harry Houck, City Solicitor of Scranton, and Vice President of the defunct New York National Insurance Company, he said, also may call at his office.

Copyright, 1919, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

BERLIN, Aug. 9.—Impressions that among the agitators constantly trying to start a new revolution in Germany are an unusually large number of men and women afflicted mentally by the long strain of war and the violence of the riots which followed, are verified in statements by several specialists who have given the subject close study.

According to Dr. Gotthold Matlock, these disturbers are recruited from the weak-minded and undeveloped, the gifted but impractical intellectuals, and the weak-willed and scatter-brained persons who have been jarred out of their ordinary calm by the successive mental shocks of the last five years so that their unsoundness becomes pronounced.

"Persons from all these groups," said Dr. Matlock, "have for varying periods of time stirred up a lot of dust in their self-bestowed jurisdictions. Dr. George Schlomer told the Charlottenburg Medical Society about one of these world benefactors who believed that in the history of civilisation he ranked above Tolstoy.

"Many of the fanatics are well informed, so that only after a close study does their ailment become manifest. Many of them can talk stirringly about literature, art, and science, and not until we propose some scheme to improve the world, to take over the leadership of the State, and to make people happy can their mental affliction be recognised.

"Professor Sterts differentiates between two groups—fanatics with merely altruistic, and grumblers with merely selfish aims. They are actuated by conceit, longing for power, hatred, and a desire for revenge.

The latest agricultural strike in Pomerania discloses a strange mental process. Two farm hands caught stealing sheep were arrested. Thereupon other workers struck until their two colleagues were released.

MARK GOES STILL LOWER.

Quoted at About One-fourth of Peace Price in Switzerland.

BERLIN, Aug. 8. (Associated Press.)—German marks, the value of which has been steadily falling recently in neutral countries surrounding Germany, reached their lowest point in history in Switzerland yesterday, being quoted at 35 centimes instead of the peace price of 125 centimes.

German financial experts, especially those opposing the plans of Mathias Erzberger, Minister of Finance, assert that this depreciation is due to the proposal to stamp all banknotes and to eliminate the regulation of foreign bills of exchange. They admit, however, that strikes and unrest in Germany are partially responsible.

WILSON WHOLE SHOW COL. ROOSEVELT SAYS

CONGRESS 'RUBBER STAMP'

Accuses Democratic Organization of Trying to Upset American Representative Government.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., Aug. 9.—Lieut. Col. Theodore Roosevelt characterized the President as "the whole show," and called Congress and the Senate "a rubber stamp" at a clambake of the Republican County organization here today. The meeting was for the purpose of talking over the political situation, and also to meet Colonel Roosevelt, who is the Republican candidate for Assemblyman from the Second Assembly District in Nassau County.

Among those present were Secretary of State Francis M. Hugo, Assemblyman Coles, Controller Bennett, County Clerk Thomas Cheshire, and Sheriff Benjamin Seaman. Francis M. Hugo, introducing Colonel Roosevelt, referred to him as "a coming man."

Colonel Roosevelt, replying, said: "The anti-Republican voters of the country do not know which way to turn. It is the duty of the Republican Party to get after these voters and show them that the Republican Party is the only stable organization.

"The Democratic organization," he added, "has done its utmost to upset the American idea of representative government. The Chief Executive has become the whole show and Congress and the Senate merely a rubber stamp."

Secretary of State Hugo, in his speech, referred to Bolshevism as behind the various strikes now gripping the country, and declared that 100 per cent. Americanism would drive out the "serious problem faced by the country."

Both Legs Paralyzed After Dive.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., Aug. 9.—While diving in shallow water today, John Alelleo, 30 years old, of 314 West Sixty-ninth Street, New York, severed his spinal cord, and both legs became paralyzed. Alelleo came here yesterday to visit his brother living at 78 First Avenue. After being treated at the hospital, the injured man was removed to his home.

TO RAISE HOSPITAL FUND.

Rabbis Will Discuss Plans for Washington Heights Institution.

The rabbis of all the Washington Heights and Harlem synagogues will meet at the Philantropin Hospital on Wednesday evening to discuss methods of conducting the campaign for the Washington Heights Hospital Fund. Headquarters of the Building Fund Campaign have been established at 2,076 Fifth Avenue.

Although it is intended to conduct an intensive campaign in the week beginning Nov. 15, work of gathering pledges will begin before that day. Merchants in the part of the city to be served by the proposed hospital are to be asked to give a percentage of their profits on one day of the drive. A request has been sent to the Board of Education to permit school children to aid in the drive.

One wing of the hospital, for the treatment of children, is to be named in memory of Dr. Abraham Jacobi, and the Campaign Committee yesterday made public letters from several physicians indorsing this idea and promising support. One of these letters was from Dr. Francis Huber of 209 East Seventeenth Street, who was at the bedside of Dr. Jacobi when he died.

FLYING DUTCHMEN OUT.

Holland Takes Great Interest in Her First Aviation Show.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Aug. 9.—The first aviation exhibition in Amsterdam, which was opened on Aug. 1, attracted great interest and brought tremendous crowds from all over Holland.

The exhibition has shown, however, that there are few places in Holland suitable for landing large machines, owing to low-lying grounds. The exhibition grounds are no exception to the rule, and practically all the large machines have sunk deep into mud on landing, necessitating the use of ladders to land passengers.

AWAIT GREY'S REPLY ON EMBASSY OFFER

GETS NEWSPAPER APPROVAL

Sunday Times Says Appointment Would Be Peculiarly Grateful to President Wilson.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sunday, Aug. 10.—Viscount Grey of Falloden, former Foreign Secretary, is said in well-informed political circles to be the nominee for the Washington Embassy, whose decision Bonar Law said a few days ago was "well worth waiting for."

"There can be no question," says the political correspondent of The Sunday Times that his appointment would command unanimous approval on both sides of the Atlantic. At first the ex-Foreign Secretary was very averse to accepting the post as, owing to the failure of his eyesight, he felt himself virtually retired from public life, but the Prime Minister has urged on him that he would be rendering the State a peculiar service by taking the post at the present juncture, and he is accordingly reconsidering the matter.

It is no secret that his appointment would be peculiarly grateful to President Wilson, for the two men are of one mind in the conviction that the League of Nations can be made an effective instrument for the good government of the world."

BELGIAN TREATY PUZZLES.

Lansing Knows Nothing of Annex Said to Have Been Ratified.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Official Washington appeared to be in ignorance today as to the text of the annex to the treaty with Germany, reported to have been ratified yesterday by the Belgian Chamber of Deputies, relating to a military convention entered into by France, the United States, Great Britain, and Belgium. Secretary Lansing, when asked as to the nature of the convention embraced in the annex, replied:

"I know nothing about it."

Senator Borah, a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, said he had no personal knowledge of the military convention referred to, but recalled having read some time ago a cable dispatch stating that Belgium had asked Great Britain, the United States, and France for guarantees of aid in the event of unprovoked attack by Germany, along the same lines as the guarantee given to France in the Anglo-American-French Treaty.

"I suppose that this annex pledges the United States, France, and Great Britain to go to the help of Belgium if attacked by Germany," said the Senator. "It is one of those things that has been kept dark. I suppose it will be found hidden in somebody's pocket."

FIREPROOF AIRPLANE SHOWN

New German Machine Is Made of Metal Throughout.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Aug. 9.—According to a Berlin news agency a new flying machine, made entirely of metal, is being exhibited in Berlin. The main part of the machine is made of aluminium. The motor is 160 horse power and capable of making 175 kilometers (100 miles) an hour, carrying six people.

This machine is supposed to be imperishable by fire.

TO GUARD PRINCE'S PATH.

Cruiser Dauntless Will Locate Icebergs on the Shipping Lane.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., Aug. 9.—Special precautions against the possible presence of ice floes and bergs in the path of the battleship Renown, bringing the Prince of Wales to Canada, were taken today. It was announced that the cruiser Dauntless, which preceded the escorting fleet to arrange for the Prince's reception here, would cruise about the Grand Banks for the purpose of locating ice and would then proceed to sea to escort the Renown to her anchorage in Conception Bay. Several unusually large bergs have been reported in the vicinity of shipping lanes during the week.

Preparations for the royal visitor's reception were being hastened today. The cruiser Dragon, to which the Prince will be transferred from the Renown, will enter this harbor Tuesday and will be escorted through long lines of gayly decorated naval and commercial craft. It is planned that the Prince shall land at noon and, after receiving homage from colonial and city officials, ride beneath eight great welcome arches.

DECLARE GERMANY BROKEN.

British Scientists Report That Her Recovery Will Be Slow.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Germany is a broken nation, both in body and spirit, and a long time will elapse before the efficiency of her people is restored, it is declared in a report of British scientists on food conditions in Germany, issued in the form of White Papers today.

The war-time semi-starvation of the people is responsible for the slowness with which recovery will be effected, according to these authorities.

DEPORTED BY COSTA RICA.

New Jersey Official's Brother Not Even Allowed to See His Family.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTCLAIR, N. J., Aug. 9.—A. Tuttle Harrison, brother of Essex County Prosecutor J. Henry Harrison, who was in business in Costa Rica, has arrived at the home of his brother in Caldwell. It is said he was hastily deported by the Costa Rica authorities, without being allowed to see his family. The case is being investigated by the State Department at Washington.

Mr. Harrison is said to have gained the ill-will of Costa Rican officials because of alleged friendliness toward the revolutionary party. He was arrested on the street at night, put aboard a special train, taken to a waiting schooner, and then sent to Panama, where he embarked for the United States.

Mr. Harrison, it is reported, was not given an opportunity to defend himself in a court of law, nor arrange his business matters, nor even to communicate with his family, who are still in Costa Rica. He had been in Costa Rica for more than twelve years.

WANTS TO SUE GERMANY.

Lusitania Victim's Brother Asks Administrator's Appointment.

An applicaton for letters of administration on the estate of a passenger on board the Lusitania, who met his death when that vessel was torpedoed in May, 1915, was made yesterday to Surrogate Wingate in Brooklyn. The applicant was James E. Twining of 296 Madison Street, Brooklyn, who desires to administer the estate of his brother Edwin.

In his application James Twining states that the value of Edwin's estate is not more than $25, but that he is informed that claims of relatives of Lusitania victims when filed through the State Department are to be settled by Germany, and that he wishes to be in a position to prosecute a claim.

The Autumn Suit Blouse Suits Many Occasions

THE time has passed when, if the coat is on, the blouse can be forgotten. The new costume blouse serves several purposes instead of one. A well-dressed woman wants to feel that she can dispense with the suit coat and appear

PROPERLY ATTIRED FOR LUNCHEON, TEA, OR INFORMAL DINNER

For instance, worn with the skirt of a suit, a blouse of midnight blue Georgette crepe made over jade green, and exquisitely embroidered all over in beads, makes a charming costume for afternoon, and even for informal dinner wear. And this is true, too, of the slip-over models of meteor, of tricolette embroidered smartly in Angora wool, and of tinsel Channellette.

As to the neckline, it is as you will—the collarless neck, the bib or roll collar, and, for the woman who finds the high neck more becoming, a choker collar in a new guise; many real lace trimmed. According to materials and embellishments

FINNISH PRESIDENT WANTS ASSURANCES

Stahlberg Suggests Entente Statement That Russia Will Not Be Allowed to Return.

KOLCHAK IS STILL SILENT

Finland Also Expects to Have the Aland Islands and a Port on the Arctic Ocean.

By HERMAN MONTAGU DONNER.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HELSINGFORS, Aug. 9.—Due partly to the President's friendship for the late Senator Otto Donner, and partly to my work in America for Finland, President Stahlberg received me cordially today. The interview conconducted in Swedish.

I began by asking the causes of his election in preference to General Mannerheim. The President replied:

"The primary motive was the longing of the nation to end strife. As a compromise and a triumph of conciliation the Socialist extremists were induced to vote for a bourgeois candidate, hitherto anathema to them. Many Finns felt that Mannerheim, though universally revered for his incalculable services, personal integrity, and conciliatory spirit, was not sufficiently a man of the common people.

"The fact is," said the President, "the Entente's friends, the Progressives and the Agrarians, combined with the Socialists, elected me to prevent a threatened new outbreak of Red turbulence.

"Only minds desirous of creating difficulties or ignorant of Finnish conditions can declare now that Finland is on the verge of a catastrophe. The assertion is absolutely unwarranted. Bitterness is dying down. I am assured of the loyal co-operation of all parties.

"The exchange rate, the pulse of the situation, at first ridiculous, already is rapidly sinking to normal as the inherent law-abiding qualities of Finnish people, accustomed to the management of autonomous institutions, become evident."

I requested a statement of his policy. The President responded:

"In the first place my policy, taking a leaf from Mannerheim's book, will be conciliation, to bend every effort to heal the old bitternesses, considering myself the head, not of a party, but the whole land."

I assured the President nothing could give more complete reassurance to American people to regard his presidency favorably.

Next I inquired the Government's intended foreign policy. The President replied:

"I wish to continue General Mannerheim's excellent policy of keeping the close sympathy of the Entente, especially England, France and the United States. I am grateful for their recognition and anxious for more intimate relationships, not only in industry and commerce, but in the fields of the intellect and fine arts. I am particularly desirous that not only our material, but also our spiritual resources should be more widely known.

"With the new Germany, now that the war is over, while holding it as of foremost importance to cultivate the good graces of the Entente, we desire good relations also. I hope with time the old animosities will disappear, and all nations seek common grounds of agreement."

Respecting Russia President Stahlberg declared:

"The Soviet boasts that the Finnish election meant the triumph of the Bolshevist idea is entirely unjustified. The contrary is true emphatically. The Extremists voted with the Socialist Party organization, consequently they pledged constitutional support to the moderate, conciliatory views known to be held by the successful candidate, hence excluding the continued dependence of the Finnish Socialists on the Bolshevist element in Russia who seek to overturn Finland's institutions favoring proletarian anarchy."

I asked if there was a friendly feeling in Finland for the Omsk Government:

"Yes, in the main, as proved by the help rendered the Russian refugees from Bolshevist terrorists," the President replied. "The effective good will and co-operation of Finland and Russia must depend on Kolchak's willingness, not yet expressed, to recognize the independence of Finland. The Finns would sooner suffer extermination than Russian misrule again."

I expressed the opinion that the Entente never would permit Russian reabsorption of Finland, the British even now having warships protecting the coast. President Stahlberg emphasized a fine sense of relief and a zest for the work of rehabilitation if England and America clearly expressed the intention never to permit either a Russian attack or a fomented revolt.

Regarding the Aland Islands, he said: "The Finnish Government will never consent to their transfer to Sweden, since they were always an integral part of Finland. The future policy carefully considers all the islanders' interests. There is less reason for Sweden to object now that the Russian danger is ended."

Respecting the so-called Karelia incorpo[illegible] the President said:

"Th[illegible]s no forcible incorporation. Finnish [illegible]unteers only helping to expel Bolshevist terrorists. The question of the settlement of the Paris Conference in regard to the Murmansk Coast and the Kola Peninsula, where the population is preponderantly Finnish, justifies the hope of ultimate inclusion within the boundaries of Finland. The Arctic port of Petchenga Bay is Finnish by legal right, though the Russian promise in the treaty of 1864 is unfulfilled." filled."

Answering further requests for official assurances with reference to rumors of Finnish Bolshevism, the President said:

"The statement that 50 per cent. of the Finnish population is Bolshevist, or Red, is absurd. Possibly it is so much Socialist, mainly moderate."

Regarding the much-discussed White Terror, he said:

"None such ever existed. The facts were grossly distorted. The thousands declared massacred included those who died of wounds and disease among the 80,000 captured Reds. The Reds were legally tried and many pardoned. Generally they were humanely treated after the first temporary chaos due to the impossible conditions, the sole result of the Red rebellion."

In reply to a further question the President declared he himself had requested Mannerheim to remain as commander in chief of the Finnish armies as a guarantee of public confidence and the security of institutions.

BRATIANU IGNORES COUNCIL.

Three Notes Sent to Premier—Charles Asked to Take Throne.

PARIS, Aug. 9.—Several of the newspapers today, reviewing the Hungarian situation, said that a series of three notes was sent by the Interallied Supreme Council to Premier J. J. C. Bratianu of Rumania. The first of these invited the Rumanian High Command to stop the advance upon Budapest; the second advised the Rumanian Cabinet that the Allies could not approve the terms of the proposed Rumanian armistice ultimatum to Hungary, and the third expressed the hope Rumania would confer amicably with the Supreme Council. It was said that no answers had been received to any of these communications.

Former Emperor Charles of Austria-Hungary was begged by Magyar patriots to mount the Hungarian throne when the fall of the Peidl ministry was determined upon, according to a dispatch to the Journal from Zurich. The former monarch refused on the ground that, having been king and Emperor, he could not go down the social scale and be content with a simple king's crown.

The Duke of Hohenberg, son of Archduke Franz Ferdinand, whose assassination at Sarajevo in 1914 was the immediate cause of the great war, also refused the crown, according to the dispatch, which says that the Hungarians ended their quest by choosing Archduke Joseph as a last resort.

King Ferdinand of Rumania, who was to have arrived in Budapest yesterday, has postponed his visit to that city, according to a Zurich dispatch to the Journal.

NEW SERBIAN PREMIER.

Davidovics, Leader of Young Radicals, to Form Coalition Cabinet.

BELGRADE, Aug. 9.—M. Davidovics, former Minister of Worship and leader of the Young Radical Party, has been intrusted with the formation of a new Cabinet.

M. Davidovics announced today that he woud attempt to reach an agreement with N. P. Pachitch, former Premier and leader of the old Radical Party, for the formation of a Ministry composed of members of both these parties.

A Vienna dispatch of Aug. 6, quoting Belgrade advices, said that a new crisis had arisen in the Serbian Cabinet. No announcement of the Cabinet's resignation, however, has been received.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Today's morning papers take up more fully the warning of J. Austen Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, that the country is heading straight for bankruptcy.

The London Times Parliamentary correspondent says, ironically enough, that the House of Commons spent part of yesterday afternoon in passing financial resolutions authorizing additional expenditures of £4,500,000, and that the same thing has gone on day after day since the present Parliament assembled. As no House of Commons ever responded so readily to requests for fresh money grants, the correspondent declares that the Commons must share with the Government the responsibility for "our terrific expenditure."

The same writer says that the third report of the select committee on national expenditure will be published shortly and is understood to contain "astonishing revelations" of the way money was spent in the closing stages of the war.

"During the last week," he concludes, "the Cabinet became thoroughly alarmed at the financial position, and it is said that the Prime Minister is personally taking up the question of retrenchment. As an outcome of recent Cabinet conferences there is reason to believe that the Chancellor of the Exchequer will receive powers, not only for the control of new expenditure, but for the cutting down of old. He may be able to show some results in the Autumn, when he will submit revised estimates for the navy, army, and air force. It is confidently stated that all three departments will be required to make heavy reductions in their estimates, which were originally submitted for the financial year."

Charges Bureaucratic Squandering.

In its editorial columns The Times again hits out against the Government for extravagance. Referring to Lloyd George's statement in the Commons on Thursday that it was the Government's business to see that the present "gigantic expenditure" should be cut down at the earliest possible moment, The Times says:

"It will not be cut down by words and we await some practical indication of the steps which the Government propose to take in order to check departmental extravagance. If they would give one small sign, if they would abolish ruthlessly and instantly even one of the many sources of waste through which are exhausting the nation's finances they might again receive some portion of the confidence now denied them.

"So long as the Ministers meet in a spirit of truculent defiance every attempt to stop wastefulness, the gulf which separates them from the public will steadily widen. Every day brings fresh examples of willful squandering on the part of the bureaucracy."

In dealing with the new profiteering bill, the same editorial says it conveys the impression that "it was framed by a Ministry which, as Mr. Chamberlain admits, has no time for thought. That is the cardinal defect of all the Government's actions. Their authority dwindles because they lead the nation to believe they only act under pressure, that they move with spasmodic and unthinking haste, and that they have long forgotten their first duty, which is to conserve the liberties of the citizen."

Deplores Talk of More Taxes.

The Daily Mail, in a leading article headed "Waste, Waste, Waste," takes up Mr. Chamberlain's warning that if the expenditure is not reduced taxation will have to be increased. It says:

"Does he really think that the country can stand more taxation? He knows why the Victory Loan was a disappointment, if not a failure. It was because the country is dismayed at the wanton extravagance of every department of the Government, and people who scraped up their last sovereigns to win the war hesitate now to give money to the Government to be wasted.

"There is no hope in increased taxation. To increase taxes is like feeding a dog on its own tail. Our only hope of salvation is to reduce expenditure drastically in every department. The Ministers seem to compete with each other in an appalling rate of expenditure. Their underlings vie with each other in the size of their staffs and in recklessness of cost.

"Helpless wailing about extravagance from a Chancellor is worthless. What we need is action."

The Daily Telegraph says editorially:

"We shall only get away from the broad path which leads to National disaster when the Ministers and the House of Commons have the moral courage to say, 'No, the public cannot afford it' to large and powerful sections of the community when they are presenting their demands.'

"Take the army and navy pay, for example. When is the continual increase to stop? Unemployment doles—when are they to cease? The bread subsidy—when is that to be given up? What would have been said six years ago if any one had prophesied that the State would soon be paying a quarter of the price of every loaf consumed by the rich and poor alike?"

PARIS COMPLAINS OF CABLE DELAYS

Communication with the World Slower Than in the War Days.

MANY "INDEFINITE DELAYS"

Bulletin Board of the Bourse Central Telegraph Station Tells a Story of Trouble Everywhere.

By WALTER DURANTY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Aug. 9.—The Peace Conference has completed the war disorganization of cable service from Paris. Delays on messages in every direction are greater now than at the worst period of hostilities and the universal censorship. French business men declare the situation interferes most seriously with commercial reconstruction. It is impossible, for instance, to communicate with the French colonies in the Far East in less than a week, which often drags out to a fortnight.

At the Bourse Central Telegraph station there is a notice board giving the State cable communications which is interesting reading. Under "Europe" are the following notices:

"Very great delays with England. Serious delay with Belgium and Portugal. Urgent messages no longer accepted for Great Britain or British possessions. Communication with Russia by England only, delivery very hazardous; messages accepted at sender's risk; no reimbursement. Anglo-Belgian cables and Zante-Corfu cable interrupted. Communications with Albania and Montenegro interrupted. Cables to Levant greatly overcrowded. Cables to Greece and beyond forwarded latter part of transit by mail. Very great delay in all messages by Malta."

What exactly are the conditions at Malta or the reasons for the holdup there none seem to know, but the results are appalling. A French correspondent informed me that messages he sent recently from the Black Sea region and Constantinople via Malta took a fortnight to reach Paris and three prepaid dispatches out of eleven literally vanished from the face of the earth. He is unable to get news of them or reimbursement.

An American colleague beguiled by the promise of transit to take eight hours or twelve at the worst, sent stories of the transatlantic flying boats from Lisbon to his paper in Paris via Malta. The faster dispatch took four days, the slowest nine, and one utterly disappeared.

Concerning America, the Notice Board begins ominously:

"North Atlantic routes, very great delay. Urgent messages to United States may be sent via Angio, but as England does not recognize 'urgent' they only obtain priority as far as Havre. Communications with Costa Rica interrupted. Routes to Jamaica via Porto Rico, and Jamaica and Colon interrupted. Messages to Panama accepted in English only. Telegrams to Santiago de Cuba and interior of Cuba subject to indefinite delay. Cayenne-Salinas cable interrupted." Asia is still worse.

"All Near East very overcrowded, serious delay. Messages to Palestine, Syria, Hedjaz, (where there is actually cable station in the sacred city of Mecca,) transmitted via Alexandria, Egypt (via the fatal point of Malta,) thence by mail. Indefinite delays. Messages to Persia suspended. Moulme in route and Cape St. Jaques-Pontianak cable interrupted. Messages to Japan, China, and Far East sent via Malta, very important delay. Vladivostok and Irkutsk dispatches accepted via Malta and Nagasaki indefinite delays."

Japanese correspondents say communications with Tokio averaged ten days to a fortnight, and sometimes over a month. They have tried the ruinously expensive route via New York and San Francisco, with a delivery of five to nine days. The African statement says: "Abyssinia interrupted. Dahomey provisionally suspended. Offices shut in Mauretania. Non-urgent messages for Libya forwarded latter part of transit by mail. For Canaries, messages not accepted via Brest-Dakar line. Nemoura-Chafarinas route interrupted."

For Oceania, the case is:

"Messages to the Caroline Islands, sent via Japan, indefinite delay. Direct route Tahiti interrupted, messages forwarded from Apia. Owing to the interruption of the Guam-Manila line, communication with the Philippines by North Atlantic routes suspended until further notice."

SAVING KAISERS' STATUES.

Germans in Thorn Fear Poles Will Destroy Them.

THORN, July 17. (Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—The Germans are carefully removing all bronze statues of former Kaisers from Bromberg and Thorn lest the Poles destroy them on their arrival.

The statue of Frederick the Great at Bromberg already has been taken to Schneidemuehl and re-erected there. That of William the Great will be removed in a few days and the former Kaiser's statue at Thorn will be taken from the market with a festival parade. The German Government will be asked to erect it elsewhere. Memorials of Bismarck and other German chiefs also will be removed from the bridge across the Vistula River.

MEXICAN BANDITS BEATEN.

Embassy Says Jameson Has Surrendered—Stolen Goods Uncovered.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—President Carranza has advised the Mexican Embassy here that the bandit chief, Roberto Jameson, has surrendered to Mexican forces in Coahuila and that bandits in the Tamesi River region have been attacked by Government troops which recovered eighty-six horses and more than 200 head of cattle, some of which probably were stolen from American citizens.

The Transition of Fashions from Summer to Autumn

INDIVIDUALISM, AS USUAL, IS THE STYLE MOTIF FOR THE FALL FASHIONS, INITIATED BY THIS SHOP

The Fine Art of Dress for women and the "jeune fille" finds its highest expression in the ability to create such types of apparel as are unusual, the ability to avoid the commonplaces and hackneyed repetitions—to temper the tendency toward extravagances with the restraint and repression necessary to achieve elegance with refinement, dignity with youth. In short, to personalize the modes in a manner that makes them true complements to one's individuality.

Frocks and Gowns

These preliminary showings of Autumn frock and gown fashions emphasize the charm of simplicity. No matter how sumptuous the material nor how complex the treatment of detail, the terms of simplicity in which Bonwit Teller & Co. gowns translate the mode are their outstanding charm. Tailored frocks take form in serge, tricotine, knitted silk fabrics, duvetyn, meteor, satin, georgette crepe, featuring plain tailored models, subtle in their effectiveness and elaborations of embroidering, beading and fringes. Gowns of a more formal character for the ceremonious dinner or evening fete.

DUVETYN

Tailleurs, Coats & Capes

Of prime importance is the high character of the tailoring and the finesse of these garments. Typical individualized Bonwit Teller & Co. modes developed with the precision and elegance of detail associated with the finest custom tailoring.

EUROPE MUST WORK, DR. TAYLOR WARNS

HOPE IN THE HARVESTS

Austria Will Have to be Fed for a Year by Some Other Country —A Hint to Germany.

Dr. A. E. Taylor of the University of Pennsylvania, and Chief of Surveys of the American Relief Administration, returned from a tour of the war-torn countries of Europe yesterday on the steamship Patria. Dr. Taylor said Central Europe is now more occupied with the harvest under way than it is with matters political.

Poland, Dr. Taylor said, faces a hopeful situation, although there is a great scarcity of work horses in that country. The crops that are being harvested promise to cover about three-fourths of her requirements. He said that it was gratifying to note that in Poland the production of coal is increasing. The political sky will cloud frequently during the year, he said, and one reason for this is that the racial problem in Poland is one of the hardest to solve that the country faces.

"The present Premier, Paderewski, so well known to the American people as an interpreter of Chopin, is today as remarkable in the political world as he ever was in the world of art," said Dr. Taylor. "All Americans who have come into close official association with him testify warmly to his unusual intellectual ability."

Austria is in very bad shape, Dr. Taylor said. With a population of 6,000,000, and with 1,000,000 of these in the capital, Austria, he said, cannot be self-supporting agriculturally, and, added to her other troubles, her currency is practically worthless, and she will have to be fed during the next year by some other country. He pointed out the wonderful opportunities for development in Austria through her water power; that she might join Germany and share her fortunes, or she might become a charge upon the charity of the world.

Czechoslovakia is in good condition, said Dr. Taylor, and the Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes are busy harvesting a good crop. In Rumania a small crop is being harvested, and that is because the Germans stripped the country. Rumania is being carried to the harvest by American and British foodstuffs.

"The great defect in Central Europe today, indeed, in Europe as a whole, is failure of production," he continued. "Loss of man-power is not responsible for the condition, since in all countries unemployed men are drawing out-of-work stipends. The causes of the reduced productivity may be summarized under six headings:

"1. Scarcity of coal.
"2. Scarcity of raw material.
"3. Scarcity of food.
"4. Depreciation of currency.
"5. Disinclination to work on the part of labor.
"6. Loss if initiative and enterprise on the part of capital.

"Before the war, Europe, outside of Russia, imported fourteen or fifteen million tons of bread grains, of which nine or ten million came from overseas. During the coming year, Europe, outside of Russia, will need twenty to twenty-two million tons, practically all of which must come from overseas. These foods Europe must have, or anarchy will supervene; and it will do little good if subsistence and order are secured in some sections while destitution and disorder occur in others, since gangrene in one part of Europe will spread. These importations of foodstuffs, however, Europe cannot finance without credits. And these credits Europe cannot expect or afford to assume unless she returns to production. Each nation has several lines of production in which an exportable surplus may be produced. If this exportable surplus fails, the sound basis of importation is lost. Coal in England is an illustration in point. England used to export seventy-five million tons of coal, upon this exportation was based not only the financial foundation for her importations, but also her entire program of shipping over the world. Each of the new states in Central Europe faces in certain industries the same situation that the United Kingdom faces in coal.

"The world worries too much about political conditions and too little about economics. Throughout the peace negotiations, everywhere in Europe, there has been undue prominence to the subject of boundaries. Now, the various nations, winners and losers alike, are facing intense internal struggles in economics and industry, toward which the possession of boundaries means little. Unless a boundry means a corresponding production, it has little value for any state.

"These same remarks apply to Germany. The sooner that Germany forgets her colonies, Alsace and Lorraine, the rectification of the Belgian frontier, the gateway of the Poles to the Baltic Sea, the correction of the Schleswig frontier, and the loss of Posen and Upper Silesia, and settles down to work within the boundaries remaining to her, and with her maximum remaining resources, the better it will be for Germany."

TRAFFIC OFFENDERS HEARD.

Six Licenses Announced Revoked as Result of Previous Hearing.

Secretary of State Francis M. Hugo presided yesterday at a hearing in Special Sessions to decide whether several offenders against the traffic laws should have their licenses revoked. In opening the hearing Mr. Hugo announced that as a result of the first hearing on July 19, six licenses were ordered revoked.

Those whose licenses were revoked as a result of the July 19 hearing were: Frank Agell of 662 Eleventh Avenue, convicted June 30 of running into a touring car; Edward Hooper, a public chauffeur, convicted on a charge of driving a car while intoxicated; Charles McGee of 2,220 Grand Concourse, the Bronx, convicted on May 9, on a charge of driving a car while intoxicated; Samuel Krauss of 124 West Forty-seventh Street, convicted on a charge of driving a car while intoxicated; Joseph Tambini of 197 Hudson Avenue, Brooklyn, convicted of driving a truck while intoxicated, and Genji Keneko, a Hindu, 148 West Sixty-fifth Street, chauffeur for Mrs. A. W. Nalley of 194 Riverside Drive, for reckless driving.

Evidence was taken yesterday in the following cases: John L. Brady of 372 East 139th Street, a department store chauffeur; Louis Flaum of 2,363 Valentine Avenue, The Bronx; Harry Follet, 350 West Forty-second Street, and Martin Lacy of 436 Tenth Avenue. Decisions in these cases will be rendered at the next hearing Aug. 25.

port 200,000,000 francs worth of grain this year and also large quantities of oil.

M. Misu has been without communications from Bucharest since the setting up of Archduke Joseph's Government at Budapest. Wireless communication is so poor, he asserted, that couriers between Paris and Bucharest some times are faster than the wireless.

The Rumanians in Budapest are allowing the Hungarians only 600 gendarmes to patrol the city, according to news from American officers there. These officers declare that a greater force is necessary if the new Government is to be enabled to effect an organization and function properly. The Americans insist upon the view that the Government must have forces to preserve order outside the city as well as within it.

If the relief measures planned are permitted to be carried out effectively, the American officers give it as their opinion that the new Government will be able to perfect its organization.

The American advices confirm the reports that the Rumanians are gathering up all kinds of animals and all sorts of supplies to be sent to Rumania.

GENEVA, Aug. 9.—The Interallied Mission at Budapest, after a conference with Archduke Joseph and Premier Friedrich, has forwarded to M. Clemenceau, President of the Peace Conference, a report to the effect that the Entente representatives are in full accord with the new Hungarian Government, according to a Vienna dispatch received here.

State of Siege Reported.

VIENNA, Aug. 9.—A state of siege has been proclaimed in Budapest, according to advices received here.

It is reported that in view of pogroms which had been threatened in Hungary, menacing the Jews, the commander of the Rumanian troops has issued an order that any crime against Jews will be punished immediately by death.

BERLIN, Aug. 9. (Associated Press.)—A description of some of the members of the new Hungarian Government of Archduke Joseph as received here today says that Colonel Tanezos, the Minister of Foreign Affairs, held a political military position in Bulgaria during the war and that he left Bulgaria shortly before the Bulgarian request for an armistice in September, 1918.

Professor Jacob Bleyer, Minister of Nationalities, is described as the chief protagonist in Hungary for autonomy of foreigners under Hungarian sovereignty and is a leader of the clerical Anti-Semitic Party. The remainder of the Cabinet of Archduke Joseph is given as follows:

Minister of the Interior, Adolf Samassa; Education, Dr. Alexander Inure; War, General Franz Schnitzer; Finance, Dr. Johann Gruenn; Hygiene, Dr. A. Sillery; Justice, Dr. Bela Szalay, and Agriculture, Dr. Roland Gyoery.

A transition Government, with representatives of the bourgeoisie, peasants and workmen will be formed shortly, it is understood.

At the request of the Budapest officials Archduke Joseph has created a volunteer force of 8,000 men to keep order in the capital. The Archduke will take up his residence in Ofen Castle.

The Rumanians are reported to be guilty of further acts of violence in Budapest. General Mardarescu, head of the Rumanian occupying forces, it has been announced, will retire from the city and most of his troops will be withdrawn within a few days.

Vienna advices say it is understood the action of the Entente in creating a military commission of four Generals to supervise the situation in Budapest has had a depressing effect upon the Rumanians.

The Rumanian Army officials at Budapest have forbidden the newspapers to print the note of Premier Clemenceau announcing the creation of a mission of allied Generals to go to Budapest in an attempt to adjust the Hungarian situation and take charge of the armistice question, according to reports reaching here.

An English and an Italian aviator, learning of this, left Vienna and flew over Budapest, dropping thousands of placards containing Premier Clemenceau's message. The Rumanians then prohibited telegraph service between Budapest and Vienna for twelve hours.

The Hungarian proletariat and bourgeoisie have expressed fears that a monarchy is coming in Hungary, while the adherents of the Szegedin Government and Royalists are openly championing the monarchistic ideal. Airplanes last night dropped placards over Budapest proclaiming "King Joseph." Some quarters credit him with the ambition to become King, but say that he wants "for family reasons and piety to be compelled."

The Social Democrats are much averse to having the reins of Government in the hands of Archduke Joseph, and it is improbable that any Socialist will participate in his Government.

Some circles describe Archduke Joseph as indifferent whether the new Legislature elects him President of Hungary, and say: "He has, as a Hungarian patriot, thrown his great popularity into the balance in order to work against the confusion existing."

BERNE, Aug. 9.—An official Rumanian statement declares that reports of excesses by Rumanian troops in Hungary are false, according to a dispatch received here from Bucharest.

SEES NEW DUAL MONARCHY.

Italian Paper Speculates on Annexation of Slav Nations.

ROME, Aug. 8.—Commenting on the situation in Hungary, the Popolo Romano suggests the possibility that Archduke Joseph, the head of the new Hungarian Government, is "aiming to restore the Hapsburg monarchy and again join Vienna and Budapest."

"The annexation of Croatia and Slavonia may follow," the newspaper says, "as these two regions are even more bitter against the Serbians than against the Italians. The Hapsburg Empire, having lost only Galacia and Bohemia, then would consider Fiume as its natural outlet. That is why Fiume was refused us. We must keep an eye on Trieste also, the last disorders there having assumed the character of a political plot organized by pro-Austrian elements."

SOCIALISTS PROTEST.

Say Policy of Allies Aids Reaction in Hungary.

LUCERNE, Aug. 9.—A resolution criticising the allied policy in Hungary as reactionary and one suggesting united action to face "counter revolutions menacing everywhere" were adopted today by the Socialist Conference in session here.

The resolution protesting against the Allies' action in Hungary, presented by Pierre Renaudel, Majority Socialist leader of the French Chamber of Deputies, was adopted unanimously. The resolution asserted the Allies took advantage of difficulties in Hungary to aid the counter revolutionary movement to re-establish the Hapsburgs. The course of the Peace Conference, it said, "shows clearly the reactionary force directed against each Socialist Government and each proletarian power." The resolution ended with an appeal to all Socialist groups to oppose "this capitalistic and imperialistic policy."

Herr Crespien, a German delegate, violently attacked the German Majority Socialists, whom he accused of desiring another war. Herr Weis, a German Majority Socialist, defended his party.

Efforts by Bulgarian Socialists to form a union of the Balkan nations that should preserve the autonomy of each State was advocated by the Bulgarian delegate Maikoff. A similar federation for Russia was urged by M. Soukomlinoff of the Russian delegation.

CLAIMS NEW HEIGHT RECORD

PARIS, Aug. 9.—Maurice Walbaug, flying an airplane with one passenger aboard, claimed to have established a world's record today by reaching an altitude of 7,800 meters (25,590 feet.)

The world's airplane altitude record was claimed recently for Adjutant Casale of France, who reached a height of 23,136 feet in June, but in an airplane that carried only the pilot.

Lieutenant B. Papa of Italy, carrying a passenger, was credited in December, 1917, with an unofficial altitude record of 23,212 feet.

RADICALS' MENACE HALTED BY WILSON

Leadership in Cost-of-Living Problem Averted Railroad Peril, Says Observer.

NEW ISSUE AIDS TREATY

By CHARLES H. GRASTY.
Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—This has been a week of real progress in Washington. Several very important matters have been cleared up. The most important is that this is no Soviet country. Sovietism struck with its full strength and the blow failed to land. The railroads and labor are still in a serious position, the high cost of living remains a problem, and there is unrest throughout the country, but there will be no revolution, and the settlement will be otherwise than on Bolshevist lines.

The test has been sudden, but thorough. Neither the President nor Congress can be coerced into extremes by any interest, however powerful, and public opinion all over the country has rung back true against yielding to the mischievous proposals of organized might.

The labor leaders shockingly overplayed their hand. Perhaps, also, the immediate collapse of the attaque brusque was partly due to the fact that they are dealing with a different country—a country that has just participated in a war against brute force, and helped to win it. Such a country cannot be bulldozed to its teeth by anybody.

It was leadership that lined up the moral and practical forces in this first skirmish to maintain Americanism in the reconstruction period. Congress opened the way for President Wilson. It pointed to the trouble and stood aside for him. He "went to it" like a fire department to a fire.

The contingent who returned from Paris said that he had struck his Paris stride. He had been at disadvantage in the kind of controversy that the Senate had been carrying on, but real trouble does not embarrass him. When the demand of the railroad workers for increased wages was made he saw the vulnerable point in a moment and hit right at it.

The strike, which would have paralyzed the country within a few days, and for dealing with which nobody had any definite idea or plan, was stopped by the President's seeing the simple reality that was staring everybody in the face all the while. He handled the question of the cost of living with the same promptness and directness.

He is a man of action—much more of one than he was when he went to Europe. As every observer has remarked, the student, orator and writer has developed into an efficiency expert. He sees things coolly and clearly; he tackles them energetically, never being a minute late at an appointment, which means in his case scrupulous order, and he is adamant against being put off the main line to the big results that he is trying for.

There is no limit to the amount of work such a man can do. The more of it that is put on him and the bigger it is the better it pleases the President. It is the pinpricks that worry and annoy him. In the present great activities he has a colleague to suit in Attorney General Palmer, and any of the others in his entourage, who are not used to doing things, will, it is said, be galvanized into life.

New Issue Will Help Treaty

He has not relaxed in regard to the treaty. Indeed, as indicated in his address to Congress, he holds that that matter is fundamentally and indissolubly connected with all our domestic problems.

In most of the comment I hear it is considered fortunate for the President that the new situation shaped upon the lines it did, and the fact that he took hold of it instantly is pointed to as showing how open-minded and alert he is.

He is heart and soul for the treaty and will leave no stone unturned to get it ratified and make its operation successful afterwards. But it is generally believed that even if the railroad and cost of living situation had not become suddenly acute, the public would have lost interest in a long contest between the Senate and the President, no matter how important the subject was at bottom.

In the new turn of affairs the President has an opportunity to show his leadership in matters that come home to the people and they will measure the efficiency of his effort in Paris to some extent, at least, by the results accomplished here.

It is believed among those friendly to the Administration that President Wilson will not in any way avoid responsibility in meeting the problems of reconstruction. He had not made a deep study of the railroad situation, owing to his absence and his preoccupation with the treaty which he held to be of first importance.

It is not improbable that his liberalism inclines him toward some scheme of recognition of labor in the reorganization and future management of the railroads. The plan of including labor and the shippers, as well as the stockholders and bondholders and the Government has been much discussed by liberals at Washington. Now that President Wilson has himself taken over the problem it is thought that he will try to solve it by putting the railroads on the best basis to serve the country rather than seek to placate the opposing interests within them.

For years the railroads have been steadily falling behind in upkeep and extensions, and unless something thorough-going is done to restore them not only will current needs in transportation be neglected but the whole progress and future of the country will be compromised.

The President's lightning action with labor and his visit to the Capitol with definite proposals on the cost of living are said in the circles friendly to him to foreshadow a general and aggressive drive for results with every Government agency controlled by him co-operating. His return to America has brought home to him the tremendous importance of domestic reconstruction, and he is said to see in large activities in that direction a new means of forwarding ratification rather than a diversion of energy form what he still thinks is paramount in restoring livable conditions.

Progressives May Be Attracted.

In the last day or two there has been heard in opposition circles some talk of a realignment of forces as the outgrowth of the critical conditions in America. The progressive elements in Congress would find themselves uncomfortable if they were put in the position of being obstructionists while the President was working with might and main to solve the great problems on lines that they themselves had professed to favor. In many particulars only personal and temperamental differences separate them from the President.

If Mr. Wilson can be judged by his method of dealing with opposition in Paris, he would be entirely capable in such an emergency as now exists of ignoring old differences and calling to his aid all the progressive elements in the Senate and House in carrying out a large program of domestic reconstruction. He is a good hater, and has been much criticised for narrowness, vindictiveness and coldness. These are matters more of appearance than reality. One of his favorite arguments with the Europeans was that quarrels were mainly due to misunderstanding, and that when people got together and came to know each other differences usually vanished.

A Senator who belongs to the progressive school of thought, but has been a Wilson phobist, said to me after the President's address to Congress yesterday:

"If he wants to forget old scores and approach the colossal problems which confront the country on nonpartisan lines, let the President send for the Senate Steering Committee. They would meet him half way. Let him come to the Senate and take part in the proceedings, as he has the right to do in certain conditions.

"If he wants to rebuild America and the world let him make his acknowledged power of intellectual leadership 'persuasive' by putting with it a little man-fashion magnanimity. He could thus rally the progressive elements to his support. Such a course in this time of peril would tend to overcome resistance in the Senate, and it would do more to strengthen the President in the country than a dozen speaking tours.

"But the President seems to save all his Christian virtues of patience, charity and goodfellowship for the foreign statesmen. A member of Congress who has ever opposed him, cannot pass on the street in front of the White House without feeling the icy breath of his dislike.

"Let us see some of that geniality and personal magnetism which he showed toward the European Premiers even while he was locking horns with them. That would add a hundred per cent. to his efficiency. Human nature is the same here as it is there. It is not right for any of us to indulge our pride and prejudice in such times as these, and we all ought to loosen up and be good fellows, but the President should lead off."

CLARK ASKS HOUSE TO WORK ONE YEAR

Former Speaker Wires Members to Return to Settle Living and Soldier Problems.

REPUBLICANS SCOUT NEED

Nothing on Calendar but "Chicken Feed," Says Mann — Sees Necessity for Vacation.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Champ Clark, former Democratic Speaker, this afternoon urged the House that it remain in continuous session for a year in order to consider the high cost of living and similar great problems of the day. He said he had telegraphed to every Democratic member to return at once.

On the other hand, Republican House leaders, many of whom show small sympathy with the Presidential suggestions for relieving the pressure of the living cost, opposed Mr. Clark's idea. Mr. Mondell, the Republican leader, displayed no liking for the continuous session, saying there was little for the House to do. James R. Mann, predecessor of Mr. Mondell as leader, even asserted that the best thing the House could do would be to adjourn for the Summer, as there was virtually nothing on the calendar except "chicken feed." Debate extraneous to the idea of adjournment intervened for two hours, and when the matter was again taken up the House stopped work until Tuesday at the suggestion of Claude Kitchin, former Democratic leader. What is to be done about a vacation may be decided then.

Mr. Mann brought up the matter today by saying:

"The House could remain in session twenty-four hours a day, seven days in the week, and it is a wonder some one has not proposed it; but we all know it would not expedite business, and it would not make for good legislation, as it will not make for good legislation now to attempt to keep the House here all Summer and Fall and next Winter. It is not for the best interests of the country to have that done, no matter how seriously some gentlemen may take the legislation.

"The work now before the House is the work of the committees. It would be a good thing if most of the members would go away from Washington and get rested and get their souls eased. If we could wind up all the legislation forever I would be in favor of it, but it cannot be done. Most of the bills now on the calendar are 'chicken feed.' It could be disposed of or wasted, and the country would suffer no loss."

The former Chairman of the Interstate Commerce Committee, Representative Sims of Tennessee, Democrat, reminded Mr. Mann that the Cummins bill, restoring to the Interstate Commerce Commission the rate-making power transferred to the President during the war, had been reported out by the House Committee. The bill has already passed the Senate. But Mr. Mann replied:

"That is absolutely unimportant and comes as near being 'chicken feed' as anything could be."

Champ Clark, in opposing the suggestion for a vacation, said:

"We might as well recognize and meet the situation we are in. It is apparent to old timers in the House that we are stuck here, probably until December, though for prudential reasons we ought to have a few weeks' intermission before December. We are likely to be here until this time next year.

"I am notifying every Democratic member, by letter and telegram, to come back. We should go on with our business. A bill for the benefit of the soldiers has been on the calendar for a week. I do not regard that bill as 'chicken feed,' and this House ought to do everything it can at once for the benefit of the soldiers. Those of us who stay here are entitled to have business transacted, and it must be transacted."

"There are enough tariff bills on the calendar to occupy the House for a week," interrupted Representative Green, Republican, of Iowa, member of the Ways and Means Committee.

"The longer they are put off the better it will be for the country," replied Mr. Clark.

Belgium Buys Surplus Army Food.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Approximately $10,000,000 worth of American Army foodstuffs stored at Antwerp and the Hook of Holland has been sold to the Belgian Government, the War Department was advised today by Judge Edwin B. Parker, Chairman of the Liquidation Commission now in Europe. The money is payable in three years at 5 per cent. interest.

BABY DANTE BORN AT SEA.

Italian Reservist's Daughter Named for Ship That Was Her Birthplace.

The Italian steamship Dante Alighieri arrived yesterday bringing 1,060 steerage passengers, the largest number to arrive from Europe since the beginning of the war. Most of them were Italian reservists, who left the United States where they were living to respond to the call to the colors. They were in many cases accompanied by their wives and children.

The big event on the trip was the birth on board the Alighieri of a daughter to Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Mittoria. The father lived in Brooklyn, and he went to Italy for military service and married while there. The baby was called Beatrice Dante, the last name in honor of the ship. The baptism of the child was made the occasion of much ceremony. The welfare workers on board provided the baby's wardrobe, and a Y. M. C. A. worker acted as godfather.

In addition to the steerage the vessel brought 299 cabin passengers, including a number of Red Cross, Y. M. C. A., and K. of C. welfare workers.

ANNUAL AUGUST SALE OF FUR GARMENTS
Coats—Wraps—Capes
Neckwear & Muffs

Distinctly of American Origin in Design and Workmanship

Model Ermine Wrap 2250.00

MONTHS of careful preparation have culminated in this most important event. Pelts were chosen from thousands to insure Best & Co. standard of quality. Many makers representing the superior skill of American Labor have been employed to produce these fur garments. Useless and costly foreign models have given way to American design—more representative of the well-dressed woman of refinement. In short—Best & Co. standards of quality and ideals of fashion have been faithfully executed by our own capable organization supplemented by other of the best of American fur talent.

The Logic of an August Fur Sale
ECONOMY IS THE KEYNOTE OF THIS EVENT.
Savings are possible now. The same quality fur garments cost less today than later for two important reasons:—
First—because we are satisfied to sell for less during the Summer months or normally dull period—for the purpose of extending the selling season.
Secondly—by reason of the limited supply of fur pelts—the finer pelts are naturally manufactured and sold early in the season.

In the selection of fur garments for this event unusual emphasis has been laid on style and quality. The furs offered are notable examples of an economical article of dress. Made up to Best & Co. standards of quality—they represent a true investment for months and years of serviceable wear.

Scotch Mole Coats
Seldom in other years has it been possible to produce rich mole garments for so low a price. Lengths from 30 to 48 inches.
AUGUST SALE PRICE 295.00 to 825.00

Nutria Coats
Our search for the finest pelts and producers of nutria coats has been notably successful. These coats are splendid examples of Best & Co. standards.
AUGUST SALE PRICE 150.00 to 450.00

Hudson Seal Coats
Made of finest quality seal-dyed muskrats. Coats of this standard fur are offered for almost their cost at wholesale to duplicate.
AUGUST SALE PRICE 225.00 to 875.00

Gray Squirrel Coats
AUGUST SALE PRICE 325.00 to 850.00

In addition to the garments mentioned specifically—our stock is complete with fur coats and wraps in a wide variety. These are chiefly represented in Broadtail, Alaska Seal, Mink, Caracul, Ermine, Kolinsky, Leopard, Black Pony, Marmot and many others.

ASKS PUNISHMENT FOR PARK ROWDIES

COST RUNS INTO THOUSANDS

Complaint Sent to Magistrates in Hope of Bringing Heavier Penalties.

Vandalism in the parks in the Bronx was the subject of a letter of complaint yesterday by Park Commissioner Joseph P. Hennessy of the Bronx to Chief City Magistrate William McAdoo, who ordered that copies of the letter be sent to every magistrate. In his letter Commissioner Hennessy complained that with 106 convictions obtained only $165 in fines were imposed; that it costs the department $100 a day to clear away the rubbish left in the parks; that twenty-seven hatchets had been confiscated from persons and that many trees had been chopped down by rowdies.

The wires inclosing flower beds have been cut time and again, benches have been repeatedly overturned and more than a thousand broken bottles were picked up during one week, were other statements made by the Commissioner. The complaints are substantiated by Police Inspector James J. Savage of the Eighth Inspection District, and several foremen of the various parks in the Bronx. According to the list submitted by Commissioner Hennessy, which was furnished by the Police Department, fines in only a few instances exceeded $1 a person. In two cases where trees were damaged suspended sentences were given. In two other cases in Van Cortlandt Park, where offenders were actually caught chopping down trees, suspended sentences were also imposed. The Commissioner's letter in part is as follows:

"Since my appointment as Park Commissioner of the Bronx I have addressed myself particularly to this subject, as the vandalism practically goes on unchecked. We have to depend largely upon the police force, and where it is possible for the police to render aid, it is most willingly done. A number of Magistrates impose fines which appear in keeping with the situation, and which no doubt have a deterrent effect. In other instances Magistrates seem to be extremely lenient. This is said without desire for criticism, except to state facts.

"Destruction of park property is at times almost unbelievable. It costs this department about $100 a day to clean up rubbish promiscuously thrown into the parks, consisting chiefly of broken bottles, newspapers, and lunch refuse. The cost of property destruction is an item that it would be hard to figure. The destruction of trees, plants, shrubbery, branches, and other property constantly goes on.

"I have at hand a report made to me by Inspector Savage of the Eighth Inspection District under date of July 3, 1919, for the month of June, embracing Pelham Bay Park, Bronx Park, and Van Cortlandt Park. It shows that throwing paper on the lawns is a common occurrence. The whole stretch of one of our parks some weeks ago was littered from end to end with paper, a distance of three-quarters of a mile on either side of the main road. It took practically the entire force of park laborers assigned there a whole day to pick this up.

"The fines imposed for breaking shrubbery, climbing trees, and breaking tree branches do not seem to have a deterrent effect. Breaking bottles is a very vicious thing, because it results at times in personal injuries to others, and where thrown on roadways is a menace to automobilists. Last Summer, in a period of one week, 1,000 broken bottles were picked up in an area of ten acres. Inspector Savage's report shows that there were 106 convictions for various offenses, and the total fines in the aggregate were only $165. Incidentally, you will notice the Boy Scouts are included in the ranks of offenders."

CHILE FREES GERMANS.

SANTIAGO, Chile, Aug. 9.—The Chilean Government has set free the crews of the German cruiser Dresden and the German raider Seeadler, the members of which had been interned in this country for a long period, the men of the Dresden since 1915.

The German cruiser Dresden was sunk by British warships near Juan Fernandez Island on March 14, 1915. The sinking occured in Chilean waters, for which circumstance the British Government apologized to Chile. Three of the crew were killed and the remainder, about 500, were transferred from Juan Fernandez Island, where they were first landed, and interned at Valparaiso.

The Seeadler, which had a sensational career as a sea raider in the South Atlantic early in 1917, finally was stranded on Mophea Island, in the Pacific, early in the Fall of that year. Her crew of fifty-eight men reached Easter Island in a sloop, and were brought to Valparaiso on March 4, 1918, being interned there by the Chilean Government.

MEDAL FOR ADMIRAL FISKE.

Aero Club Honors Inventor of the Torpedo Plane.

The Board of Governors of the Aero Club of America announced yesterday that they had awarded the gold medal of the club to Rear Admiral Bradley A. Fiske, U. S. N., retired, for his invention of the torpedo plane, patented on July 16, 1912, which was used effectively during the war. Announcement was also made of the receipt of the following letter from Rear Admiral Fiske:

"I hasten to express my gratitude to the Aero Club of America for the award of its gold medal and to thank you for your kind letter of presentation.

"To be awarded a gold medal is an honor that any one should appreciate profoundly. To be awarded the gold medal of the Aero Club of America is an honor that is exceptional, because the standing of the Aero Club is exceptional, but though the standing of the Aero Club is very high, the effective work which it carried on throughout the war is not fully appreciated by the nation for the reason that its work was unofficial, and therefore not recognized officially.

"Like many another unrecognized agency, however, its influence was potent and profound. Acting as the advance scout of aeronautic progress, the Aero Club continually gave information to the country of the possibilities of naval and military aeronautics, insisted that those possibilities be utilized, and demanded that Congress appropriate such sums of money as would enable the Government Departments to utilize those possibilities completely and in time.

"Enormous appropriations were then made, but as Congress delayed making them until after we had actually entered the war, the appropriations came too late to permit American atronautics to do as much effective work as it otherwise could in winning it.

"Your letter gives me more credit than I deserve for furthering the cause of naval and military aeronautics. What little I was able to accomplish should be credited to the Aero Club of America and to the press of the United States, which supported the club's efforts with such keen patriotism and intelligence."

Total of 3,165,642 Demobilized Since Signing of Armistice.

SOLDIER WINS PARDON.

Escaped from Texas Prison, Enlisted, and Received Victoria Cross.

Special to The New York Times.

AUSTIN, Tex., Aug. 9.—Governor W. P. Hobby has granted an unconditional pardon to D. M. Delmas, who escaped from the penitentiary here and was recently arrested in Seattle, Wash., where he had gone after being discharged from the British Army.

Delmas, who was serving a five years' sentence for forgery, went to Canada after his escape, where he enlisted. He won the Victoria Cross, was wounded five times, and won a commission. In issuing the pardon Governor Hobby wrote that while Delmas has erred he had wiped away the stain upon the battlefield.

TO ABANDON CAMP MILLS.

Soldiers, After Aug. 10, Will Be Demobilized at Dix and Upton.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Camp Mills, Long Island, will be discontinued on Aug. 10 as a demobilization camp for special casual companies, the War Department announced today. These companies will be sent direct to Camp Upton. Air service units that have heretofore passed through Camp Mills will be sent to Camp Dix.

The work of the aviation concentration camp at Garden City, New York, also will be completed as soon after Aug. 9 as possible, and its demobilization personnel transferred to Camp Upton.

PANAMA FEARS FOR CANAL TREATY

PRESIDENT PORRAS ANXIOUS

Senator Walsh Sends Him Reassuring Message on the Terms.

PANAMA, Aug. 8.—Dr. Belisario Porras, President of Panama, expressed anxiety, in a statement issued last night, over the attitude of the United States Congress toward the first article of the American-Panama treaty guaranteeing Panaman independence, in view of the objections voiced in the American Senate to Article X. of the League of Nations covenant, which is similar.

"Senator Walsh, (of Montana,)" President Porras said, "in a speech which appears in the Congressional Record of June 11, defending the right of the President of the United States to fulfill such an obligation without resorting to Congress for a declaration of war, mentioned the treaty between Panama and the United States. In this treaty the latter guarantees and maintains the independence of Panama.

"As the objections in the Senate to the League of Nations are mainly by Republican Senators and as the Republican Party was mainly responsible for the approval of the treaty with Panama, there is felt in my country a certain anxiety in regard to the attitude of those Republican Senators of today because of the influence they may exercise in determining whether or not the first article of the Panama treaty, which is analogous to Article X. of the League of Nations covenant, is binding on the United States, in view of the constitutional questions raised in the Senate.

"In view of the debate in the American Senate about the League of Nations covenant, and especially about Article X., which binds the high contracting parties to respect and preserve the territorial integrity and the present political existence of all nations constituting the League, Panama wishes to know if the Senators opposing the covenant hold beliefs that justify fears entertained by the Panamans regarding the ultimate fate of the United States' obligation to maintain our independence."

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9. — Senator Walsh of Montana cabled to President Porras of Panama today that he entertained no doubt whatever of the binding force of the obligation upon the United States to protect Panama from external aggression under the terms of the treaty between the two countries.

The Senator's cablegram was in reply to a message from President Porras, which was identical with the statement given by the President to The Associated Press.

"As expressed in my speech," Senator Walsh's cablegram read, "I entertain no doubt whatever of the binding force of the obligation on the part of the United States recited in Article I. of the treaty with Panama. You will also be reassured by the fact that Senator Kellogg, (Republican, of Minnesota,) made a speech in the Senate on Thursday last concurring in the view taken by me as to the right of our Government to enter into such a treaty. The Senate Judiciary Committee is now called upon to express their opinion upon the subject for the information and guidance of the Senate."

BROOKLYN IMPROVEMENTS.

Borough President Issues His Report for Six Months.

Brooklyn will benefit to the extent of millions of dollars in the way of local public improvements, according to a report of Borough President Riegelmann issued yesterday showing the amount of street repair and repaving, sewer work and building operations for the period from January to July. Each of the departments under the Borough head show a marked increase over the last war years. The list was prepared by Public Works Commissioner Joseph A. Guider.

Repaving contracts let during the first half of this year amount to $741,-401.95. Repaving contracts ready to advertise are given as $690,600. The report shows that $232,721.69 has been let thus far, while there are contracts ready to be advertised for street improvements aggregating $180,600. Sewer contracts let amount to $937,-488.03, and additional contracts amounting to $918,500 will shortly be published.

The total of the foregoing amounts is $3,701,417.67, and in addition to those recited there are $500,000 more in matters still pending either in the local boards or before the Board of Estimate and Apportionment for which the President expects final authorization during the next few months.

A comparison of the amounts in money for street repaving and improvement for the present year, as against that of last year shows the effect of the war regarding labor and materials. In 1918 the sum expended for this work was $209,582.91, as against the present authorized sum of $1,845,429.64.

The work of the Sewer Bureau was seriously hampered during the previous year owing to war conditions, and little was accomplished, as against the present authorization of $1,855,088.03.

JOB BUREAU NEEDS FUNDS.

Will Continue Re-employment Efforts for Service Men.

The Re-employment Bureau for Soldiers, Sailors, and Marines announced yesterday that subscriptions were coming in slowly in response to its appeal for money to continue the work until Nov. 1. About 3,000 men still are listed with the bureau, and the officials hope to find jobs for them in the next month.

"During the three months that the Re-employment Bureau has been operating it has found jobs for almost 13,000 men who served with the army, navy, and Marines," said the announcement. "Almost 26,000 men have applied for positions. It is costing $5,000 a week to conduct the bureau. As announced last Monday, the sum of $75,000 is needed to continue the work of the committee until Nov. 1. Responses to our appeals for funds are coming in very slowly. If the public knows what this bureau is doing and approves of the movement we trust that more public-spirited citizens will contribute toward maintaining the organization."

A plea that employers in the trades offer soldiers a chance to become apprentices was also made by Executive Secretary Smith. He announced that heads of labor unions had manifested a desire to co-operate with the Re-employment Committee in starting men in as apprentices, and urged that employers stretch a point, if necessary, to aid the soldiers.

STRIKING ACTORS CLOSE THE GLOBE

were open and distributed handbills to passers by. The bill read as follows:

"In spite of all statements to the contrary, the Actors' Equity Association only asks for collective bargaining as upheld by President Wilson. We only ask that our grievances be arbitrated, and agree to abide by the result."

George M. Cohan, who stood in front of his theatre before the matinée, preparatory to going back stage to play a part, was the centre of an interested throng, and accused the actors of lacking the courage to come to the theatre themselves, and sending women in their places.

The entire company was present at both performances of Ziegfeld's "Follies," although there had been three strikers on Friday night. Officials of the Actors' Equity Association announced that Mr. Ziegfeld had said that he was not a member of the Producing Managers' Association, whereupon his actors had been told to return to work. Several managers, however, declared emphatically that Mr. Ziegfeld is a member of the association.

"And I'd like to see any actor walk out on my first act and try to get back into the second," one added, referring to Eddie Cantor's sudden decision to rejoin the "Follies" in the middle of the performance on Friday night.

The centre of popular interest shifted from Forty-second Street to Forty-fifth Street yesterday afternoon, and the street in front of the "secret" strike headquarters, at 160 West Forty-fifth Street, was crowded all day and most of the night by actors and curious onlookers. Here, among other activities, chorus girls were being recruited for a special branch of the Equity, and as they marched into headquarters each successive batch was cheered.

Among the chorus girls who joined were twenty from the new "Passing Show of 1919," which had been in rehearsal at the Shubert preparatory to its première at the Winter Garden next month. The twenty girls had been addressed by Equity delegates outside the stage door of the Shubert, and were marched in a cheering line to the Equity office. A similar attempt was made to enlist the chorus of the present Winter Garden attraction, but here a counteraddress by the stage manager kept them in line.

In Forty-fifth Street the environment was not unlike that of a radical gathering. Volunteer speakers sprang up at intervals from the crowd, and harangued those who would listen. No attempt was made by the police to keep the street clear, and traffic proceeded with difficulty all afternoon. Bulletins on the strike's progress were posted in front of the Equity Headquarters, and these helped to draw the crowd.

The Equity Association said that new members were applying steadily, but gave out no figures. The managers announced last night that Carlotta Monterey, well known in musical comedy, had sent her resignation to the organization.

Blinn Quit with a Blessing.

Holbrook Blinn's resignation followed his statement on Friday that his sympathies were with the actors, but that he was compelled to continue acting by reason of a contract and a financial interest in "The Challenge." In his letter of resignation he set forth his position again, and concluded by wishing the association "good luck and godspeed."

William Collier and Alan Rinehart, co-stars in "The Challenge," sent in their resignations to the Actors Equity Association last night. In the telegram forwarding his resignation, Mr. Collier said:

"I hereby tender my resignation from the Actors Equity Association as I am very much adverse to their action in closing up theatres by ordering a so-called strike."

Among its new members yesterday the Equity announced Harry Fox, Blanche Ring, the four Dooleys, (Gordon, William, Johnny, and Raw.) Chic Sale, the Watson Sisters, Gertrude Vanderbilt, Ralph Herz, and Helen Westley. The addition of Miss Westley, it was said, made the "John Ferguson" company at the Fulton Theatre 100 per cent. Equity.

Harry Mountford and James William Fitzpatrick, heads of the vaudeville branch of the Associated Actors and Artists, issued a statement to the vaudeville people in their organization urging them not to appear in strike-affected theatres. This organization, the old White Rats, has been secretly adding members, Mr. Mountford said, and is now stronger than is generally believed.

The order, however, did not keep the managers from using in their revues such vaudeville acts as they desired. At the Winter Garden and the Forty-fourth Street Theatre the shows were again largely vaudeville, and bore little resemblance to the entertainments which they were supposed to be. At both of these theatres money was refunded upon request.

Although "The Red Dawn" closed at the Thirty-ninth Street Theatre last night, the strikers could not claim credit, as the passing of this attraction came about in the natural course of events. Motion picture producers, mindful of the many idle theatres, were busily offering feature films as substitutes, but the managers, in most cases, were not inclined to look upon them with favor.

The plans of the managers for the resuscitation of the stricken shows during the coming week are varied. "Listen, Lester," it is believed, will resume tomorrow night. "A Voice in the Dark," at the Republic, will get under way again tomorrow with an almost entirely new cast. Here the strike call was answered by William B. Mack, Florine Arnold, Anne Sutherland, Frank Monroe, and Stewart Wilson, among others. Olive Wyndham, the leading woman, was among those who remained. A. H. Woods, the producer, has drawn Lowell Sherman, Zelda Sears, and Eugenie Blair from other productions whose rehearsals were halted, and they will play tomorrow.

Only two or three players, including the veteran, William H. Thompson, and Thais Lawton, stayed in "The Crimson Alibi." Rehearsals have begun with new players, and it is hoped to reopen late in the week. "Oh, What a Girl" will reopen late in the week, and "The Five Million," at the Lyric, is expected to reopen tomorrow. The task of reorganization was somewhat easier there, since another company was already in rehearsal.

"East Is West" plans to resume at the Astor tomorrow or Tuesday, and "Lightnin'" somewhat later. Frank Bacon, co-author and star of this play, will continue to act. "At 9:45" is also expected to resume at the Playhouse.

The Producing Managers' Association at a meeting held yesterday passed a resolution offering financial aid to all actors who remained loyal to their employers but who were forced out of work by the action of strikers. It was announced also that the depleted casts were being rapidly filled and that the theatres would resume business as usual during the coming week.

Paul N. Turner, counsel for the Actors' Equity Association, commenting last night on the managers' statement of Friday, said:

"The managers declare that they will bring suits against the striking actors, but so far they have not done so. In every Equity contract the Actors' Equity Association is designated as the representative of the actors. The members of the managers' association have served notice upon the actor and his association that in the future they would not deal with the association in any matter concerning the actor.

"They have, therefore, pledged their word that they would not observe the terms of the various contracts upon which they propose to come to court, and would be endeavoring to enforce a contract which they have already definitely repudiated."

Chicago Pledges Aid.

Grant Stewart, secretary of the actors' association, announced that he had received a telegram from actors in Chicago pledging allegiance and another from legitimate actors now making motion pictures in California. The wire from Chicago was signed by Thomas A. Wise, who was previously said to have resigned from the actors' organization; Grant Mitchell and other players appearing in "A Prince There Was," "Cappy Ricks," "Scandal," "Sunshine" and "Up in Mabel's Room." The actors, it was said, announced their willingness to strike when the word was given.

The telegram from the motion picture actors, which made reference to the "tyranny, arrogance, and injustice of the managers," was signed by H. B. Warner, William Courtleigh, George Fawcett, Vincent Serrano, Milton Sills, Bert Lytell, Earle Browne, and others. A telegram of congratulations was also received, it was said, from Lillian Russell.

"Chu Chin Chow" was played twice at the Century Theatre without being molested, but Morris Gest, fearing the possible effect of picketing upon the players, gave a dinner to the company in the Century Grove, thus making it unnecessary for the actors to leave the theatre between performances.

Another theatrical dinner took place last night at the Hotel Knickerbocker, where George M. Cohan entertained the entire "Royal Vagabond" company, chorus included. Mr. Cohan, still reading much of the part from a manuscript, played in "The Royal Vagabond" at both shows yesterday, and announced that he would continue to act until the actors' strike is definitely broken.

ACTORS' FIRST DEMAND IS FOR RECOGNITION

With Equity Association Accepted They Then Want Differences Arbitrated.

Recognition of the Actors' Equity Association by the managers and arbitration of all differences, Francis Wilson said yesterday, were the sole issues involved in the theatrical strike now gripping Broadway. Mr. Wilson, as President of the Actors' Equity Association, is the storm centre of the present fight.

The original demand of the actors for payment for holiday matinées is now included, Mr. Wilson said, in the general demand for arbitration between the Producing Managers' Association and the Actors' Equity Association. Even should the arbiters decide in favor of the actors, he declared the new conditions are not to become effective until the Fall of 1920.

Willingness on the part of the theatrical managers to treat with the Equity Association and to arbitrate differences will mean the end of the strike.

In defense of the stand taken by the actors Mr. Wilson yesterday gave the following statement to THE TIMES:

"What the actor is fighting for is the right to representation without unjust taxation—a slogan under which our grandsires fought and won. The actor insists, first, that managers shall recognize his representative association, and, second, that the manager shall not tax him under unjust conditions.

"That is the issue which the managers thus far have arrogantly, autocratically, refused to consider seriously until recent action on the part of the actors emphatically called it to the manager's attention.

"What is needed in the amusement world, it would seem, is an organization of managers who are more in harmony with modern thought, modern methods of co-operation, and the treatment of those with whom they are associated, and what is especially needed is an organization of managers whose standard of business ethics, as a great American has said, is of a distinctly higher grade.

"The producing managers, if reported correctly, have declared that such a state of irresponsibility now exists among actors that it is feared any future contracts with the Actors' Equity Association would be endangered. They give this as a reason for denying recognition to the Actors' Equity Association.

"Perhaps it will ease their minds if it is recalled to them that in a previous 'gentlemen's agreement' between actors and managers all but two or three of the managers flagrantly violated this 'gentlemen's agreement.'

"Thus far, then, in any co-operative understanding between managers and actors the danger has been distinctly the actor's.

"It is somewhat comic, too, to read the belated declaration that managers wish to go on record as being in no way opposed to the American Federation of Labor, when again and again they have frantically endeavored to influence prominent actors and actresses by averring that their association with members of that body would be a degradation to them as artists.

"Managers, with mole-like vision, failed to see that their refusal to recognize the Actors' Equity Association is a distinct insult to the American Federation of Labor, in that the Actors' Equity Association is a regularly constituted branch of that body, and through its officers and the collateral branches has been promised every assistance in its struggle with the managers.

"The attention of the managers has again and again been called to the fact that in their refusal to recognize an organization of business employes they are going contrary to the dictum of two Presidents of the United States—that the right to collective bargaining for collective protection is conceded, is no longer contestable.

"The attention of the managers is again called to the fact that in refusing to recognize the Actors' Equity Association, in refusing to arbitrate matters in dispute, the responsibility of precipitating another strike upon an already overstruck world is upon them, and not upon the actors—for the managers have laid down conditions so humiliating and degrading that no other course was open to the actors as men and women."

"The Greenwich Village Follies," which was to have been transferred from the Greenwich Village Theatre to the Nora Bayes Theatre tomorrow night, will instead continue at its original house. This attraction, housed in an independent theatre, has not been disturbed by the strikers, but the Nora Bayes Theatre, to which it had planned to move, is under the management of the Shuberts.

BURGLAR USED A LADDER.

Climbed Through Second-Story Windows of Several Apartments.

Tenants and the janitors of apartment houses near St. Nicholas Avenue and 123d Street compared notes yesterday and found that a burglar had entered half a dozen different apartments through their first and second floor windows by using a twelve-foot ladder, which he had left lying in the court. The janitors reported that the cellars had been ransacked and their own smaller ladders examined and tossed aside.

Morris Aronas, of 601 West 123d Street, lost most of his silverware. Mrs. A. Lennan, of 1,445 St. Nicholas Avenue, lost a gold watch and several dresses. Mrs. Gertrude Morse's apartment in the same building was also entered, but the intruder was frightened away by her son Joseph.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold A. Bergman were asleep in their rooms in 605 West 182d Street when a flashlight in their faces aroused them. They jumped up, but the man ran out of the room and locked them in. They were prisoners there for two hours. They reported the visitor had looked over their clothes, but had thrown them aside and taken a violin.

BOSTON POLICE ORGANIZE.

Believe Fight for Pay Rise is Foreshadowed by Union.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., Aug. 9.—It was stated today in Boston police circles that Frank H. McCarthy, New England organizer of the American Federation of Labor, has in his possession an American Federation of Labor charter for the policemen, and that at a special meeting of the members of the new union next week he will install the new organization.

According to report the charter list carries the names of 1,200 patrolmen, all members of the Boston Social Club, the policemen's organization. This going ahead with their unionizing plans in the face of Commissioner Curtis's opposition is believed to foreshadow a determined fight to obtain an increase in pay all along the line.

HOLD ALLEGED SLAYER HERE

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Frank Quigley, wanted in Chicago for the murder of William Biegel, cashier of the Metropolitan State Bank, during an attempted holdup of that institution last March, has been arrested in New York, according to information received today by Maclay Hoyne, State's Attorney. The man held at New York maintains, however, that he is Frank A. Hudson, a Chicago wholesale liquor dealer.

Information leading to Quigley's arrest was supplied to the State's Attorney by a jilted sweetheart, Mr. Hoyne said.

The arrest of Quigley, who is charged with having fired the shot that killed the cashier, brings into custody all three men said to have participated in the attempted robbery. The others, William P. Brady and William Fox, are awaiting trial on a murder charge. Both are said to have confessed.

The arrest of the man believed to be Quigley was made yesterday by detectives from Police Headquarters after a message had been received from the Chicago prosecutor that the man sought by him was staying at the Hotel Monterey, at ninety-fourth Street and Broadway. The man is listed at Police Headquarters as Frank Quigley, and the police said last night that he had admitted to them that "he had been mistaken" when he said his name was Frank A. Hudson. Several pistol cartridges found in his room at the Monterey were taken by the police.

TWO FLIERS FALL 200 FEET.

Burning Plane Drops in River at Holyoke—Both Saved.

HOLYOKE, Mass., Aug. 9.—Two naval aviators narrowly escaped death this afternoon when the Curtiss seaplane in which they were flying over this city burst into flames and fell 500 feet into the Connecticut River. The men crawled out on the wings of the plane and were rescued by a rowboat. The seaplane was destroyed. A boat filled with children in the vicinity caught fire from the burning machine, but the blaze was extinguished before much damage resulted.

The rescued men are Ensign Melvin Pride and Chief Machinist's Mate Charles Milford. The seaplane was one of a squadron of three which has been touring New England in the interest of recruiting for the naval air service.

FINNS TO BE FIRST IN ANARCHY INQUIRY

Grand Jury to Hear Lusk Evidence Tomorrow with Justice Weeks in Charge.

LABOR UPRISING ADVISED

A Revolution of Violence Advocated in a Monthly Periodical Seized by Police.

The evidence gathered by the Lusk Commission will be placed before the Grand Jury at an extraordinary term of the Supreme Court to be convened tomorrow morning in pursuance of an order issued by Governor Smith. It was announced yesterday that the court will be presided over by Supreme Court Justice Bartow S. Weeks. The evidence will be presented to the jury by Chief Assistant District Attorney Alfred J. Talley and Assistant District Attorney Alexander I. Rorke.

Mr. Rorke, who has been assigned to the commission for some weeks, said last night that in all likelihood the first case to be presented before the extraordinary session of the Grand Jury would be that of the three Finns who were arrested charged with advocating criminal anarchy through literature circulated from a plant at 860 Caldwell Avenue, the Bronx.

Among the propaganda turned out, Mr. Rorke said, was a bi-monthly publication, The Class Struggle. Some of the articles have been translated. Here are some extracts Mr. Rorke made public:

"To get away from the capitalistic slavery, the Government, we have to do this work in the only practical way—mass action."

"According to our understanding, on the field of battle one can only fight by the organization of union. The masses have to be organised to more technique."

"Don't ask your comrades during strikes to remain peaceful, because that encourages the class in power. Don't show them any more friendship. Don't support them with your almighty work, but organize into mobs."

"Destroy everything which gets in the way of your aspirations and is the property of your enemy."

"A rioting mob is the only possible way of organizing a fight in every-day as well as in these last open and decisive battles of the capitalists and the working classes."

"To hell with the peaceful teaching of revolution. The only possible seizure of power by the working classes is bloody, because as long as our enemy is able to raise even one sword a bloodless fight is a daydream."

PERSHING NOT RECALLED.

Paris Hears False Report—On His Way to Belgium.

PARIS, Aug. 9.—A report was current in Paris this afternoon that General Pershing had been recalled suddenly to the United States, but it met with no confirmation when inquiry was made regarding it at the General's office here. The report had it that General Pershing might even abandon his visit to King Albert of Belgium, planned for Sunday, but it was stated at the General's office that no one there was aware of any change in his plans.

General Pershing's special train, in fact, was at Lille this evening, taking him to Belgium for his visit.

BELGIAN CLAIMS AGAIN EXCITE NETHERLANDERS

Frontier Questions, Thought Disposed Of, Are Brought Up at the Paris Conference.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Aug. 9.—The Dutch press once more is greatly agitated over the revision of the 1839 treaties, which at present are up before the Commission of Fourteen at Paris. After the decision of the Paris council presided over by Secretary Lansing, the Dutch predicted an easy walkover in the contest with Belgium, and the press was exultant over the diplomatic triumph at Paris. The fact that Mr. Lansing presided at the council made the Dutch all the more triumphant over the decision, and insinuations were even made in the press that Belgium had been deserted by America and the Allies.

As the Paris council decided that the revision of the treaties should include no territorial concessions the Netherlanders are now highly indignant that the Belgians are allowed to put forward and discuss territorial changes and strategical defenses at the conference.

For some weeks there has been great uneasiness here about Belgian propaganda in Belgium and, as the papers assert, in Paris also. Columns of protest again appear in the press here, fighting the Belgian propaganda, especially the arguments used by the Antwerp Chamber of Commerce in its recent appeal to the Allies. The Nieuwe Courant says the report concerning the first conferences of the Commission of Fourteen indicates it will be well for the Dutch people to give some evidence of the strong interest in this country for these important negotiations. The Belgian people are beginning to realize, it says, that they spoiled their own interests by giving prominence to the senseless demands of certain committees, and the campaign against Holland assumes a different form, says the paper.

"We must be on our guard against the present cooler and more circumspect policy. We must not allow ourselves to be caught napping, but must redouble our wariness for the very reason that there is great danger of regarding Belgium's present demands as less serious in comparison with the original claims."

The paper points out the psychological effect similar propaganda had during the war, and refers to the propaganda for a plebiscite in Limburg. Meantime the Dutch propaganda against what they call annexationist demands has been renewed, and bicycling societies, singing societies, fooball clubs, &c., from the district involved send telegrams of loyalty to Queen Wilhelmina, protesting against annexation. The Roman Catholics, who attained a majority in the Chamber by Catholic Limburg, are also active in stirring up patriotic protests.

WOMEN'S FALL DRESSES

New Fall Gowns, surpassing in style, grace and beauty those of any previous season, have just arrived, bringing tidings of delightful new fashions.

Glowing Satin and Georgette Crepe were chosen for them, as these materials lend themselves so readily to free flowing styles and may be draped artistically. They have been fashioned into loose Russian effects and modes that feature deftly draped tunics. Lace is used as trimming, as the vogue for lace is great this season. Effective touches of it appear at the neck or yoke. Obtainable in Navy Blue and Black.

GRAIN ELEVATOR EXPLOSION KILLS 8

LOSS PUT AT $1,800,000

PORT COLBORNE, Ontario, Aug. 9.—Eight persons were killed and a score injured, seven of them seriously, in an explosion which wrecked the large Government-owned grain elevator on the Welland Canal here this afternoon. Four of the bodies have been recovered. One has been located in the débris of the elevator, and three others are in the wreck of the barge Quebec, which lies on the beach outside the harbor, where she was towed to prevent her sinking. The financial loss is estimated at $1,800,000.

The known dead are Allie Beck, 30, body on board barge Quebec under débris; Burt Dunlop, also on the Quebec; Lorenzo Dunham, 56, crane operator, killed on dock; Alfred Leslie and Eli Mechener, elevator workmen; William Cook and Joseph Hanham, sailors, and Joseph Latour, a brother of the captain of the Barge Quebec.

The Superintendent of the elevator, D. S. Harvey, was among the injured. Two of these may die.

The explosion occurred shortly after the elevator hands returned to work from dinner. The concussion shook the whole town, and windows in nearby buildings were smashed. Flames spread through the wreckage, but because of fireproof construction they soon burned out, and an hour after the explosion rescue parties were at work.

The condition of the interior of the elevator indicated that the explosion occurred and spent its greatest force in the upper part of the structure. The roof was blown off, and parts of it fell a mile away. The elevator legs and bins below were broken up and crashed through the ground floor.

The steamer Quebec, moored at an elevator leg, was smothered under a pile of similar wreckage as she heeled over, and a huge rent was torn in her side by a block of concrete that came from the top of the elevator. The barge quickly began to list forward, and to prevent her sinking with the injured pinned to her decks, she was towed outside the breakwall and beached.

The elevator was built eight years ago at a cost of $2,000,000. It had a capacity of more than 2,000,000 bushels, and the bins were said to be about one-third filled with grain, mostly wheat.

Can't Use Old Films for New

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—The W. H. Productions Company has been ordered by the Federal Trade Commission to discontinue the retitling of old motion picture films featuring William S. Hart without "clearly, distinctly and unmistakably" indicating to the public that they are old films renamed. In announcing its decision today the commission said it had found that the previous practice of the company was an unfair method of competition.

W. J. Mulligan Tells How Organization Sent Relief at Paderewski's Request.

SENT MATERIAL TO SIBERIA

Miss Elizabeth Perkins Describes Work of Committee for Devastated France—Says Many Need Food.

William J. Mulligan, chairman of the Knights of Columbus Committee on War Activities, returned yesterday on the French liner Savoie, from a two months' tour of war activities abroad. He announced that during his stay abroad radical changes had been made in war relief work.

The Knights have ceased their process of extension and converted it into one of intensification of war work. While in Paris Premier Ignace Paderewski of Poland sent for Mr. Mulligan and urged the K. of C. chief to send supplies and secretaries into Poland for the 25,000 Polish American troops there. This Mr. Mulligan did, ten carloads of material under convoy of fifteen secretaries going into Poland, renewals being made as they are needed. Transportation in Europe, he declared, is quickly getting back to normal, despite disturbing conditions.

"Our work in Poland was most necessary," said Mr. Mulligan. "The reports sent back to Paris by our secretaries confirmed everything Premier Paderewski had told me concerning the great need of Americans in Poland for K. of C. aid.

"Generally, war relief work has been substantially diminished. The Knights of Columbus have only something over 500 secretaries overseas now. The bulk of these are with the Army of Occupation and at western ports. At Brest and other ports, as at Antwerp in Belgium, we have greatly intensified our work, so that every man awaiting transportation home receives personal attention. We have ten huts in full operation at Brest.

"In London we are still working at top speed as also in Ireland. We accommodated thousands of men who went to England for the peace celebration recently, and were honored by an inspection visit by General Pershing.

"We have also co-operated with the A. E. F. in the educational work overseas, having secured many professors. One of our secretaries became a professor of agriculture at Beaune University.

"The Knights, the chairman declares, have shipped many tons of material to Americans in Siberia, Garry McGarry, the musical comedy actor, being K-C secretary in charge there.

"We intend to remain overseas just so long as there is need of our services," said Mr. Mulligan. He described the present living conditions in France as much improved over what they were three months ago. "The frequent strikes are inconvenient," he said. "The Savoie was held up three or four days before she finally sailed."

Another returning worker on the Savoie was Miss Elizabeth Perkins, 65 East Fifty-second Street, who went overseas with members of the American Committee for Devastated France. She told of the work of the people to build up their homes and cultivate the soil. She said that near the Aisne River about 15,000 persons in the villages are in want of food.

Miss Margaret Ogden Mills of this city, who has been abroad several months, visiting her sister, the Countess of Granard, also returned. Another returning American was Major James B. Munn, son of Dr. John P. Munn, of 18 West Fifty-eighth Street. He has been serving with the American Staff in Paris under Brig. Gen. W. W. Hawkes; the Marquise Theodoli and two children; Lieut. Commander Jean Lafargue of the French Navy, and Rudolph Ganz.

Lord & Taylor are pleased to announce what they believe to be the largest and most important rug transaction of recent years--the purchase of the entire of Joseph Wild & Co., Fifth Avenue, New York, who have retired from the retail business

THE stock consists of Antiques, Semi-Antiques and Modern Rugs in Persian, Turkish, Indian and Chinese weaves.

THEY range in price from $25.00 to $6500.00 (far below present wholesale cost) and in size from 2 feet square to 20 x 34 feet.

Of special interest is a rare collection of antique Chinese rugs, in small and room sizes, ranging in price from $15.00 to $2000.00

Those who are acquainted with the influence which Wild & Co. have exerted in the importation of Oriental Rugs—how they successfully pioneered this industry through every stage of development—will appreciate the advantages that are now being offered. With Oriental Rugs growing scarcer and prices advancing, we believe the values offered to be very unusual.

The Sale will continue throughout the month of August

At your personal request, any rug purchased during this occasion will be stored without charge for late Fall delivery.

GERMAN LIBERALS ISSUE MANIFESTO

Call on People to Win Admittance Into League of Nations by Unmistakable Repentance.

WANT ARCHIVES OPENED

Only Energy of Big Four at Versailles Taught Germans to Feel Ashamed.

A manifesto to the German people, signed by Dr. Richard Grelling, author of the famous brochure "J'Accuse"; Hugo Ball, Karl Ludwig Krause, Dr. Herman Rosemeier, Dr. H. Schlieben, and Dr. E. Stilgebauer, all German radicals and champions of the war of democracy against the former German Government, is published in the Freie Zeitung of Berne of July 2, a copy of which has just been received here. In the manifesto the writers comment on the peace finally concluded between Germany and the Allies at Versailles, explaining that those phases of it which are painful compromises from the point of view of idealists are due to the failure of the German people through their new rulers to give clear evidence of a real change of heart, and calling upon the German people to publish the secret archives of the Imperial Government as a visible token of their moral regeneration, before they can hope to gain an honest admittance into the League of Nations. The manifesto reads:

"The peace had been signed. A new epoch in the life of the nations should begin. Never again must there be war. Never again, in the selfish interests of vain wielders of power and their counselors, may the sword be drawn and the world plunged into a sea of blood. Never again may peoples be ready, with waiver of their inherent rights, to yield themselves to teachings of error such as this most horrible war has led to a wild and ghastly reductio ad absurdum.

"Let a new world era rise. The rule of the spirit over force, the rule of a kindly philosophy over oppression and cruelty. Constant agreement of the peoples that are of good-will. And springing from this, a new productivity, the first task of which will be to clear away the wreckage and ruin of the past history and of these past four years; to clear away for the reconstruction of a shining, better world.

Thanks to Allied Energy.

"Does Germany desire penitently to extend its hand toward this? That is the question. Will Germany show the human insight to say: 'We confess. We wish to serve truth. And we scorn to seek evasion and excuses'? It cannot have escaped the notice of the present and future statesmen of this people, so deeply betrayed by its former rulers, that the mighty powers who hold its fate in their hands have today still retained their distrust. Still, in Germany, do we identify ourselves with the former leaders. Still, in Germany there rages a feeling of indignation about the defeat and the end of autocracy, instead of a joyous and brave advance to meet the beginning of a better time to which the peoples carry up the first building stones for the old tradition of freedom. Never would the nation have freed itself from its blood-sucking autocrate, never would it even have experienced the feeling of its disgrace, but for the firm will of those four men in Versailles, who carried out the conscience of the world with emphasis and unshakable energy.

"For the League of Nations, as President Wilson dreamed it and wished it, a different fulfillment was intended than that which today creates vexation in many disappointed idealists. The peace, it is true, has been concluded, but the League of Nations is merely a beginning, an emergency structure. We do not fail to see that. But we do not fail to see, also, just why the structure still suffers from incompletion. A prerequisite to the admittance of Germany in the League of Nations was its moral rejuvenation, its loyal confession to the laws of truth and justice. Now, Germany, it is true, has put aside her autocracy, but has not yet cleared away the spirit thereof, the menace which this autocracy prepared in the German people for many years, which it fostered, and which it finally castigated.

Still Chained to Old Evils.

"Germany, when the war began, was, in a political sense, one of the most backward of the nations of the world. Germany, after its defeat and under the pressure of the demands of an entire world, is beginning slow efforts to recall the noblest forces of its spirit as a people, to bear itself in a new manner, and to find that standard which can secure for it equal rights among the nations: the standard of democratic-republican self-consciousness. But this yearning for freedom has not yet been fulfilled. Germany still shakes the chains wherewith the descendants and accomplices of the sunken system of Kaiserdom would fain foil the upward swing of the new epoch. The entire civilized world is following this struggle with horror and pity. The League of Nations is waiting—for us. But within Germany dark forces of the past are greedily at work to bring to shame the clarifying products of this war and the hopes of mankind.

"If we today step forth in public in order voluntarily to express the guiding principles of our work for the next phase of the development, we can find our motive only in one solicitude, one care: the welfare of our grievously suffering people, an agreement with those nations with which Germany must henceforth seek reconciliation and peace, if it desires to live and prosper and to make the world forget the crimes of its former wielders of power.

"The moral regeneration remains now as before the highest principle of our demands. Convinced that Germany itself must bring about its acceptance in the League of Nations as well as the alleviation of many a hardship in the peace treaty itself, through the triumph of a new frame of mind, and hoping that Germany will then also find the strength to contribute new thoughts to the further extension of the League of Nations, we who had the advantage of an earlier outlook in neutral lands would like to combine our efforts and help the nation shorten the road that leads to this exalted goal.

"Let us set to work with a new mind; with a purified will that keeps ever in view the general welfare; that recognizes that Germany more than any other nation is today obliged to travel on the road of thought instead of force. As the immediate and most pressing demand, we insist upon the publication of the German archives and documents showing the responsibility for the war; the passionate will to bring about clarity and truth; a union of all those who recognize that the question of responsibility is the most potent instrument to plane away the old system and to smooth a path for the League of Nations and for reconciliation."

ARMY PRISONERS SEE CIRCUS

Attend Camp Upton Society Entertainment for Convalescents.

CAMP UPTON, L. I., Aug. 9.—The Society Circus provided entertainment this afternoon for the convalescent soldiers from the camp Summer resort at Smiths Point and for the prisoners in the guardhouse. All the girls who have been regular attendants at soldier dances were brought in to see the show in motor cars provided by the War Camp Community Service.

General Nicholson, who is giving the circus as a free entertainment, was present, and had as guests a number of Suffolk County Summer residents.

FINDS SOLDIERS AMBITIOUS.

Re-employment Bureau Says Men Only Ask Chance to Work.

The soldiers who are looking for jobs are not hesitating at hard work, but they do express a demand for a job that will lead to something and the chance to learn a trade, according to Alfred E. Smith, Executive Secretary of the Re-employment Bureau for Soldiers, Sailors, and Marines.

"We have three thousand soldiers on our lists all hungry for jobs," said Mr. Smith yesterday. "These men are up against it. Just remember that a $60 bonus does not last forever. And many of them have families to support. They are the finest type of material for an employer to convert into skilled labor.

"The employers of this city have as a whole responded nobly to our call for help in getting these men on their feet in civil life. But there are many employers who have not yet fully realized the serious straits some of our heroes are in at this moment. Last week more than 300 ex-fighters asked us for employment as apprentices, and we were only able to place 80 of them. Note, too, that a man has to eat while he is looking for a job.

"Now what we are most anxious for New York employers to do is to take on these men as apprentices at $16 a week. We have 600 applicants for learning trades and no better apprentices could be found anywhere in the world. Laziness, shiftlessness, shirking, loafing are not in them.

"Looking at it from a strictly business standpoint, a boss should prefer an ex-soldier. These men we are trying to place are matured, experienced, settled men. They can be relied on. They know what discipline means. They have been taught to respect their superiors. They know that an order to report for duty at a certain time means exactly that time. They know the value of promptness."

The Re-employment Bureau has a vocational department where men experienced in the various trades discuss with the returning veterans just what trade they are best fitted for. Major Bigelow, the director of the bureau, is anxious to fit the man to the job as much as possible.

Lionel Hein Assembly Candidate.

Lionel Hein, theatrical agent and vaudeville manager, brother of Silvio Hein, composer of musical comedies and orchestral director, has been chosen by the Democrats of the Tenth Manhattan Assembly District as their candidate for Assemblyman at the September primaries. Mr. Hein has just returned from Italy, where he went to obtain rights for motion pictures for exhibition in this country. During the war he was a Captain in the Theatrical Regiment, New York Police Reserves.

New York Telephone Company

Why not take up Telephone Operating as a Profession or advise your friends to take it up?

We have employed over 1,000 new operators in the past five weeks and we can use 1,000 more for the fall and winter business. They earn over $900.00 the first year—8 hour day and 6 day week. Tuition is free. A salary is paid while learning. Positions are permanent to all who qualify. There are many opportunities for advancement.

BERGOUGNAN TIRE MILEAGE

In order to remove all possible uncertainty as to the service to be expected from BERGOUGNAN tires, and to convince prospective purchasers that they will actually get the number of miles that we guarantee for these tires we announce that arrangements have just been made with the National Surety Co. whereby that organization, which is the largest of its kind in the world, will guarantee our guarantee.

Fabric 6000 miles Cord 8000 miles

Every purchaser of a
BERGOUGNAN TIRE

will receive not only our own assurance that we will live up to the terms and conditions of our agreement, but the National Surety's formal pledge that if we don't make good our promise, they will.

The BERGOUGNAN guarantee has back of it a record of twenty-five years of exact fulfillment of every obligation assumed and the entire resources of the Etablissements Bergougnan of Clermont-Ferrand, France, one of the largest tire manufacturers in the world.

The bond of the National Surety Company is supplementary and additional assurance designed to convince you beyond the shadow of a doubt that this guarantee is to be relied on implicitly and that the terms of it will be faithfully observed both in letter and in spirit. We append a new price list effective August eleventh.

Although BERGOUGNAN tires are guaranteed for a specified mileage, this is not to be taken as indicating that they will not deliver more than this mileage. BERGOUGNAN tires frequently render eight and ten thousand miles and more.

WARNING

Manhattan and The Bronx are threatened with the same transit chaos that exists in Brooklyn. Two things can be done by the public authorities to prevent any interruption of the Subway and Elevated service.

Point No. 1—Increase Fare to Permit Wage Increases.

1. Immediately authorize an increase in the rate of fare to 8 cents so that wages may be readjusted to the cost of living.

Comment on Point 1.

(a) This Company will agree that the City may retain 1 cent out of each 8 to insure interest and sinking fund upon the City Subway investment.

(b) This Company is facing bankruptcy and cannot increase wages without such an increase in fare.

(c) The Company is at peace with its employees, and will agree with them, through their Brotherhood, upon a readjustment of wages, or submit any difference with them on that matter to arbitration if the fare be increased.

Point No. 2—Police Protection to Keep Rapid Transit Going.

2. Take VIGOROUS and PROMPT ACTION to prevent disorder and the intimidation of our loyal employees. The organizers, lawbreakers and followers of the association which has tied up Brooklyn in order to force their outside organization upon the B. R. T. employees are now threatening our employees here.

Comment on Point 2.

(a) The leaders who are threatening to tie up Manhattan and The Bronx are the same men who three years ago sought the same results through violence, dynamiting and destruction of property. Hundreds of their dupes were imprisoned and several of the dynamiters of the Subway are still in Sing Sing.

(b) Interborough employees well earned the right, three years ago, to have the public authorities protect them while continuing one hundred per cent. service on the Subway and Elevated. In spite of dynamite, bombs, revolver shots, deadly missiles and assaults with dangerous weapons as well as threats of maiming and death made to their women folk at their homes in their absence, they kept New York's service going.

(c) Instead of waiting until crime has become rampant and beyond control, police protection, to be effective, must be given the moment a meeting of the agitators breaks up. The police must be sent to all meetings at their commencement in sufficient numbers to see that the groups of so-called "picketers" are prevented from breaking the law. Their mobs must instantly be dispersed and enough policemen must be placed on the trains and platforms to protect every employee and must ACT for their protection. Such action by the police during the first fifteen minutes of trouble will preserve order, maintain proper service and save the honor and dignity of the City of New York.

Our employees through collective bargaining are under contracts which last until the end of the year, and they have declared their intention to live up to their agreements. But they should have more pay to meet the cost of living, and we believe that this is the view of the fair and generous public.

If agitators are permitted to take advantage of this condition to disorganize business, inconvenience the public, intimidate and injure faithful employees and destroy property, this warning will have been in vain.

The responsibility is upon the public authorities.

CUVILLIER ASSAILS GUARD ASSOCIATION

Declares Universal Military Training Essential to Safety of Country.

SECURITY LEAGUE ACTS

Names Committee on Universal Military Instruction and Training.

The military program which the National Guard Association of the United States is expected to favor and which will be urged as a substitute for the Chamberlain-Kahn and the Baker Universal Military Service bills, which are now before Congress, will probably be made public early this week by the Organization Committee of the Guard Association, which will, beginning tomorrow, establish temporary headquarters in the 71st Regiment Armory. The Guard Association will also probably reply in the next day or two to the statement given out by the Training Camps Association on Friday, in which that association assumed full responsibility for the Chamberlain-Kahn bill and also expressed the opinion that a majority of the National Guard officers who served in the A. E. F. would be found to be in favor of the Chamberlain-Kahn bill.

Louis A. Cuvillier, former Chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs of the State Assembly, addressed a letter to Senator James W. Wadsworth yesterday in which he took exceptions to the attitude assumed by the National Guard Association in the present controversy regarding the future military policy of the United States.

"I take exception," the letter said, "to the remarks made by the National Guard Association of the United States, which, in convention in the City of New York, a few days ago, condemned the Chamberlain-Kahn bill, now before Congress, stating: 'This bill is nothing short of conscription under the guise of universal service.' I am surprised that this association did not also condemn the War Department bill in the same category, as both bills are the result of the experience, operation, study, and review of the Chief of Staff of the army, as well as the Committees on Military Affairs of the House and Senate of the operation of the world war.

"The time has passed when each State can depend exclusively on its own State militia for the preservation of law and order, without the assistance of the Federal Government. That was thoroughly demonstrated in the present war, in fact, since 1916 we have had the Federalized militia in each State, and depended solely upon the Chief of Staff and the War Department for financial, tactical, and scientific support. It is true that local State pride is a large factor in the personnel of the State National Guard, but we must sacrifice personal pride for the sake of the safety of the nation.

"Universal service does not mean conscription. Universal service means to teach physically and mentally, in time of peace, citizens the art of war and self-defense; conscription means that all male citizens of a specified age be inducted into the military service in time of war for the protection of his country. And it ill becomes the National Guard Association to state that universal service will establish in America that detestable Prussian system which is abhorrent to the American people.

"The General Staff, which is composed of professional and scientific soldiers, would hardly tend to underestimate the necessity for universal training in this country.

"Your experience as a soldier, as well as my own, in the Spanish-American war, also my experience in the present war, has demonstrated to us that, we must at all times rely upon the National Government for our military efficiency."

Colonel Charles E. Lydecker, President of the National Security League, announced yesterday the appointment of a committee of members of the league's National Executive Committee as the league's "Committee on Universal Military Instruction and Training." The members are Herbert Barry, who served through the war as a Major of artillery, Chairman; Lieut. Col. Eric Fisher Wood, Secretary of the American Legion; Louis W. Stotesbury, former Adjutant General of New York State; Tompkins McIlvaine, member of the Executive Board of the Military Training Camps Association, and Frederic R. Coudert, international lawyer.

The National Security League's National Executive Committee has not met since the introduction of the training bills in Congress, so the league has as yet taken no active position in the renewed discussion of this proposed legislation. Universal military instruction and training has been one of the principal tenets of the National Security League since its organization, and it is assured that the league will take a prominent part in the campaign for some kind of training law.

FAVOR AUTO BUREAU PLAN.

Officials Believe Information Clearing House Would Help Check Thefts.

The proposal of Frank Oliver, Chief Clerk of the Magistrates' Courts, that a central bureau of information be established as a means of checking the increasing number of automobile thefts has been approved by police officials and insurance companies. It was announced yesterday by Mr. Oliver that the plan will be worked out in detail at a meeting which is soon to be held in this city. At that conference will be present the heads of automobile insurance companies, police officials, and the chiefs of Automobile Licensing Bureaus from a dozen States.

Detailed descriptions of automobiles will be on file at the Central Information Bureau, and each distinctive mark will be noted. A history of ownership and proof of ownership will also be kept. A buyer of a second-hand car can demand a history of the car, and if this history does not check with the history of a car bearing the same engine number registered with the Central Bureau, then the purchaser will know that further investigation is necessary. It is claimed the bureau will also make the work of tracing stolen cars easier.

Representative Richard I. McKinley has written to Mr. Oliver that he is working on a plan to Federalize the bureau, contending that any plan only State-wide would fall short of complete effectiveness. This is because of the regular practice of shipping stolen automobiles into some other State and there offering them for sale.

Secretary of State Francis M. Hugo has written to Mr. Oliver favoring the proposed plan. "I think your recommendations are excellent," he wrote. "I will appreciate any further information you have have on the subject. A factory number index has been found worthless since the thief in the majority of instances immediately changes the number and substitutes another."

TO MEET WITH VETERANS.

Local Post Will Attend Encampment of Foreign Wars Organization.

It was announced yesterday at the headquarters of the Veterans of Foreign Wars at 32 Union Square that several hundred of the officers and men of the 28th Infantry of the 3d Division of the Regular Army would attend the annual encampment to be held at Providence, R. I., from Aug. 18 to 21. All the officers and men of the regiment have joined the Veterans and they compose the largest post in the organization. It is called the "Rock of the Marne" post because of the name earned by the regular regiment in its fighting to save Paris in July, 1918.

All the questions affecting the veterans of the last war will be considered at the encampment, and among the questions slated for discussion are army prison cruelties, insurance, vocational education, land allotments, and promotions. The National Council of Administration also is to discuss these topics at a meeting in this city on Aug. 14 and 15.

All the veterans will appear in their service uniforms, and one of the ceremonies to be carried out by the Imperial Order of the Dragon, composed of the veterans of the Peking Relief Epedition, will be the burial of Sam-Shu, who was the Chinese "John Barleycorn." Reduced railroad rates have been offered to all members of the 500 posts.

AUTO DRIVER STAYS IN JAIL.

Plea of Dr. H. W. Brody Following Crippling of Man Is Denied.

Supreme Court Justice Lydon denied yesterday an application by Dr. Henry W. Brody of 4,714 Fourteenth Avenue, Brooklyn, who has an office at 266 East Broadway, to be released from the Bronx County Jail, where he was imprisoned on July 8 on a body execution in a suit by Jacob Jacobson, who was run over by the physician's automobile and crippled for life. Jacobson got a judgment for $45,000 against Dr. Brody in Bronx County but was unable to collect anything.

In asking for his discharge Dr. Brody said he was induced to go to Bronx County to testify in the case through misrepresentation, and when he got there the body execution was served.

Harry G. Guttman, attorney for the plaintiff, who had the defendant locked up, denied his statements, and said the physician was examined in the Bronx at his own request so he could take a pleasure trip to Atlantic City. He declared that at the trial of Dr. Brody Justice Tierney, who heard the case, threatened to send the case to the District Attorney. In the examination the physician said his wife's father pays his house and office rent and his autocars in his wife's name.

Justice Lydon decided that the physician must pay $10 costs in addition to staying in jail.

INDIANS POUND OUT VICTORY OVER YANKEES BEFORE 25,000 FANS AT POLO GROUNDS

INDIANS DROP YANKS INTO FOURTH PLACE

BAGBY DRIVEN FROM BOX

Hy Jasper Comes to Rescue and Holds Home Team in Check—Fine Catches by Smith and Bodie.

The Cleveland Indians pushed the Yankees into fourth place in the pennant race yesterday, when Tris Speaker made his New York début as a manager by separating the Yanks from a ball game by the score of 6 to 4. A crowd of 25,000 was disappointed at the outcome although the fans had plenty of chances during the game to make a noise over their favorites.

Cleveland got to Bob Shawkey early and in the first two innings got a three-run lead. The Yanks got under way in the sixth and tied the score in a rally which knocked Jim Bagby out of the box. Shawkey weakened in the seventh and eighth, however, and the Indians won out easily. Umpire George Moriarty, who was behind the bat, couldn't please anybody with his decisions. At various times the players of both teams and the fans were against him. If it worried Moriarty, he didn't show it.

Shawkey was uncertain from the start and besides nine hits he gave the Indians six bases on balls and hit one batsman. There were cracks in Shawkey's support also, which didn't help any. Hy Jasper did the pitching when Bagby was dismissed involuntarily and, although he was inclined to be wild, he wasn't wild enough to help the Yanks. Nine of the home boys were deserted on the corners. Catches by Smith and Bodie were the fielding features.

Shawkey Starts Badly.

Shawkey wabbled badly in the first inning. After Graney had skied to Bodie, Chapman drew a pass and went to second when Shawkey tossed Speaker out at first. Elmer Smith jammed a double between left and centre and pushed Chapman over with the first run. Larry Gardner punched a single to left, scoring Smith, but Gardner was out at second trying to stretch the hit into a double.

The Yank f inger was also quite liberal with the Indians in the second. After Ruel tossed Wambsgans out at first, Johnston cracked a single to right centre and went down when O'Neill rolled out to Pipp. Bagby boosted his own cause materially by plastering a hit to right which shoved Johnston home. The fuss ended when Graney fanned.

With two down in the third, Shawkey's marksmanship got pretty poor and one of his twisters hit Elmer Smith on the arm. When Smith went down to steal second, Ruel made a perfect throw and Fewster had the runner nailed by eight feet and then dropped the ball. Shawkey again lost the location of the plate and Gardner walked. Further developments on Cleveland's part ended when Wamby hoisted to Pratt.

The 25,000 inhabitants began to sit up and take notice in their section of the third effusion, but there were two out when the fun started and there wasn't much to yell about. Bodie was tossed out by Chapman on a real nifty peg and Ruel lofted to Manager Speaker. Shawkey woke the home populace by spanking a single to left and Fewster set them all to cheering with another single to the same territory.

Vick Fails to Pinch.

Sam Vick of Tennessee received a unanimous invitation to tear the cover off the ball, but while Samuel's intentions may have been the best in the world, his execution was faulty, and he ballooned to Speaker. This temporary outbreak of enthusiasm showed that the crowd was in good voice and was ready to make a fuss over the Yanks at the least provocation.

The fourth inning was enlivened by the flattering attention which was paid to the umpiring of George Moriarty behind the plate. When he gave Doc Johnston a walk Shawkey kicked mildly, but when he called a ball on O'Neill Shawkey began to say things to George which George didn't like. Shortly after this Babgy of Cleveland began to notice something wrong with Moriarty's eyesight and emitted his views on this all-important subject. The crowd joined with the players in trying to persuade Moriarty that he was making himself unpopular.

Shawkey had a monopoly on the Yankee hitting up to the sixth. He started off the sixth with his second single of the game. That blow of Shawkey's was the beginning of a grand old rally, which churned up the fans to a point where they were cheering so hard that some of them got blue in the face.

After Bob's single Chick Fewster started Babgy on the chutes with a smashing double to left centre, which sent Shawkey to third. Sam Vick then enveloped himself in glory with a deadly two-base poke to right centre, sending Shawkey and Fewster home in a riot of vocal tumult.

Baker's Hit Ties Score.

The mob completely lost restraint when Baker came to the bat and whacked the ball high into the right field stand. The ball took a sharp curve and was foul by a few inches. Moans took the place of cheers, but cheers came back into their own again when Baker jabbed a single to right and sent Vick over the plate with the tally which tied the score.

Manager Tris Speaker didn't feel jolly over his New York managerial debut about this time. He used his authority and fired Bagby out of the game, sending Hy Jasper to the hillock. Duff Lewis laid down a sacrifice but was safe at first when Jasper made a bad toss. Pipp rolled to Jasper, and the pitcher threw to Gardner and forced Baker. Lewis tried to steal third when O'Neill muffed the ball, but Steve recovered the ball in time to throw Duffy out on a close decision. Pratt drew a pass and the whole thing was plainly up to Ping Bodie. Ping spread oodles of disappointment all over the park by lifting a fly to Elmer Smith. Life looked a little brighter.

Some one is always trying to take the joy out of life and Cleveland started to do that little thing in the seventh. Steve O'Neill opened the inning with a poke against the right field stockade. The ball took a bad carom away from Vick and O'Neill got a two-bagger. Jasper sacrificed him to third and he scored on Graney's sacrifice fly to Lewis. With the Indians one run to the merry, life didn't look quite so bright.

Yankees Threaten in Seventh.

The Yanks showed signs of catching up with the Indians again in the seventh, but they fell short. Jasper was wild and presented Ruel with a pass. Shawkey sent him down on a peculiar sacrifice. The ball bounded off Johnston's glove and Jasper picked it up, throwing Bob out to Wamby, who covered the cushion. Fewster got a pass, and everything was set for the tieing run. Vick and Baker both went out on pop fouls to Gardner, and there was gloom where once joy reigned.

Cleveland continued to spread more gloom in the eighth. Speaker opened with a single to centre, and Smith sacrificed. Gardner larruped a single to left, and sent the Indians' manager home, Gardner taking second on the throw to the plate. Wambsganss sacrificed Gardner to third, and he scored when Johnston hopped a double over Pipp's roof. O'Neill was walked intentionally. There was a sigh of relief when Jasper whiffed for the third out.

The Yanks tried to kick up a fuss in the eighth. With two down, Pratt singled to left, and tallied when Bodie pumped a triple to right. Vick and Baker got on in the ninth by virtue of passes after two were out, but the looked-for Yank rally never appeared.

GIANTS LOSE AGAIN TO SCRAPPY CUBS

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—The margin between the Giants and the Cincinnati Reds in the National League bunting chase was widened by another full game today when McGraw's men fell before the Cubs while the Reds were taking an easy victory over the Phils at Cincinnati. The Giants dropped their second straight to the Cubs, partly through an error and partly because of their inability to hit Jim Vaughn. The score was 3 to 1.

This was the eighth setback suffered by the McGraw men on the present jaunt through the West, and the gap between the erstwhile league leaders and Pat Moran's Reds now has widened to dangerous proportions. After tomorrow's game with the Cubs the Giants will hurry homeward, and they hope to regain some of the lost ground under the more familiar surroundings at the Polo Grounds.

Vaughn pitched in his 1918 form and the Easterners were almost helpless before his great speed and his tantalizing hooks. The Giants got to him for five singles, two of which were infield scratch hits. Vaughn not only pitched a masterly game, but he had the satisfaction of carrying over the winning run in the rally which the Cubs delivered in the eighth inning. Jim had previously drawn a pass and then he gave a great exhibition of sprinting all the way from first to third on a single by Flack. So desperate were the Cubs to put the winning run over that they resorted to a double steal, which brought victory when Mike Gonzales made a poor peg to second base.

McGraw sent Phil Douglas against the team of which he was a member less than three weeks ago, hopeful that Phil's knowledge of the batters' weaknesses would be enough to break the losing streak of the McGraw men. Phil, like Art Nehf in the opening game of the series, did about all that could be asked of any pitcher. His work was good enough to win, but it did not get the support that must come in strickwork if games are to be won. The Giants' inability to hit was the reason of the setback, not the inability of Douglas to do his part.

Glittering Grab by Benny.

Benny Kauff showed Chicago fans in the fourth inning that he is one of the greatest fly chasers in the game, but altogether it was a sad afternoon for the chubby outfielder. He made his glittering grab in the fourth inning with Fred Merkle as the victim, Kauff sprinting far into left centre to get the ball. But Benjamin is likely to remember today more for the fact that he failed in a pinch, and had to give way to a pinch hitter, rather than because he made the wonderful catch.

Benny had his big opportunity in the sixth inning, which really was the best chance which the Giants had during the game. Young opened the frame with an infield hit and Fletcher worked Vaughn for a pass. Hal Chase sent the pair along a base each with a sacrifice bunt to Deal and Benny came up with runners on second and third bases and the score 1—1. Vaughn, as cool as the proverbial cucumber, began to shoot in amazing assortment of benders at Kauff, who was straining to hit the ball out of the park. Kauff finally went out on strikes. Then Vaughn gave Zimmerman a complimentary pass which filled the corners, following up with a strikeout against Al Baird.

That was the big chance of the Giants, and its faded in the two strikeouts. After Zim walked in the sixth inning, not another Giant touched his spikes to first base, thirteen going out in order up to the end of the game.

Burns came through with a spectacular running catch in the eighth inning of a drive by Killefer just as the ball was about to settle on the outfield lawn. This simply delayed the winning rally, which started a minute later on a pass to Vaughn. Other fancy fielding plays were contributed by Vaughn in the second inning against Zimmerman, and Hollocher in the fifth against Gonzales. The Cub shortstop raced behind second base for his brilliant capture of a fast bounding ball.

Each team got a runner on the paths in the opening inning, but neither got beyond first base. Fletcher was safe on Herzog's fumble with two down in the New York half, and Chase ended the inning with a fly to Flack. In the home half Herzog singled with two out, but Gonzales nipped him at second on an attempted steal.

Giants Go to the Front.

The Giants went to the front in the second inning. Kauff bounced a hit off Vaughn's glove and went to second while Vaughn was throwing Zim out at first, after a great recovery of a hard smash. This play by Vaughn undoubtedly kept back some New York runs. Baird bounced a single to right and Kauff turned third at top speed. Benny would have been nailed at the plate but for the fact that Killifer muffed a perfect throw by Flack. This misplay saved the Giants from a second shutout in two games here. Baird raced to second on the throw-in and was marooned there while Gonzales was grounding out and Douglas was fanning.

In the same inning the Cubs tied things up, Dave Robertson, a former Giant leading the rally. Dave drew a pass, went to second on a passed ball and to third on Merkle's sacrifice. Barber hit a slow roller down the third base line for a hit and Robertson scampered home with the only run scored by the Cubs up to the eighth-inning rally.

The Cubs threatened in the third, having runners on first and second with only one out, but neither Hollocher nor Herzog could furnish any help. After Kauff made his great play on Merkle in the fourth, robbing Fred of a triple, Barber got a single, so this catch helped considerably for a time. Then for three innings the Cubs were very quiet, this condition prevailing until Burns had made his fine running catch off Killifer in the eighth.

A pass to Vaughn started the trouble. Jim hopped around to third on Flack's single to right, and remained there while Hollocher flied to Kauff. Then the double steal was called for, Gonzales made his poor throw to second, and Vaughn scored, Flack reaching second. Herzog chased him home with a triple to left centre.

Dodgers' Unusual Double Play.

The Brooklyn Dodgers earned the distinction of engineering an unusual double play during their stay in Cincinnati. The play occurred in the game of Aug. 5, when, in the seventh inning, Neale tried to score from third after Otto Miller caught Bressler's foul fly back of the plate almost to the stand. Kopf was on first and Miller threw hurriedly to Johnston, as if to prevent Kopf from advancing. With the throw Neale was off third for home like a flash, but Johnston quickly returned the ball in time for Clarence Mitchell, who covered the plate, to tag Neale, completing a double play. It was the first time this season a double play from the catcher to the second baseman to the pitcher had been recorded.

PFEFFER'S CURVES BAFFLE PITTSBURGH

PITTSBURGH, Penn., Aug. 9.—The western swing of the Brooklyn Robins ended satisfactorily here this afternoon when the Flatbush troupe rapped out a victory over the Pirates in their parting clash. The score was 2 to 0, and the Brooklynites left for home joyous in the knowledge of better than an even break in the series of eleven games. The team won six of the contests.

Big Jeff Pfeffer, who has shown better on the road than at home, gave another demonstration of his pitching skill at the expense of the hapless Pirates. The big blond twirler had excellent control, tons of speed, and mixed up his delivery in baffling style. His success today gave the Brooklyn right-hander his second shut-out victory in the space of two weeks.

Brooklyn bats, idle for the previous two days, were brought vividly into existence again today, much to the chagrin of Harold Carlson, who held the mound for the Smoky City boys. Harry was indiscreet enough to issue four passes, and, while he was lucky to have three of them discounted as far as scoring was concerned, the Robins added a hit to the last of the quartet and a run resulted. This occurred in the third inning, but after that Carlson found his bearings and went along to the eighth on the short end of an interesting twirling duel with Pfeffer. Harry was lifted in the Pirates' eighth to permit Casey Stengel to take his last turn at the plate in a Pirate uniform. Casey fanned. Earl Hamilton pitched the ninth for the home team and was touched for Brooklyn's remaining marker.

Great Day for J. Johnston.

Jimmy Johnston, the transformed second baseman, had a gala day of it. Jimmy disported himself in the field without a flicker of emotion, accepting all chances which came his way with nary a sign of a slip. At bat Jimmy was even better, leading the attack with three hits in four official times at bat. The Robin second baseman got aboard the paths four times, and on three successive occasions pilfered second base. Johnston carried in the Robins' first run in the third inning, riding home on a single by Captain Zach Wheat.

Carlson was fortunate to escape without a score in the early innings. Brilliant fielding by his teammates saved the day for the Pirate hurler. Particularly was this true in the second inning, when Carlson walked Ward, Mack Wheat, and Pfeffer in rotation, filling the bases, with two out. Olson grounded sharply to Terry, who quickly whipped the ball to Cutshaw, forcing Pfeffer for the third out.

The Brooklyn fun happened in the next frame. Johnston started the inning with a pass, and immediately appropriated second base, making his second successive steal. Billy Southworth made a glittering catch of Griffith's hard-hit fly to right, spearing the ball in the deep recesses of the right garden after a hard run. Johnston raced to third after the catch. The Robin second baseman didn't hesitate around the far corner very long, for Zach Wheat lashed a single to centre, sending Johnston over the rubber with Brooklyn's first run. Wheat tried to steal second, but was killed off in the attempt, and then Hy Myers fanned.

Pfeffer had an opportunity to hammer in a run in the fourth, but the chance was wasted when the big pitcher fanned. Big Ed Konetchy started this session with a double to left. Ward skied to Carey, and Mack Wheat lifted a long fly to the same fielder. After the catch Konetchy raced to third, but was stranded there when Pfeffer whiffed the air. In the fifth Johnston got his second hit of the day, and registered his third straight steal of second, but got no further in his travels.

Johnston expired trying for his fourth steal in the seventh inning and ended a promising Brooklyn outburst. With one down, Pfeffer bounced a single through short to left. Olson poled a fly to Bigbee, and Johnston followed with a single to left, sending Pfeffer lumbering to third. Jimmy got restless around the first corner and dashed for second, but was nipped, Blackwell to Cutshaw.

Earl Hamilton was the innocent victim of a last-inning rampage by the Robins. After Barbare had thrown out Konetchy Ward punched a single to centre. Mack Wheat doubled over third, sending Ward to third. On Pfeffer's rap to Cutshaw Ward was tagged at the plate, Mack Wheat racing to third on the play. Ivan Olson got his only hit of the day then, a single to left, which scored Mack Wheat with the Robins's second run and sent Pfeffer to second. Johnston ended the game with a long fly to Carey.

Pfeffer Holds 'Em at Bay.

Pfeffer was never in real danger and refused to permit a Pirate to get any farther than second base. Seldom did a Buccaneer get even as far as this corner, for Jeff was miserly with his passes and kept his allotment of four hits scattered over as many innings. The Robin hurler winged Bigbee, starting the fracas, but settled down and recovered. Cutshaw drew a pass in the second inning, the only one issued by Pfeffer, but the free ticket would not have come if Mack Wheat had caught a foul fly which Cutshaw tipped off previously. As it was, nothing happened, for Barbare immediately lined into a double play. Mollwitz got the first hit off Pfeffer then, but expired on first.

Pfeffer was complete master of the situation thereafter, permitting but three Pirates to get aboard the base paths, while a wild heave by Ward enabled a fourth to get some sprinting exercise. The quartet, however, were left stranded. Southworth singled in the fourth, and in the sixth Bigbee rapped out a double. Ward made a two-base error on Barbare in the seventh, and Pfeffer promptly fanned Mollwitz, retiring the side. In the eighth, Terry lashed a single to left, and the Pirate hitting ended there. With Terry on first, Blackwell sacrificed, and Casey Stengel was summoned to bat for Carlson. Stengel fanned and the danger was over.

After the game it was announced that Stengel had been traded to Philadelphia in exchange for Whitted.

WAR OF FACTIONS IN AMERICAN LEAGUE

New York, Chicago, and Boston Club Owners Now Lined Up Against Five Others.

A serious baseball war in the American League is very likely to result from the Carl Mays case. The bitterness which the Johnson faction holds against the New York club was shown last night in a telegram from Phil Ball, the owner of the St. Louis Browns. Colonel Ruppert said last night that he considered Ball's telegram as an insult. It was as follows:

"Answering telegram your business sagacity and acumen in Mays matter does not appeal to us. Your sportsmanship smells to heaven. We decline your invitation."

Colonel Ruppert sent Ball the following answer:

"Refusal not unacceptable in view of your gratuitous insult in reply to polite invitation."

It was announced last night in Chicago that Johnson had started for New York, not to attend Monday's meeting, but to be present at the injunction hearing in the Supreme Court on Tuesday. Johnson said before leaving Chicago that none of the following five clubs would be represented: Cleveland, St. Louis, Detroit, Philadelphia, and Washington. Johnson said that he would not attend the meeting, because it had been called without authority.

Three Clubs vs. Five.

New York, Chicago and Boston will be the only three clubs represented at the meeting, and Johnson's refusal and the refusal of the five other clubs is taken by baseball men as an indication that the American League has a bitter fight on its hands. The attitude taken by Ball was a shock to the New York owners, Colonel Ruppert and Colonel Huston. Ball was formerly one of the Federal leaguers who tried to drive the major leagues out of business. When the Federal League war was settled Ball was permitted to purchase the St. Louis franchise as part of the settlement.

"Two years ago Ball was sued by Del Pratt and Doc Lavan, both members of the Browns at that time, who charged that he said they were 'laying down.' The players sued Ball for slander, and before Pratt came to the Yankees the St. Louis owner settled the case out of court.

Charles A. Comiskey, the owner of the Chicago White Sox, is now on his way to New York to attend the meeting Monday. Comiskey thinks that all the club owners should get together and discuss the Mays case, as Colonel Ruppert suggested. With Comiskey, Ruppert and Frazee banded together in this fight against Johnson, the three best cities in the American League are represented on one side.

When the Cleveland Club arrived here yesterday morning process servers were on hand to serve Manager Tris Speaker, but he avoided them and got to his hotel. Secretary Nichols of the club was served, however, and the process servers afterwards found Speaker at his hotel. The umpires, Hildebrand and Moriarty, were again served with the injunction papers. The Yankees left no possible way open for President Johnson or his representatives to interfere with the games which are scheduled before the hearing on the injunction, Tuesday.

Peaceful Settlement Remote.

The officials of the New York club are convinced that the five club owners mentioned by Johnson are acting under his orders and that the attitude taken by Ball expressed that of the whole Johnson crowd on the Mays case. This bitterness would indicate that the probabilities for a peaceful settlement are remote, and that no matter what the result of the Mays injunction hearing will be, the American League is badly split and the future of the game endangered.

Baseball men would not be surprised if Johnson attempted to bar Mays from playing in other States on the circuit, and if he takes this action the New York club will endeavor to get injunctions in other States as they did in this State. The coming of Comiskey is awaited with interest. This is the first time in the history of baseball that Johnson has ever been confronted with formidable opposition. In all his other troubles Johnson has always had Comiskey on his side and has always come out a winner. He has a different kind of a fight on his hands now, however, and with New York, Chicago, and Boston against him, the American League President is sure to find trouble ahead unless he reconsiders his position in the Mays suspension.

DUNN TALKS OF OWNERSHIP.

Dangerous to Say Johnson Is Stockholder, Says Boss of Indians.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Aug. 9.—President James C. Dunn of the Cleveland American League Baseball Club, referring to the recent statement from the owners of the New York American League team that B. B. Johnson, President of the American League, was a stockholder in the Cleveland team, today issued the following statement:

"Since taking over the Cleveland Baseball Club in 1916 with my associates I have been in complete control of the policies and business affairs of the club. At the time we made the purchase we assumed certain obligations, all of which have been met when due or prior to maturity. I do not believe the people of Cleveland are very much concerned in who holds the stock in the club, as long as I remain in complete control of the policies of the organization and continue my efforts there to give Cleveland a winning club. However, those who assert that B. B. Johnsin is interested in the Cleveland Baseball Club are treading on very dangerous grounds."

WILL NOT SELL HY MYERS.

President Ebbets of Dodgers Tells Herrmann Not to Make Offer.

President Charles H. Ebbets of Brooklyn is all worked up because reports have come from Cincinnati that the Reds are trying to buy Hy Myers or Jimmy Johnston. Mr. Ebbets asserts that he would not consider selling these players, and has sent the following telegram to August Herrmann, President of the Cincinnati club:

"Please discontinue stating, directly or indirectly, that you have offered or will offer large cash consideration for certain named star Brooklyn players; statements for which you or your representatives are responsible have caused the Brooklyn club serious injury. It is not our policy to sell our rights to the services of our best players, and you have no right, reason, or foundation to presume we are foolish enough to do so. We would preferably sell our entire baseball holdings rather than insult our loyal patrons by selling the release of our star players."

Ty Cobb and Cravath Top List Of Batsmen in Major Leagues

Ty Cobb leads the batters in the American League with a percentage of .366; George Sisler of the Browns poled out the most base hits, 127; Roger Peckinpaugh of the Yankees tallied the most runs, 72; a tie exists for leading base runner, George Sisler and Doc. Johnston each pilfered 23 sacks; Eddie Cicotte of the White Sox tops the hurlers with 20 victories against 6 defeats for a percentage of .769; Cicotte is the first major hurler to cop 20 victories this season.

Gavvy Cravath of the Phillies, who occupies the rôle of pinch hitter these days, keeps atop of the National League batters with a batting mark of .351; Heine Groh leads the run scorers with 61 tallies; Zach Wheat and Ivy Olson are tied for the most base-hits with 114 safeties apiece, while George Cutshaw heads the base runners with 27 steals. Jess Barnes, who has won his last nine games in a row, tops the hurlers, the Giants' star won 18 games and lost 4 for the splendid pitching average of .818.

Following are the records, which include games played Thursday, Aug. 7.

STENGEL GOES TO PHILS.

Former Brooklyn Outfielder Traded for George Whitted.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 9.—Outfielders George Whitted and Charles Stengel, respectively, of the Philadelphia and Pittsburgh Nationals, have been traded, according to announcement here today. It is said each man will play out the series with his present club and then make the exchange.

Whitted has been with the Phillies since 1915. Stengel went to Pittsburgh from the Brooklyn club two years ago.

Curves and Bingles.

Carl Mays, the famous pitcher, who packs an injunction in his hip pocket, will pitch against the Clevelands this afternoon. Now if Carl was going to pitch for Cleveland instead of the Yanks, Colonel Ruppert says there wouldn't be any fuss in the American League at all.

Elmer Smith robbed Pipp of a homer in the fourth. He raced back toward the fence in deep right when Wallie plastered the ball and just plucked it from the air on the tip of his fingers.

For the natives, Ping Bodie contributed the fielding gem. Francis cantered back to the hollyhock bed in centre field in the fifth and prevented Tris Speaker's terrific drive from knocking a hole in the fence.

Shawkey had a perfect day at the bat. He had two singles and a sacrifice in three times up. With this impressive record to his credit, Manager Huggins pulled him out in the ninth for a green batsman. Ward was pushed in to hit for him. Ward was an easy out at first.

It's too bad Tex Rickard tore down his arena in Toledo. It would have been an ideal place in which to settle the American League war.

Phil Ball of St. Louis is known for his strong statements. He made a few remarks about Del Pratt and Johnny Lavan once and they sued him for slander.

Fewster and Vick continue to slap the ball better than some of the old timers. Fewster is making himself solid in the infield during Peck's forced absence. Peck's knee is still bothering him, and he may not be able to get into the game today.

The fact that Umpire George Moriarty was served with the Mays injunction for a second time yesterday evidently upset him. George's weakness yesterday seemed to be in the eyes.

Elmer Smith hit the ball into the upper stand with one on in the ninth and completed the circuit before he knew it was a foul. It fell just about on the line, for the spectators in the upper stand in the vicinity of where the ball hit were divided about it.

SUN BRIAR RACES TO TRACK RECORD

FAST COLT IS UNCOVERED

Special to The New York Times.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Aug. 9.—This was an eventful day of racing at the Spa. For one thing, a new track record for a mile and a furlong was established and a real rival was discovered for the great Man o' War. The record was made by Willis Sharpe Kilmer's Sun Briar, which won the Champlain Handicap and stepped the distance in 1:50, clipping 1 2-5 seconds from the mark set by Advance Guard in the second running of this race in 1902 and which has stood ever since.

Another occurrence of vivid interest was that a new two-year-old sensation was brought out. Golden Broom, a colt, for which Mrs. E. M. Jeffords paid a record price here last season, galloped off with the Saratoga Special, defeating the famed panoply, Bonnie Mary, and Cinderella.

These two events, with others of less striking importance, were witnessed by the largest crowd that has attended the races here this season. Nearly 25,000 persons were packed into the spacious stands and the clubhouse, many lovers of racing having come from New York for the week end.

The victory of Sun Briar was a particularly gratifying triumph because many said the colt could not return to form on account of his absence from the races. Sun Briar, which set an American record for a mile in competition last year, proved today that he is one of the greatest horses in the country and that he has regained the speed which made him a sensation as a three-year-old. He proved it conclusively, for he defeated his stablemate, Exterminator, Hollister, Corn Tassel, War Machine, and Fairy Wand, which latter only a few days ago nosed him out in a mile race. Sun Briar was ably handled by Jockey Willie Knapp.

Exterminator Looked Dangerous.

After the race there were many who thought Exterminator could have won the race had his owner not wanted to see Sun Briar win if possible. The two had been coupled and were easily the best of the field. It appeared to lots of the onlookers that Loftus pulled up with Exterminator after the other contenders had been beaten off in the stretch drive, but as Exterminator had to come through on the outside it is questionable if he could have caught his stablemate.

Fairy Wand, as usual, was rushed into the lead, and the mare which had taken the measure of Sun Briar so recently cut out a fast pace. Knapp took no chances of letting Fairy Wand get too far away this time, however, but kept his mount close to the leader. Hollister held third position with Exterminator close to him and Corn Tassel and War Machine trailing.

The positions were scarcely changed until the turn into the stretch, when Sun Briar moved up on Fairy Wand, Knapp taking the rail and coming through in the lead on the stretch. Exterminator, meantime, had come through on the outside, and half way down the stretch had passed both Fairy Wand and Hollister and was on the heels of Sun Briar. In that position they raced to the wire, Hollister taking third from War Machine, while Fairy Wand, tired by the fast pace, dropped back to last.

Kilmer Gives Large Gratuities.

Mr. Kilmer was so delighted with the victory of his colt and the fact that he had set a new record, that he rewarded both the jockeys who rode his mounts as well as Trainer McDaniel. He gave each of the jockeys $500 and the trainer $1,000.

This record was made over a track that had again become fast but which was not yet at its best after the rains of the early part of the week. The fact that a second and two-fifths was clipped from the old mark was regarded as remarkable. The old record had stood so long and against such great racers as Olambala, The Finn, Westy Hogan, and others that it seemed to defy the best of horses.

No less sensational was the victory of Golden Broom in the Saratoga Special, which is a six-furlong dash for two-year-olds. Always one of the best sporting events of the season, this race brought to the post six of the outstanding youngsters, the notable absentees being Man o' War and Miss Jemima. The starters were H. P. Whitney's Panoply and Wildair, P. A. Clark's Bonnie Mary, W. R. Coe's Cinderella, J. K. L. Ross's King Thrush and Golden Broom.

Golden Broom had almost prepared the regular followers of the turf for his sensational performance by the manner in which he raced last Monday upon his first experience at a barrier. He showed remarkable speed on that occasion, and after leading by several lengths ran out at the stretch, lost fully five lengths and then came on to finish fourth to Truly Rural. Mrs. Jeffords paid $15,600 for Golden Broom as a yearling here last season, which was the highest price brought during the sales here.

Feared He Might Be Sulky.

Golden Broom was somewhat neglected by the speculators today because of what they thought the probability that he would not run truly. He did sulk going to the post and had to be led up finally. But he was favored with a position on the rail which tended to prevent him from going wide.

As the barrier was sprung he leaped out fully a length in front of the others and in the next eighth had increased this lead to four lengths. He drew away from the others so rapidly that it was apparent it would be no contest unless he ran wide. Ambrose, who had the mount, put up a fine ride and handled the colt carefully.

Making the turn into the stretch Ambrose eased up the colt and held him on the rail. Wildair, which had been leading the others, came up within a length at this point and Loftus attempted to pass the fleet chestnut, but Golden Broom needed just one prod to send him flying away again and he turned into the stretch and raced home all by himself.

Wildair was easily the best of the remainder of the field and took second place, four lengths back of the winner, while King Thrush beat out Bonnie Mary for third. Panoply, which had been the main reliance of the Whitney entry, ran last, having failed to show the speed of her former races. Bonnie Mary got away badly and was never a contender, but improved her position in the last furlong.

The victory of Golden Broom was as impressive as any Man o' War has gained, and was attained in as select a field as the Glen Riddle Farm's youngster has met. Mrs. Jeffords has believed for some time that she had a two-year-old which was as good as any brought out this season, and one that would give Man o' War a battle for the juvenile crown.

A Bit of Bad Eyesight.

Another bad decision by the placing judges marred the running of the first race of the day, the Plattsburg Handicap, for three-year-olds and upward, at six furlongs. The race was won by John Leonard's Assume and the error was made in placing the second and third horses. The judges gave the place to Out the Way, though the latter had been beaten a neck by Midnight Sun.

Out the Wal led into the stretch, where Assume and Midnight Sun came up. Assume soon gained a commanding position and won under a hard drive. Out the Way was second, a hundred yards from the wire, but in a few more strides Midnight Sun had overtaken him and was leading him by nearly half a length. As on the occasion when Fruit Cake was defeated on a decision by the judges the finish was not close enough to cause doubt.

This is the fourth bad decision that has been made during the meeting. On one occasion the judges placed a horse third which had finished nearly last in a big field. The decision was so absurd that it was rectified at once. Since then Fruit Cake, Gloria France, and Midnight Sun have been victims of decisions which were disputed by persons at various positions on the track.

J. E. Griffith scratched The Brook in the North American Steeplechase Handicap, and the event was won by Mrs. F. A. Clark's Elysian, with Doublet second and Bughouse third.

Ral Parr's Bullseye scored another victory in the fifth race, for two-year-olds, defeating a large field quite handily. Overcast was second and Who Cares was third.

There was an accident in the last race, when Jockey Huff fell from Musket in making the turn out of the back stretch and was badly shaken up, though not seriously hurt.

A combination of poor pitching and loose fielding featured the work of the Jersey City ball players in their farewell game yesterday afternoon against Chick Harkin's Cobblers in Jersey City, enabling Binghamton to register an easy victory over their rivals by a score of 7 to 1.

Bill Donovan tried out Hughes, a shipyard product, on the mound and the experiment proved disastrous. Hughes lacked control, issuing no less than nine free trips. His four passes in the first two innings rounding out into as many tallies. In addition to this generosity on the part of Hughes, Binghamton got in touch with his delivery in a lusty manner in the eighth inning, and made five hits in a row, which, with a base on balls, yielded three more tallies.

Barnes, who was driven from the mound in the opening inning the day previous, returned to duty yesterday for the Cobblers and showed excellent form, blocking the Skeeters every attempt to register after the opening inning by keeping their hits too scattered for effect. The misplays of Joe Cobb behind the bat and Frank Kane in right for Jersey City figured prominently also in the visitors run-getting.

This afternoon Rochester will open a four-game series in Jersey with a double-header.

REDS STOP LEE MEADOWS.

Cincinnati Overwhelms Philadelphia by Score of 10 to 1.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Aug. 9.—The Philadelphia team was defeated today, 10 to 1. Meadows, who had won six straight games since joining Philadelphia, allowed three runs in the first inning on hits by Rath, Daubert and Kopf, with two passes and an error at the plate by Tragesser.

Bunched hits off Hogg in the fifth and seventh innings gave the league leaders a one-sided victory.

PERRY'S PASSES ARE COSTLY

Four Result in Runs and Tigers Win by 5 to 4.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9.—Four of Perry's bases on balls resulted in runs today and cost Philadelphia the opening game of the series with Detroit, 5 to 4. Errors were frequent and costly, each of Philadelphia's first two runs coming in on misplays. In the eighth, with Kopp on base, Thomas's low liner shot past Cobb and rolled to the flagpole for a home run, after which Leonard tightened up and retired the next five Athletic batters in order.

ROCHESTER TAKES TWO FROM NEWARK

Bears Lose First Game, 3 to 1, and Then Are Nosed Out, 6 to 5, in Second.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, Aug. 9.—Newark dropped its fourth straight game today when Rochester won both parts of a double-header. Rochester won the first game, 3 to 1, and the second, 6 to 5.

Newark could not hit Jimmie Ogden in the first game. The Bears registered only three hits and Frank Bruggy made two of these, both being doubles. Pat Shea, who hurled for the Bears was no puzzle to the Rochester batters.

The Bears appeared to have the second game sewed up and were leading in the seventh inning, 4 to 0, but George Gaw weakened in this frame and Rochester nicked him for two runs. They scored four times in the eighth, and won the game before Stryker was sent in to relieve Gaw. Newark knocked Heitman off the mound in the sixth, but George Kelly, the first sacker, who took up the work, held the Bears to two hits in the last three innings, and struck out four batters.

The hitting of Joe Letter, Newark's right fielder, featured the second game. Letter hit safely five times out of as many trips to the plate. He made four singles and a double, all hefty wallops.

BOSTON IN EVEN BREAK.

Eleven Innings of Second Game Lands Third Straight for Hoyt.

BOSTON, Aug. 9.—Leifield's pitching was the main factor in St. Louis's victory in the first game, 5 to 3, from Boston today, but Boston won the second, 4 to 3, on St. Louis's errors in the eleventh. Hoyt won his third straight game for Boston, holding the invaders to six hits in eleven innings.

The winning run came on Shannon's single to start the eleventh, together with successive errors on thrown balls by Robertson and Austin, and Hooper's sacrifice fly to Jacobson. By hitting safely in each game Jacobson has hit safely in sixteen consecutive games. Remarkable plays by the Boston infield, particularly by McInnis, were features of both games.

Maranville Leading Factor in Cards' Defeat by 5 to 3.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 9.—Doak held Boston to five hits until the seventh, when a double, three singles, and an error produced three runs and gave the visitors a 5 to 3 victory over St. Louis today. Rudolph was hit hard, but was well supported, especially by Maranville, whose fielding was the sensation of the game.

NEW YORKERS TAKE HALIFAX CUP MATCH

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9.—New York's cricket team came out ahead in the play-off for the tie for the Halifax cup in their match with the Germantown Cricket Club at Manheim here today, easily winning the match by the comfortable margin of 120 runs, with totals of 286 to 166.

New York was first to bat and started off well, J. L. Poyer, especially being in splendid form, going in first and being still undisposed of when the innings closed. Poyer hit out in great style and was not out 121. Other good scores were added by B. Kortlang, 31; R. Belgrave, 30; S. R. Beresford, 27, and L. R. Miller, 21. L. R. Miller was most successful with the ball for the New Yorkers, capturing 8 wickets for 93 runs.

The Germantown Club were all disposed of for 166 runs, 58 of which was contributed by C. M. Graham, while W. P. O'Neill scored 22 and C. H. Clarke and E. W. Mann 20 each.

MANHATTAN WINS MATCH.

Cricket Club Chalks Up Eleventh Straight Victory.

Adding another victory to their credit by defeating the Kings County Club at Prospect Park yesterday by a margin of 59 runs, the Manhattan Cricket Club won its eleventh straight game in the championship series of the Metropolitan League, holding the lead in the competition and are fully expectant of ending the season with all matches won.

Kings County was unfortunate in playing a short-handed team and were all disposed of for the small total of 39, W. Huggins with 11 being the only double-figure man. C. M. Lauder made top score of the match with a not out innings of 29 for the Manhattans, while J. E. Langley added 18, and H. A. Meyer 17. J. Freeman and Meyer did all the bowling for the Manhattans, the former taking two wickets for 14 runs, while the latter secured 3 for 7. For Kings County, L. D. Maclennan took 5 for 46.

The Brooklyn Cricket Club played a Metropolitan League game against the Paterson Club at Paterson yesterday, and lost to the home team by the narrow margin of four runs with scores of 64 to 60. A. Bunce and S. Welch bowled in splendid style for the Paterson team, the latter taking 3 wickets for 24 runs, while Bunce had the best analysis, taking 4 for 6. H. Rushton did the best work with the leather for the Brooklyn team, taking 6 wickets for 24 runs, while A. Brown took 4 for 36.

Owing to the traction strike in Brooklyn, the association match between the Staten Island and Bensonhurst teams was called off.

KENTUCKY OFFERS FINE STAKE LIST

$50,000 RACE AT LATONIA

The Kentucky Jockey Club announces a notable program of first-class stake events for the Fall racing season. Autumn racing in the Blue Grass State will begin at Lexington on Sept. 13, and continue through to Nov. 1, when the curtain will drop at Churchill Downs. There will be seven days of sport at Lexington, twenty-two at Latonia, and nine at Churchill Downs—thirty-eight in all.

The Kentucky Jockey Club, of which former United States Senator Johnson N. Camden is President, and Colonel Matt Winn is First Vice President and General Manager, which now controls racing in Kentucky and has put the tracks of Lexington, Louisville, and Latonia under one management, announces some distance events which recall old traditions of the sport in America.

In the course of the thirty-eight days seven specials for three-year-olds and over at distances varying from one mile and a sixteenth to two miles and a quarter, that will have an added money value of nearly $50,000 and a gross value of upward of $90,000, when the subscriptions and starting fees of the horses named to start are counted in with the added money, will be decided. These races will be the Lexington Cup, $5,000 added, one mile and a half, to be run at Lexington; the Latonia Handicap, $5,000 added, one mile and a sixteenth; the Twin City Handicap, $5,000 added, one mile and five furlongs; the Latonia Cup, $7,500 added, two miles and a quarter, and the Latonia Championship, (for three-year-olds exclusively,) $15,000 added, one mile and three-quarters, to be run at Latonia, and the Falls City Handicap, $4,000 added, one mile and a sixteenth, and the Louisville Cup, $5,000 added, two miles, to be run at Churchill Downs.

Latonia Championship Is Rich.

Of these the special of greatest value and highest import will be the Latonia Championship, which has already closed. Having attracted entries from Great Britain and France, as well as from Canada and the United States, the Latonia Championship will be something of an international affair this season at its first running. As befits a race of international significance it will have a gross value of upward of $50,000. And, as its fame spreads to all lands in which thoroughbreds are produced, it will doubtless become more and more an international event as the years roll on.

It will advance steadily in value. Its first renewal in 1920 will have a gross value of about $55,000, and its second renewal in 1921 will have an aggregate value of about $60,000. The increasing values of the Latonia Championship can be forecast with some degree of accuracy because the nominations for the championships of 1920 and 1921 are already in. They are considerably more numerous than were the nominations for the inaugural race.

In the distribution of money, after the finishes of the championship from season to season the lion's share will properly fall to the winner. The winning horse will never receive less than $40,000. He, or she, may earn as much as $60,000. In addition to the lion's share of the purse, the winner's owner will get a golden trophy of $1,000 value. There will be $3,000 each season for the owner of the second horse, $2,000 for the owner of the third, $1,000 for the owner of the fourth. The original nominator of the winner will be remembered by the Kentucky Jockey Club, whether he be an American, a Britisher, an Australasian, an Argentino, or a Frenchman, with a check for $1,000. The original nominator of the second horse will get $500, of the third $300, and of the fourth $200. The first liability of producers making nominations in the championships of the future will be $15 for each horse, which must be named on July 1 of each year. There will be an additional liability on each succeeding January of $25 and $50, respectively; the starting fee will be $500.

Conditions for the Race.

The conditions of the Latonia championship are modeled, in a general way, after the conditions of the great American produce races for two-year-olds, such as the Hopeful, which is run at Saratoga; the Futurity, which is run at Belmont Park, and the Futurity, which is annually renewed at Lexington. But as a stimulus to the production and conservation of thoroughbreds in the United States and Canada and to the importation of valuable thoroughbred blood from abroad it has a significance none of these produce races has ever enjoyed. It will exert an influence greater than any American race of the past has ever exerted, so it is prophesied by Kentucky horsemen.

With a great race of one mile and three-quarters for three-year-olds to be run at Latonia each succeeding October, a race that will pay from $50,000 to $60,000 and more, it is now worth the while of the owners of American bred racers to conserve their two-year-olds. A new incentive is furnished to enterprising American horsemen to seek abroad the high-class two and three-year-olds; breeders of the British Isles, of France, of the Argentine Republic and of Australia and New Zealand will in the future doubtless nominate for successive renewals of the Latonia championship. President Camden, Manager Winn, and their associates in the Kentucky Jockey Club are being congratulated on promoting a venture of such far-reaching importance to the American thoroughbred industry.

Good Ones Are Nominated.

The first Championship is expected to bring to the post many of the great three-year-olds racing just now, including Eternal, War Pennant, Dunboyne, Mad Hatter, Pastoral Swain, Polka Dot, Natural Bridge, Ophelia, Balustrade, Cirrus, Lord Brighton, Translate, Ticklish, King Plaudit, Vulcanite, Vindex, War Zone, and Rapid Day.

The Championship, the Queen City Handicap, a $5,000 race of one mile for two-year-olds, which closed last Spring, and attracted about 150 entries; the six stakes enumerated—the Lexington Cup Handicap, the Falls City Handicap, the Louisville Cup, the Latonia Handicap, the Latonia Cup, the Twin City Handicap—and the Fort Thomas Handicap, $4,000 added, for two-year-olds at six furlongs; the Autumn Handicap, $5,000 added, for three-years-olds and over at six furlongs, and the Golden Rod Handicap, $4,000 added, for two-year-olds at one mile; not to mention the Lexington Futurity, a race for two-year-olds that will have a value of about $15,000, will come, it is prophesied, pretty close to attracting to Kentucky in the Autumn the best horses of the various ages that will be racing. The overnight purses will range in value from $1,000 to $2,000 (added money.)

All of these races, barring the Latonia Championship, the Queen City Handicap, and the Lexington Futurity will close on Wednesday, Aug. 20, at the office of the Kentucky Jockey Club at Covington, Ky., where General Manager Winn has his headquarters.

TILDEN VICTOR IN SINGLES AND PATTERSON AND BROOKES TAKE DOUBLES ON NEWPORT COURTS

AUSTRALIANS WIN DOUBLES

Patterson and Brookes Beat Richards and Johnson Handily with Loss of a Single Set.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 9.—Playing tennis of the most brilliant description, William T. Tilden, 2d, of Philadelphia, conquered the Californian, William M. Johnston, in the final round of the invitation tourament at the Newport Casino this morning, scoring in three straight sets at 7—5, 8—6, 6—1. The doubles event was won by the Australians, Norman Brookes and Gerald Patterson, who defeated Vincent Richards and Wallace Johnson in the finals, 6—1, 6—3, 3—6, 7—5, after eliminating R. N. Williams, 2d, and W. M. Washburn in a morning match at 6—3, 6—4, 6—4. The runners-up advanced through the semi-final by winning from the second Australian team, R. V. Thomas and Ronald Lycett, in surprisingly decisive fashion, 6—4, 6—4, 6—4.

Tilden's comparatively one-sided victory came as a shocking surprise to many and it was generally argued that the great little champion of 1915 must have been off his game. But although Johnson lacked the fiery energy and infallible scoring power which he showed yesterday in his defeat of Kumagae there was little that was fundamentally wrong with his strokes. A loser necessarily looks bad when compared with the winner and with two such evenly matched players the question really narrows down to which one happens to be exactly right during the period of actual competition, for by the slightest initial superiority he may soon force his opponent below his accustomed level of skill, besides getting the breaks which always runs in the wake of success.

Tilden Off in the Lead.

That is exactly what happened this morning. Tilden got the jump by squeezing out a victory in the first set, a spectacular session of hard hitting in which there was practically nothing to choose between the two contestants. Luck was with him in the second when he pulled out of a number of difficult situations, but his actual play still showed a slight winning edge. In the third set Johnston crumbled, his service refusing to work consistently, while his weakening backhand failed to resist the chopping, slicing attack of the Philadelphian. It was partly a case of physical weakness also, for Johnston did a great deal of running in those two keenly contested sets preceding his slump.

Tilden was close to top form all the way, which means that he could have been beaten only by super tennis. His ground strokes, both drives and chops, were in splendid shape, and his service proved consistently troublesome, especially when breaking high to Johnston's backhand, and he was a terror overhead, putting away even the deepest lobs with absolute finality. Playing as he did today Tilden should have overcome practically any opposition that the modern tennis world could offer him.

Games Follow Service.

Tilden began the service and was presented with four errors for the opening game, Johnston responding by serving a love game for one-all. Three aces and a fine placement shot gave Tilden a perfect score for the next game, although his opponent also tallied twice with clean drives. Another love game and a score of 2 all then resulted from Johnston's service, which at this stage was exceedingly effective. Tilden then lost the first break, going scoreless on his own delivery, when a double fault was followed by two errors and another irresistible drive from the Californian's mighty racquet. But Tilden immediately equalized by deucing his rival's serve with a big smash, Johnston eventually dropping the game by missing a similar shot.

The Philadelphia star went into the lead 4—3 by winning another deuce game which contained two service aces. Although dropping one point with a foot fault, Johnston again tied it up at 4 all, Tilden missing an easy volley close up for the final point. A double fault gave Tilden another bad start on service, but after trailing at 30—40 he pulled out a deuce game with a great backhand drive straight down the sideline, sandwiched between two nets by Johnston.

Great Rally Is Staged.

The latter again squared the set 5-all, and this game contained one of the best rallies of the entire match, both players covering a lot of ground and trying desperately for openings, the server eventually finding one with a sizzling forehander which Tilden could not volley. It was the Philadelphian's advantage at 6—5 with another well-served game, and then a double fault by Johnston started him on the way to the break which lost the set at 7—5. A clean ace was outweighed by another double fault which put the Californian in the hole at 30—40. He got a high bound in midcourt in the next rally, and, throwing away the two balls he still held in his hand, he smashed for the deuce point, but Tilden outguessed him when he slid a backhand shot straight to the line from which Johnston was running. Driving the latter into his backhand corner, Tilden came to the net for the first time, hurrying the Californian's return so that he netted it and the set was over.

The second set began with a long deuce game, Tilden eventually winning by forcing Johnston to net again and again off his back hand. The ex-champion started his own service with a good volley but got into trouble when he netted another easy one and was quickly beaten by a soft slice that barely caught the side line, a fast drive completing the break for a 2—0 lead. Tilden tried twice to duplicate his gentle liner in the next game but the ball went out each time and when he finally dropped one on the line Johnston drove it across the court for a clean counter break, putting the game score at 2—1.

Runs Out Game in a Hurry.

Facing love thirty on his own delivery, Johnston proceeded to run four straight points for the tying game, a good volley being followed by two helpful errors off service. Tilden seemed on the way to a love game on his next serve but Johnston managed to score once with a sensational back hand volley of a hard cross court drive after his opponent had drawn him in close with a soft chop. Great smashing increased the Philadelphian's lead to 4—2, two killing overhead shots, the second from the back hand position, coming after Johnston had twice followed his service to the net for successful volleys, and a third bouncing to the grand stand for the game.

Going back for a deep lob in the next Tilden made another spectacular smash right down the side of the court, but two dazzling drives by Johnston, mixed with a pair of errors, gave the latter a break in return and the games stood at 4—3. After leading at love 30 against Johnston's delivery with two wonderful drives, Tilden seemed to grow careless and made four successive errors, which squared the set at 4 all.

Two more bad errors, a double fault, and an earned point put Johnston in the lead at 5—4 with a love game. Tilden, however, answered by taking three points in a row on Johnston's service and, although the latter volleyed twice in great style, an amazing rally ended the game in Tilden's favor. Two seemingly impossible recoveries leading to a net cord shot which jumped up in Johnston's face, making a return impossible.

Proves a Crucial Point.

This was perhaps the turning point in the match, for the extraordinary shot deprived the Californian of a splendid chance to win the set, and, with it, an equal opportunity for ultimate victory. Tilden went into the lead 6—5, with a service ace and a clean placement shot backhanded, but Johnston tied it up once more with two beautiful drives and a sharp volley. Tilden again served himself ahead, making two successive aces and placing a beauty for the game. The set point appeared when Johnston trailed in the next at 15—40. Through accurate placing, however, he pulled up on even terms and overcame the added handicap of a double fault by winning with a net corder. Another great backhand shot gave Tilden a fresh start and he closed out the set with a rush at 8—6.

Persistent pounding of Johnston's faltering backhand brought Tilden the first game of the final set. Johnston equalized on service, the Philadelphian smashing out a high bounder after letting loose a terrific wallop which his opponent miraculously returned. A wonderful recovery by Tilden gave Johnston an easy volley to start the next game, and when he smashed the ball into the net the gift seemed to break his heart. He netted three more for the game, although earnings two points on the way.

Johnston Grows Weaker.

The crucial break came in the following game, a double fault and two more nets indicating the fading power of the great little Westerner. Tilden made it 4—1, after a long deuce session on service, getting a net corder for the tying point after trailing at 15—40 and being thereafter within a point of losing. He kept on crowding his luck and hitting everything hard with general success.

Another break through service with one tremendous drive barely missing the line for what would have been a love game brought the score to 5—1, and the gallery waited for the inevitable finish. Johnston volleyed himself gamely into a lead of 15-30 and made it 30-40, with a fine drive, but two successive nets brought up the match point, Tilden missing his first chance by flubbing an easy smash. A double fault spoiled a second opportunity and a good placement shot for the vantage was wasted when the server drove out. But Johnston's back hand failed him in the pinch and he netted a costly one, repeating the same offense immediately off service for the set at 6—1 and the match.

While the doubles final was something of an anti-climax after the scintillating exhibition in the singles, it had its consoling features in the astonishing defense put up against the Australians by young Richards and Wallace Johnson, who until this week had never played together and were at best a badly assorted team because of their general similarity of strokes and lack of forehand speed off the ground. By disposing of Thomas and Lycett without the loss of a set, the American pair effectually closed any argument as to which might be the better of the visiting combinations.

Brookes and Paterson were irresistible against Williams and Washburn in the morning and gave the New England champions no real chance to get started. They rushed through the first sets of the final match in similar fashion, finding Johnson far off his game and completely demoralized by their forcing tactics. But the star of the quartet all through the encounter was the 16-year-old Richards, who fought the Australians practically single handed for two sets and then, when his partner rallied to his support, actually winning a set and carrying the last to deuce games before admitting defeat.

Yonkers Lad Overjoys Crowd.

The sheer audacity of the boy's play in the face of the worldwide reputations of Brookes and Patterson made the spectators yell with delight. His accurate chops had both of the visitors continually missing volleys as they came to the net. He drove through them repeatedly after seemingly forced out of position. He lobbed into the sun and killed their soft returns, and in one game he aced the great Brookes twice with well-placed services to the corners. After the showing made by Richards today there was a general feeling that with Tilden as his partner in the national doubles titles he would have a good chance to defend the American honors successfully at Longwood next week and that several other pairs might easily give the Australians real trouble.

Patterson was again spectacular today, but very erratic, throwing away many a point by an extravagant application of speed. His overhead shots were impressive, but came off only when he was in a favorable position, fairly close to the net. He did great execution with a looping back-hand wallop which he used for volleying, as well as off the ground, and his service was always dangerous. Brookes missed a surprising number of volleys, although generally steady in his play, and was several times completely outguessed by Richards.

Both of the Americans developed a capacity for returning hard smashes toward the close of the match and their extraordinary recoveries from far outside the court frequently brought an answering error from the Austalians, who clearly expected little opposition from a mere boy, teamed up with a one stroke chopper.

Amazing Shots by Richards.

Two shots by Richards will remain in the memory of the tennis fans who crowded around the club house court this afternoon. They came in the tenth game of the fourth set when Brookes was serving, with a lead of 5—4 and the match seemed already won. A deep lob chased Richards back to the base line, but instead of making a defensive counter lob he reached over his head while on the run and hammered the ball right at Patterson, who flubbed the volley in his surprise. Richards then chopped one to Brookes, which the veteran missed as he came in, and proceeded to win the game with an astonishingly fast drive down Patterson's alley off the first service ball, one of the nerviest and most timely shots ever seen on a tennis court. A little more of the same kind of play might have pulled the match out of the fire, for Patterson was poaching flagrantly, taking long chances at the net and often walking right out to the middle for killing volleys, which came all too easily.

FUTURE CHAMPIONS LOOM UP IN TENNIS

Philadelphia Worthy Rival of New York in Developing Youthful Net Stars.

With the increasing attention to junior and boys' tennis, the older players are beginning to realise that practically all of the larger cities now possess a representative group of coming stars, whose meetings for local and national titles will be watched with more and more interest. While the metropolitan district is still recognized as the most consistent producer of young tennis players, other centres, notably Philadelphia, are rapidly coming forward with almost equally impressive exhibitions of talent.

The Quaker City has recently contributed two new names to tennis annals, and their owners will surely win their share of honors in the future. One of them is Carl Fischer, who has been described as "the best left-hander now in the junior class." His great battle against the veteran Arthur Cragin at Newport last week, a five-set struggle which ran to 74 games, after an opening set of 15—13, before the youngster admitted defeat, was one of the real features of the invitation tournament and stamped Fischer not only as a comer, but as already a player of distinct class. Last year, at the age of 17, he won the Pennsylvania State doubles title, paired with William T. Tilden, 2d, and this season the same team finished second to Craig Biddle and Wallace Johnson. Playing at "No 1" on the Lower Merion High School team this year, Fischer won eleven interscholastic matches, going through the entire schedule undefeated. He has several times represented Philadelphia in intercity, junior, and boys' team matches, generally playing at or close to the top of the list.

Watson Discovered by Tilden.

Another youthful prodigy from Philadelphia is Charles Watson, 3d, of the West Philadelphia High School, who, at the age of 15, already has three years of successful tournament play to his credit. Watson was discovered by Tilden at Beach Haven in 1917, and the Philadelphian was so impressed with the boy's natural ability that he asked his father's permission to enter him in the first Pennsylvania State championship for boys. "Do you think Charlie could win a match?" asked Mr. Watson, skeptically. "I think he can win the tournament," answered Tilden, and he was right. Watson went through his initial competition with the loss of only one set, and captured the title of Pennsylvania boys' champion from a field of players all older and more experienced than himself. He repeated his triumph in winning the Philadelphia centre event, and duplicated both of these victories in the following year. This season young Watson became the junior champion of Pennsylvania, although still within the age limit for boys. Playing at "No. 2" on his high school team, he won all eleven of his matches in the Interscholastic League, and has, in fact, lost only two in as many years of tournament competition. In the finals of the Pennsylvania junior tourney he defeated the boy who was ranked above him on his school team.

Watson resembles Charles S. Garland in the style of his game, as well as in appearance and personality. But his tennis is somewhat more aggressive than that of the Yale captain, while, following in the Pittsburgher's footsteps, he already seems headed toward a national junior championship in the near future.

Philadelphia has other young tennis players who demand recognition, among them George Dornheim, Rodney Beck, and the still young but steadily developing Hough of Penn Charter School, whose mother ranks among the best women players of the State. Miss Katherine Porter, who won the first girls' national championship last year, is Philadelphia's most important young tennis representative on the feminine side.

New York's Achievements.

The record of New York's youthful tennis players scarcely requires comment. At the head of the list stands the phenomenal Vincent Richards, who began as national boy champion two years ago, and has since won the senior indoor singles, indoor and outdoor doubles, (with Tilden,) and mixed doubles titles, (with Miss Marion Zinderstein,) besides repeating his triumph in the boys' division, and adding the junior doubles championship with Harold Taylor. The latter is the present holder of the national junior singles title. Frank T. Anderson of Brooklyn is the metropolitan junior champion, and has been a strong contender for national honors for two seasons. Cecil Donaldson holds the Brooklyn junior title and is also a tournament player whom none of the older men can afford to hold cheaply.

Among the young stars who have risen during the current season are Jerry Lange, aged 14; Teddy Le Gros, and Harry Brunie, not to speak of Steve Schlesinger, Bernstein, and other boys who have done well in tournament play. Abraham Bassford, 3d, has done little outdoor playing this season, but won the indoor senior championship of the 7th Regiment Tennis Club and was last year runner up to Richards for the national boys' title.

Among the girls of the Metropolitan district whose tennis is worthy of mention are Miss Helen Rice, holder for two seasons of the girls' Metropolitan title; Miss Katherine Gardner of Long Island, the present national girls' champion; the three Hooker sisters, of whom the second, Adelaide, defeated Miss Porter, last year's girl champion, at Philadelphia; Miss Cerce Baker, runner up to Miss Rice in this year's girls' Metropolitan, and the Misses Martha and Alice Bayard of Short Hills, who captured the first Metropolitan doubles championship for girls. Truly, the American tennis world need have no fear concerning the development of its Larneds, McLoughlins, May Suttons, and Molla Bjurstedts for the future.

MAN TAKES TENNIS TITLE.

Defeats Major in Close Match for Connecticut Championship.

NORFOLK, Conn., Aug. 9.—A. H. Man, Jr., of Richmond Hill, L. I., won the Connecticut State tennis title on the Norfolk Club courts this afternoon, by defeating Cedric Major of Brooklyn.

The contest was full of spirit and the score stood 7—9, 14—12, 6—2, 1—6, 6—1. Man now has two legs on the Bridgman cup, which is also in competition. He won the State championship last year. Major won the championship in 1915 and also took the Bridgman cup. A new trophy was then offered by Mrs. H. H. Bridgman.

The finals in the doubles were won by Man and Major, who defeated R. S. Lighton and W. J. Toussaint, 7—5, 6—1, 6—1.

Putting Detroit on Athletic Map.

With the object of putting Detroit back on the athletic map an organization to be known as the Detroit Amateur Athletic Association has been formed. Paul Roberts of the Detroit A. C., Dr. C. B. Lundy, a Recreation Commissioner, and Mr. Lynch, a prominent advocate of amateur sports, are leading the fight to restore interest in amateur sports. Dr. Lundy, for the city, declared that plans were already under consideration to provide quarter-mile running tracks in all of Detroit's playgrounds, together with swimming pools in the public parks.

FOOTBALL SEASON TO OPEN SEPT. 27

Harvard and Other Elevens Will Then Get Into Action—Schedules Are Announced.

College football will experience a return to the system that was in operation before the war this coming season, which will open on Sept. 27 with a number of gridiron clashes between elevens of some of the leading Eastern institutions. The cry of the baseball fan will still be ringing in the air when the season of pigskin and moleskin will be on in full blast, for, a week later, on Oct. 4, almost every college in the country which supports the popular Autumn game will inaugurate its schedule.

Only one member of the Big Three will get going Sept. 27. Harvard is scheduled to play Bates at Cambridge on that date, continuing the Cambridge policy of starting a week earlier than the other members of the charmed circle. Yale and Princeton will open their seasons on Oct. 4, the Elis clashing with Springfield Y. M. C. A. at New Haven, while the Trinity eleven will invade Tigertown. The season will proceed thereafter to Nov. 29, when the last big fixture of the year, the Army-Navy game, will be played on the Polo Grounds.

Six Eastern institutions will have their teams on the gridiron on Sept. 27. In addition to the Harvard game, Middlebury will tackle the West Point Cadets, Rhode Island State will assist Brown in the opening at Providence, Springfield Y. M. C. A. will oppose Dartmouth at Hanover, Ursinus will usher in the season with Rutgers at New Brunswick, and Geneva will tear off the lid with Washington and Jefferson at Washington, Penn. Pennsylvania, Syracuse, Cornell, Annapolis, Colgate, and the host of other Eastern elevens will start their gridiron battles Oct. 4.

The Yale-Princeton-Harvard series will begin Nov. 8, when the Crimson eleven tackles the Tigers at Princeton. The New Jersey students will invade the Eli gridiron on Nov. 15, and on Nov. 22 the Yale and Harvard elevens clash at Cambridge. Harvard has listed nine contests, Yale eight, and Princeton seven.

New Mermaid in Detroit.

A new star has appeared in the ranks of the country's women swimmers. She is Miss Marie Curtis of Detroit, who recently created a record of 1:10 for the 75-yard straightaway. Miss Curtis is 18 years old and has been swimming since Jan. 1. She is a member of Detroit Northern High School's swimming team, and does all her training at Lake Orion, Mich. Miss Curtis's favorite event is the 50-yard backstroke swim, at which she hopes to make a record. She has covered the distance in 0:30 3-5, against the record of 0:28 4-5.

POLO FOR OFFICERS' CUPS.

Elephants Four Win from Tigers at Rumson Club.

Special to The New York Times.

RUMSON, N. J., Aug. 9.—In a fast polo match played for the Rumson Country Club Officers' Cups before a large gallery of society folk from the Rumson and shore sections, the Rumson Elephants defeated the Rumson Tigers on Herbert Field today by the score of 13½ goals to 10½. With Harry East, 17 goal man, and C. S. Lee, a 4 goal player, the Tigers gave the Elephants a 7 goal handicap.

At half time, six goals by East and 2 by W. S. Jones, Jr., gave the Tigers 8 goals, while 2 goals by Waters and 1 by Catina, with the 7 handicap, gave the Elephants a lead of 3 goals. Two goals by Jones and 1 by Lee in the fifth and sixth periods, and fouls against Catina and Hauck, made the score a tie at 10½ each at the end of the sixth chukker.

A pretty shot by J. Ford Johnson, Jr., for the Elephants was the only scoring done in the seventh, and to the surprise of the spectators, the Tigers were held scoreless in the seventh and eighth periods, while Waters and Ross tallied in the eighth, and sewed up the hard-fought game. Harry East's remarkable all-around work featured.

The lineup:

RUMSON TIGERS.		RUMSON ELEPHANTS.
No. 1—W. S. Jones, Jr.	3	No. 1—J. B. Waters	2
No. 2—Harry East	7	No. 2—L. H. Ross	2

Total	15	Total	8

Goals—Elephants: Waters, (3,) Catina, Johnson, Ross. Allowed by handicap, 8. Foul by Catina, ½ goal penalty. Total score—13½. Tigers: East, (6,) Jones, (4,) Lee. Foul by Hauck, ½ goal penalty. Total score—10½. Referees—G. Jason Waters and Colonel Howard S. Borden.

CHANGE IN TENNIS DRAW.

Pairings for National Doubles at Longwood Are Revised.

The United States National Lawn Tennis Association announces a correction in the draw for the national doubles championship, which will begin Aug. 11 at Boston. The draw was made Thursday afternoon before the Australian teams left for Newport and in writing it down the byes were disarranged. Consequently, the pairings were altered, although the order of the teams as they were drawn was not changed.

Officials of the Longwood Cricket Club, which holds the event, were notified of the correction as soon as it was made. The first round matches to be played on Monday bring together Ichiya Kumagae and Harold A. Throckmorton of New York, who won the Middle States sectional championship, and R. Norris Williams of Boston and Watson M. Washburn of New York, New England sectional champions. They play at 3:45 P. M. In the other match, Maurice C. McLaughlin and Thomas C. Bundy of Los Angeles play another California pair, Willis E. Davis and Van Dyke Johns, who won the Western sectional. Their match is scheduled at 2:30 Monday afternoon.

The second round matches on Monday are: Frederick B. Alexander and S. Howard Voshell of New York, Tri-State sectional champions vs. Randolph Lycett and R. V. Thomas, Australia; Norman E. Brookes and Gerald L. Patterson, Australia, vs. winner of Kumagae-Throckmorton vs. Williams-Washburn match; winner of McLaughlin-Bundy vs. Davis-Johns match against Fred H. Harris and Conrad B. Doyle of Washington, Middle Atlantic sectional; William M. Johnston and Clarence J. Griffin of San Francisco, Northwestern sectional, vs. Louis Thalheimer and Leven Jestor of Dallas, Southwestern sectional winners.

Weather permitting, the semi-finals will be played on Wednesday, the finals on Thursday, and the challenge round on Saturday. Leaving Friday open permits the tournament to be finished on time in case there should be a day of rain.

Players expecting to compete in the national singles championship at Forest Hills should forward their entries to the office of the United States National Lawn Tennis Association, at 20 Broad Street, New York City, before Friday, Aug. 15. The response thus far has shown very general interest in the tournament, but there seems to be a mistaken feeling among some players that their entries are not desired. The committee in charge is doing everything it can to maintain the "open" status of the tournament, so as to give every one a chance. Entries, however, must be sent in before the 15th to receive consideration.

TIE IN CHESS TOURNEY.

Eastman and Ring Divide Prizes in Troy Matches.

Special to The New York Times.

TROY, N. Y., Aug. 9.—The annual meeting of the New York State Chess Association was wound up at the Y. M. C. A. here today when the deciding games in Classes B and C were played.

P. R. Eastman of Albany and Henry Ring of Hartford, Conn., each with a score of 6—3, tied for first and second places in Class B, dividing the prizes. A. Rankin, Jr., of this city failed in his effort to overtake the leaders, but tied for third with T. Powell, Troy, and L. Guckemus, Utica, at 5—4.

The tie in Class C between T. H. Stevens, Waterford, and J. W. Kennedy, Troy, was played off and won by Kennedy.

Becker Playing Well in West.

Beals Becker, former Giant outfielder, and George Cochran, who at one time held down a position with the Boston Red Sox, are doing all in their power now to land for Kansas City the American Association pennant. In a recent game the players accounted for three home runs, Becker accomplishing the unusual feat of rapping out two circuit drives in the one game.

OUTSIDER WINNER OF FREE-FOR-ALL

Russell Boy Defeats Two Noted Pacers in $2,500 Event at North Randall.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Aug. 9.—The biggest upset of the Grand Circuit Meeting came today when Russell Boy, an outsider, won the free-for-all pace, purse $2,500, the feature of the get-away card at North Randall.

The contest was figured as a strictly two-horse race between Miss Harris M. and Single G., but neither was able to get to the wire first. Russell Boy led all around in the first two heats, winning with plenty to spare. In the third heat, however, after leading most of the way, he succumbed to Directum J. about fifty feet from the finish and finished half a length back.

Neither Russell Boy nor Directum J. was given much consideration by the speculators. They sold at $20 in the auction pool, while Miss Harris M. brought $300 and Single G. $230. Britton Forbes and Amardale were the only favorites to win.

Today's receipts, $4,300, were given to charity.

STARS REFUSE TO SWIM.

Australian Girl Athletes Decline Issue in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9. — Out-of-town swimmers won the bulk of honors in the women's swimming events here, in which Misses Fanny Durack and Wilhelmina Wylie, the Australian stars, refused to compete. The Duluth Boat Club's crews easily excelled those of the Lincoln Park Boat Club in the second annual water carnival of the Chicago Athletic Association.

The Australian swimmers were on the shore, but refused to go into the water, asserting that they had agreements with Frederick W. Rubien, Secretary of the National A. A. U., to swim in only exhibition or handicap events. Local officials insisted that this was contrary to their understanding and that the failure of the Australians to swim in competitive events today would be taken up with the National A. A. U. and might result in cancellation of the remainder of their tour of this country.

The Australians were on a tour of the United States and Canada, scheduled to appear in many cities, including New York, Aug. 18, for the quarter-mile world's championship; Chicago, Aug. 23, long distance championship, and Los Angeles, Oct. 5, for the mile championship.

CANN WINS CENTURY SWIM.

War Hero Defeats Buck in Highland Lake Event.

Special to The New York Times.

WINSTED, Conn., Aug. 9.—In the waters of Highland Lake, where he learned to swim, before an audience of 1,500, Tedford Cann, former national champion, this afternoon defeated Norman Buck, also of New York Athletic Club, in a 100-yard swimming race. The time was 0:58⅘.

Cann used the Australian crawl with six-beat trudgen stroke. Saacke of New York gave one of the finest exhibitions of high and fancy diving ever seen at the resort. The events were under the auspices of Highland Lake Club.

MANY TEAMS ENTER POLO TOURNAMENTS

Army Fours Will Compete in Championships to be Played at Philadelphia Club.

Stability in the renaissance of "the galloping game," now that the war is over, is guaranteed by the national interest in the championships of the Polo Association, the junior, senior, and open, which are to be played during the last fortnight of September at the Philadelphia Country Club, Bala, Penn. The game furnished more than 1,000 men to the colors, and many paid the supreme sacrifice. But now the signal is "Boots and saddles!" for polo.

The senior championship was established in 1895, the junior in 1900, and as the growth of the game created a demand for one, the open championship made its start in 1910. From its inception until 1899, the tournament with only the senior to decide was held on the baseball field, or as some called it the parade ground, just beyond Prospect Park, Brooklyn. These were the days of horse-drawn buses, coaches, breaks, with four horse teams, unlimited hansom cabs, those "gondolas of the streets," as Robert Louis Stevenson termed them. There was no admittance charge and 20,000 to 30,000 watched the game while standing or perched on some kind of conveyance.

It was at the Country Club of Brookline, Boston's oldest and most blue-blooded of such clubs, that the junior came into being at the first tournament after the change from Prospect Park. After that the two championships were played over many fields, in 1907 as far from Broadway as the Onwentsia Club, at Lake Forest, Ill., but from 1909 until 1916, the title events were decided at the Point Judith Polo Club, Narragansett Pier, where three fields were laid out, and the proud claim made, with the tacit consent of the Polo Association, of "the American Hurlingham."

Army Teams Are Expected.

An army team is expected in the junior championship in September, for the first time, and possibly in the senior and open. It will have two picked men from the Army Polo Association as the nucleus, with two more crack polo players from those who joined the colors when America entered the war and have not yet been mustered out. An advantage of this new element for the army to draw on is that the former civilians, and men of the same stamp who will not be able to play themselves, will loan their polo mounts to the soldier team. The army players could always hit and ride equal to any one, but as the Government would not pay the price and the soldiers could not do so, they have been "out-ponied." By the help of the former civilians it is believed that this handicap will be overcome.

The Santa Barbara four, which has been playing at Meadow Brook, Cedarhurst, and Rumson, is now temporarily on the shelf, as two of the members have been recalled to the Pacific Coast by business. But the team, which has a remarkably good set of mounts, will be reunited at Bala, and there may be another team on from the land of the Argonauts. The Middle West will be represented by teams from Ohio, Kansas City and Chicago, while the South, New England, the metropolitan district and Pennsylvania will also send teams. A record entry is anticipated.

Only the open championship, which is for teams made up of players irrespective of their club affiliations, is available for foreign teams. The perpetual cup is the gift of Joseph B. Thomas, Jr., made while he was shaping the destinies of Point Judith polo. The first winners were a four from the Ranelagh (England) Club, made up of R. N. Grenfell, F. Grenfell, the Earl of Rocksavage, and F. A. Gill. The Polo Association adds individual cups to be won outright, as in the other two championships, which adds spice to the glory of gaining one of the trophies and having one's name engraved on its polished exterior.

Rules on Handicaps.

The senior and junior championships are not open to all, as with the Thomas Cup. A club may enter only players directly identified with it. No player with a handicap above five goals may play in the junior, and no team may have an aggregate handicap over twenty goals, but the senior is open to players of any handicap. Both titles are played for on flat terms—that is, no handicaps. The distinction is merely to define the class; it has nothing to do with the ages of the players.

A gold vase, presented by William Waldorf Astor through the Tuxedo Club, is the perpetual emblem of the senior, and the late Samuel D. Warren of Dedham, Mass., gave the trophy played for annually in the junior event. Great Neck, playing Thomas Hitchcock, Sr., J. Watson Webb, Malcolmn Stevenson, and Louis E. Stoddard, won the senior at the last championship tournament in 1916, and Meadow Brook Third, F. S. Von Stade, Raymond Belmont, Thomas Hitchcock, Jr., and Morgan Belmont, captured the junior.

There is every convenience for spectators at the Philadelphia Country Club, for there are grandstands on both sides of the field, besides plenty of standing room and parking spaces along the side lines. The club house is one of the handsomest and best appointed in the United States. The only time the championship tournament has ever been played in Pennsylvania was in 1903, over the same field that will be the battle ground in September.

In that year the senior was won by the Country Club of Westchester four, John E. Cowdin, H. P. Whitney, J. M. Waterbury, Jr., and Lawrence Waterbury, while the junior title was snapped up by the Polo Club of Lakewood team, made up of George J. Gould, his sons, Kingdon and Jay, and Benjamin Nicoll. The Polo Association has full charge of the tournament, all the entries being sent to the New York office, where the drawings will be made. There will probably be some cups given by the Philadelphia Country Club for special games on the off days, and as soon as information is received as to these extra features the advance programs will be sent out. This will be about Sept. 1.

EASTERN TEAMS TO ENTER.

Club Fours Will Have Pick of High-Class Players.

MEADOW BROOK, L. I., Aug. 9.—Four polo teams from Long Island and New York, the Meadow Brook, Rockaway, Piping Rock, and Cooperstown clubs will compete in the national senior championship events.

The teams will include about all the high-class players of the United States. All their strings of mounts will also be sent over to Philadelphia. Meadow Brook will probably line up with C. C. Rumsey, Thomas Hitchcock, Jr., J. Watson Webb, and Devereux Milburn in the senior event. Rockaway will play with L. E. Stoddard, E. W. Hopping, Malcolm Stevenson, and J. Cheever Cowdin. The lineup of Piping Rock and Cooperstown has not yet been decided.

Competing in the two junior championship events will be two teams from the Bryn Mawr club, Cooperstown, Rockaway, Meadow Brook, Coronado, Cal.; Dedham, Mass., and probably a team from the Dayton, Ohio, club, where some very likely players have developed during the past two years. Lieutenant James C. Cooley, late of the Sixth Cavalry, now entirely recovered from his recent accident, will manage the tournament.

NO POLO CLASH NEXT YEAR.

HEMPSTEAD, L. I., Aug. 9.—Word has been received here that in all likelihood there will be no international polo game in England next Spring owing to the inability of the English players to organise and purchase suitable mounts, which would be necessary for such an event, which requires the pick of a country's polo mounts, and as attention in this direction has been curtailed during the war and many of its desirable ponies sold in this country and elsewhere, the brief time to mount and train a defending team would not be sufficient.

Henry L. Herbert, the Chairman of the National Polo Association, said today that it was generally understood among the members of the Hurlingham Club of England that a challenge would not be sent unless it was possible for them to take up the situation. The large number of British players who recently returned from four years' service have not as yet had time to adjust their affairs, and the possible postponement of the match is greatly due to conditions in England not being favorable for international competition at this time.

British polo authorities, according to the late English newspapers, expect a challenge next year from the United States for the International Polo Cup, and preparations are already being made at Hurlingham to choose a team to defend the trophy and to get together a suitable string of ponies.

A meeting of the Hurlingham Polo Committee was recently held, with Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, the permanent Chairman of the committee, presiding. Others present were Captain Frederick Guest, Major F. W. Barrett, and W. S. Buckmaster. After a lengthy session it was decided to leave the choice of an English team to a subcommittee on selection.

Under the terms of the formal deed of gift drawn up in 1911, when the Westchester Polo Club, the original donors in 1886 of the cup, handed it over to the American Polo Association, challenges must be issued not later than Jan. 1 of the year in which the competition is to be held.

PLAN UNITED HUNTS MEET.

Second Two-Day Session Booked for Aug. 30 and Sept. 6.

One of the interesting features of the late Summer racing season will be the second session of the United Hunts at Belmont Park Terminal, Aug. 30 and Sept. 6. The first date will enable those metropolitan enthusiasts who were unable to visit the Spa in quest of their favorite sport to witness racing which will be of excellent class on the flat and over the jumps.

Owners and trainers are flocking to the standard of the United Hunts with coin of the realm and entries, and have signified their intention of being represented by the best in their barns. The fact that the first day of the meeting just about splits the Saratoga and Belmont Park sessions will warrant the appearance of the best of the steeplechase contingent and those flat running horses which have a leaning for grass courses.

Distance events on the flat and over what is considered the finest steeplechase course in America will make up the programs for the successive days.

SAWYER IS VICTOR IN SEESAW GOLF

MISSED PUTT TELLS TALE

Ardsley Player Fails to Sink an Easy One for a Half on Decisive Hole of Thrilling Match.

In a neck-and-neck thirty-eight hole battle over a course in perfect condition, experience, with Ned Sawyer in the stellar rôle, triumphed over the youthful Jesse Sweetser by the margin of 1 up for the long day's play in the Victory Trophy tournament at Siwanoy yesterday. The former Wheaton golfer, who now makes his home at the Siwanoy Club, journeyed about eleven miles over hill and dale with the Ardsley boy, to win by one-sixteenth of an inch on the thirty-eighth green, said sixteenth of an inch being the distance by which Sweetser missed his putt for a half at the deciding hole. The margin was not "as wide as a church door, nor as deep as a well," but it served. A large and enthusiastic multi-colored gallery of silks and nets clambered over ditches and up hillsides after the golfers, and many of them were eighteen down to weariness when the final putt was sunk. Mainly due to the hard work of George Lackey, Chairman of the Greens Committee, the course was in topnotch condition and gave fine opportunity for bold play for the pin and cup.

The final match of the beaten sixteen, between G. L. Conley, Westchester champion, and the former English expert, J. S. Worthington, both home club players, was almost as good as the trophy contest. Worthington led at the end of the morning round by the narrow margin of a single hole, but by the turn in the afternoon Conley had not only caught him but had passed him and was holding a lead of two holes. See-sawing, Conley finally held his advantage, and ended the match on the home hole, 2 up.

The morning round between Sawyer and Sweetser was harrowing to both players. It was mostly a give-and-take battle, with the scores of both golfers showing signs of the bitter struggle. Only a single hole in the entire round, the sixteenth, was halved. The Ardsley youth jumped into the lead at the start by taking the first and second holes, but three putts on the third green and heavy business in a trap on the fourth lost him this advantage and brought the match all square again. On the fifth green it was the home entry's turn to take three putts, which he did fluently, and lost the hole. Turn and turn about is fair play, so on the short sixth hole the Ardsley youngster stood up like a man and took his three putts, squaring the match again.

Sawyer's Direction Unfortunate.

Taking the honor on the seventh tee, Sawyer hit a beautiful ball, long and straight, but, unfortunately, its straightness was in entirely the wrong direction and it went out of bounds. Even with this he might have won, for Sweetser played golf of the circus variety. He put his second into a trap, pitched his third across the green, and chipped his fourth into the cup. Why carry a putter if such things are being done? Sawyer explored a trap on the way to the eighth green and was two down, but narrowed this margin to one down at the turn, where Sweetser overplayed his approach.

With par golf on the tenth, eleventh and twelfth holes, the Ardsley boy drew away from Sawyer and was four up, but trouble on the succeeding holes, coupled with a fine birdie three by Sawyer on the fifteenth, brought the margin down to a single hole again. The sixteenth was halved, the first halved hole of the match. On the seventeenth Sweetser was a bit short at the green, giving Sawyer a putt for a three which he missed, but when the ball stopped rolling the Ardsley entrant found that the way to the cup was partially abstructed by traffic. Not being able to negotiate this half stymie, Sweetser lost the hole and the match was all square again. On the home hole Sawyer sliced his second into the water, dropped out for a penalty stroke, and found that the seven he could get was useless, so he conceded the hole to Sweetser, who had a sure 5. This left the youngster one up for the morning round.

Three times on the outward journey in the afternoon did the veteran draw square with the youngster, but each time the boy came back with a win that held his lead of a single hole. Sweetser was playing his shots better than his opponent, but Sawyer was making fine use of his experience. He rarely tossed away an opportunity to get inside his opponent's ball, but when he "left the door open" himself Sweetser, instead of coming in, invariably jumped over the roof. On the second hole Sawyer topped his drive into the long grass off the tee. He stuck right to business, however, and when the scores were counted at the green he had earned, really earned, a half in 5.

Both Land in Traps.

On the short third, both pitched into traps, Sawyer to the left and Sweetser to the right. The Ardsley golfer cut his shot too fine and went over the green on his out, chipped back in three and failed to hole his putt for a four. Sawyer was well out and squared the match with a four. There is an old oak tree on the fourth hole against which Sawyer seems to have a particular grudge. Friday, against Lewis, he hit this unoffending tree a terrific blow with his drive, but the ball bounced out on the fair green. The tree got its revenge yesterday, for it deflected Sawyer's drive into a neat little pocket lined with good hard stones. Sawyer took an iron and tore in after it, but the best he could get was about three feet away. He took his brassie and got well up on his third, but Sweetser again led at one up.

It was nip and tuck all the way, and "nip" having won on the fourth, "tuck" proceeded to take the fifth when Sweetser sliced his second, so that he was not only down a shaft sunk by some enterprising groundhog, but he was stymied by a tree as well. This combination was too much for him, and with monotonous regularity the match was all even again. In the short sixth, Sawyer, holding the honor, pitched into trouble in the valley short of the green. This was a place where an old hand at the tournament game would have played safe on his tee shot, but the ambitious Ardsley youth hit the ball too far and it was out of bounds. No harm was done, however, as his second attempt was a beauty, and Sawyer, in negotiating a particularly difficult putt, laid himself a dead stymie. He made a fine try at jumping it, but the ball hit the rim and bounced beyond. However, things were squared again at the next hole, where Sweetser took approximately three putts. He made up for this by a twenty-foot putt for a birdie on the ninth green, however, and was still one up at the turn.

Seesaw continued to be the order of the day, the Ardsley golfer finding the brook on the twelfth and the homeplayer getting just as much trouble in a trap on the thirteenth. It was the fourteenth and fifteenth that ruined the chances of the youngster. He was nicely on the fourteenth green with a good half in view when he hit a regular brassie shot twenty feet past the cup and failed to hole coming back. On the fifteenth he was badly short on a chip shot, and criminally short on his putt for a half. He deserved to lose that hole, and for the first time in the match he was one down. Coming so near the end, it looked fatal, but a three-quarter stymie intervened on the seventeenth, which Sawyer could not slip by, and the match was even again for the ninth time. The home hole was halved, and the weary players continued to the thirty-seventh.

Sweetser's Lost Opportunity.

Sawyer's second was a bit short, and again Sweetser should have made sure of getting inside his opponent's ball, but he shot away off to the side and had to hole a hair-raising putt for a half in four. His nerve was right with him when he hit that ball, and the smile he wore when it hit the back of the cup was big enough to cover Dutchess County.

On the deciding hole the youngster had the longer drive, but Sawyer slapped a long iron right up to the pin, giving him a putt for a three. Sweetser was just a shade over on his second, but used a putter and slid by the cup. Sawyer putted for his third and missed, but was dead to the cup and a good marker for the Ardsley player. It was an easy putt, with the big silver Victory Trophy hanging on the end of it, and Sawyer's ball showing him the way to the cup. But Sweetser missed it, shook hands smilingly with his opponent, and the huge trophy donated by Rodman Wanamaker will remain in the custody of the Siwanoy Club, and the silver replica will adorn the Sawyer domicile.

The summaries:

Final Round, Trophy Flight—D. E. Sawyer, Siwanoy, defeated J. W. Sweetser, Ardsley, 1 up, 38 holes.

WHITE TAKES FINAL ON NATIONAL LINKS

Nassau Golfer Wins Semi-Final from Whitney and Then Defeats McIlwaine.

SOUTHAMPTON, N. Y., Aug. 9.—The unexpected happened this morning when Gardiner W. White, Nassau, took into camp Nelson Whitney, Audubon, to the tune of 1 up in the invitation tournament on the National Golf Links of America, but it took the play of nineteen holes to turn the trick.

Both players carded 80 for the morning round, with two approximations. Whitney lost his opportunity while playing the 17th hole when his ball landed in a rat hole which he considered unplayable, and picked up. The extra hole was won by White in an easy manner, as Whitney, who came to the green in two, ran past the cup about ten feet and failed to get down for a half.

The cards:

White—Out	5	5	5	5	5	2	5	5	5—42
In	4	5	4	3	5	4	4	4	5—38	—80
Whitney—Out	4	4	5	3	6	4	5	4	5—40
In	5	5	4	4	4	4	4	3	5—40	—80

The afternoon final between White and Archibald McIlwaine, National, was only productive of fair golf on the outward journey, with slight improvement on the homeward hike. McIlwaine's second shot at the seventeenth was from a bunker. The ball landed on the golf bag of a player, who carelessly laid it on the mounds protecting the green, and McIlwaine had to play the ball from the bag. This trouble caused him to lose the hole, as White holed out in 3 to McIlwaine's 4.

VERMONT TITLE TO WALKER

BENNINGTON, Vt., Aug. 9.—A. L. Walker, Jr., the intercollegiate golf champion, added to his laurels today by capturing the Vermont State championship title, defeating J. G. Estey of Brattleboro by 5 up and 4 to play. Neither player was strong during the morning round, and Walker finished 4 up, going at about an eighty clip.

This afternoon the golf was of a high order. Estey reduced the lead, when Walker was in a trap at the first, on an almost perfect drive, and again at the second, when Walker overplayed the green.

At the fourth both pitched onto the green with chances for twos, but Walker stymied himself and became but 1 up. Estey lost the sixth because he played too close to the trees, and he pulled his second at the seventh. At the ninth Walker holed a long putt for a birdie 3 and was again 4 up.

At the start of the afternoon round Estey made a clever recovery and followed with a lone putt for a half in par 4. A short approach cost Estey the eleventh, but the loss was regained when Walker pitched over the short thirteenth. The match ended at the fourteenth, where Estey sliced a rather long approach, with Walker barely missing a 4.

MRS. BARLOW WINS ANOTHER

Philadelphia Golfer Adds Shenecossett Title to List of Triumphs.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Aug. 9.—Mrs. Ronald H. Barlow of Philadelphia won the Shenecossett championship here today, when she defeated Miss Elaine Rosenthal of Chicago in the final by 1 up. In the early stages it looked as if the Chicago golfer was going to have things pretty much her own way. She started out by winning the first two holes and after losing the third came back and resumed her lead at the fourth when she made a fine two. Mrs. Barlow won the long fifth and then halves followed at the next two holes. The match was squared at the eighth when the Philadelphia star took the hole with a par four.

Miss Rosenthal won the ninth and Mrs. Barlow the tenth. The Philadelphia woman drove out of bounds on the short eleventh and lost this one, but on the twelfth Miss Rosenthal knocked her opponent's ball into the hole. It was now the Chicago woman's turn to win, but after leading up to the green with a stroke to spare she put her approach into the trap and finally lost the hole, becoming one down for the first time. The next hole she lost also. Halves resulted at the fifteenth and sixteenth and Miss Rosenthal encouraged her followers by winning the seventeenth, but as both took fours on the last hole the match went to Mrs. Barlow. The Philadelphia woman has now won all of the important woman championships played this season.

The card:

Mrs. Barlow—
Out	6	6	4	4	5	4	5	5	6—45
In	4	5	4	6	4	4	5	6	4—42	—87
Miss Rosenthal—
Out	6	5	5	2	6	4	5	6	5—44
In	5	3	6	7	6	4	5	5	4—45	—89

In the second sixteen Miss T. Palmer defeated Mrs. E. H. Baker, Jr., by 2 and 1. In the beaten eight Miss Lois Stumer defeated Mrs. W. N. Bicknell by 6 and 5.

TOO MUCH BUMPING ON NEWARK TRACK

James O'Brien of the Loughlin Lyceum, local 300-yard indoor champion, yesterday raced to victory in the 600-yard invitation run, the principal event on the program at the annual track and field meet of the Catholic Young Men's Diocesan Union, held at City Field, Newark, N. J., but was disqualified after breasting the tape. A decision of the judges deprived O'Brien of the premier prize, after the officials had ruled the Loughlin Lyceum sprinter and Arthur Reilly of the Knights of St. Antony out of the order of finish because of fouls.

The foul which caused this action came on the backstretch when O'Brien and Reilly, fighting for the leadership, bumped each other. To the observers it appeared that Reilly suffered most from the collision, for he was thrown out of his stride, while O'Brien quickly recovered and continued to the tape, leading Cornelius Shaughnessy, national quarter-mile titleholder, by about five yards. Immediately after the race O'Brien and Reilly nearly came to blows, officials stepping between the athletes in time to avert a scene. Then followed a consultation and O'Brien and Reilly were disqualified and a new order of finish ordered.

This change gave the race to Shaughnessy, who followed O'Brien over the line. Walter Powe of the Alpha P. C. C. gained second place, and Edward Haupt third prize. The time for the race was 1:17 2-5.

BAKER TAKES RACE AT TRAVERS ISLAND

British Champion Outdistances Rivals by Ten Yards in Half-Mile Event.

Homer Baker of the Glencoe A. C., British half-mile running champion, registered what is perhaps his best performance of the outdoor season yesterday in the closing track and field meet of the series which has been in progress under the auspices of the New York A. C. at Travers Island.

Starting from scratch in the half-mile run, against a field of fourteen capable rivals, all liberally handicapped, the Glencoe A. C. middle-distance star retrieved his allowances in a brilliant display of mid-season form, and breasted the tape a winner by the convincing margin of ten yards, in 1:55 2-5. This time is faster than Baker has returned for any previous public half-mile race this season, and indicates that the holder of the British title is at the top of his running form. Athletic fans who witnessed yesterday's performance declared emphatically that the runner who beats Baker in the coming district championships will create a new half-mile record.

Baker ran a well-judged race from the start. He got away to a fast pace off the honor mark, with Jack Sellers of the New York A. C., national indoor middle-distance champion. Gradually Baker increased his stride, creeping away from his scratch partner, and decreasing noticeably the distance between himself and the handicap runners. Up to the final lap Baker cut down many of his rivals, but Sellers was unable to hold to the pace and disappeared rearward. On the last turn the British titleholder raced past William Goode and Louis Gaskell, who were battling for the lead, and in a burst of closing speed, picked up an advantage of about ten yards over the worsted.

Two national titleholders, experienced defeat because of the handicaps distributed against them. Loren Murchison, the St. Louis speed flash, who holds the national furlong title, started from scratch in the 220-yard dash, and just managed to miss landing first place. Murchison, after literally flying over the ground from the start of the sprint, was pocketed on the turn into the stretch, and was kept on the inside until it was too late for him to recover. B. O. Sandquist, a Swedish-American A. C. sprinter, who had an allowance of thirteen yards, won the premier prize by inches, in 0:23 2-5, Murchison finishing close on his heels.

Matt McGrath was the other champion to fail in an effort to redeem handicaps. McGrath was on scratch in the 16-pound hammer event, in which competition he holds the title, but fell short by seven and one-half inches of winning the first prize. This went to J. Anderson, Jr., unattached, who was allotted 25 feet and heaved the ball an actual distance of 139 feet 11½ inches. This brought Anderson's total up to 164 feet 11½ inches, against a heave of 164 feet 4 inches for McGrath, who finished second.

Pastime A. C. representatives showed to the front in the field competitions, capturing three of the four conducted. John Conway took the discus throw, Bernard Lichtman showed the way in the javelin throw, and S. Lehrer finished first in the running broad jump.

The summaries:

220-Yard Dash; Handicap.—Won by B. O. Sandquist, Swedish-American A. C., (13 yards;) Loren Murchison, unattached, (scratch,) second; Percy Verwayen, Salem-Crescent A. C., (9 yards,) third. Time—0:23 2-5.

880-Yard Run; Handicap.—Won by Homer Baker, Glencoe A. C., (scratch;) William Goode, Alpha P. C. C., (35 yards,) second; Louis Gaskell, Kings County A. A., (38 yards,) third. Time—1:55 2-5.

One-Mile Run; Handicap.—Won by A. Turner, New York A. C., (20 yards;) William Goode, Alpha P. C. C., (35 yards,) second; Edward Rank, Paulist A. C., (50 yards,) third. Time—4:30 2-5.

Running Broad Jump; Handicap.—Won by S. Lehrer, Pastime A. C., (2 feet 6 inches,) with 20 feet 6¾ inches actual jump; E. Getter, Morningside A. C., (3 feet,) with 18 feet 11¾ inches, second; H. Fiegenbaum, Steinway Civic A. C., (3 feet,) 18 feet 8¾ inches, third.

Throwing the Javelin; Handicap.—Won by B. Lichtman, Pastime A. C., (30 feet,) with 140 feet 9 inches; E. Kettner, Hungarian-American A. C., (35 feet,) 184 feet ¾ inch, second; R. Burtt, New York A. C., (30 feet,) 139 feet, third.

Throwing the Discus; Handicap.—Won by John Conway, Pastime A. C., (24 feet,) with 115 feet 8 inches; J. Anderson, Jr., unattached, (15 feet,) 120 feet 10 inches, second; Nick Yiahnis, Pastime A. C., (12 feet,) 121 feet 10¼ inches, third.

Throwing the 16-Pound Hammer; Handicap.—Won by J. Anderson, Jr., unattached, (25 feet,) with 139 feet 11½ inches; Matt McGrath, New York A. C., (scratch,) 164 feet 4 inches, second; Pat O'Connor, unattached, (35 feet,) 120 feet 4 inches, third.

NEWCASTLE TEAM IS WINNER ON RANGE

Score of 759 Captures Civilian Title at Caldwell—Quantico Company Shoots Well.

CALDWELL, N. J., Aug. 9.—The Civilian Club match at the rifle range at the United States Navy Reservation today was won by the Newcastle Rifle and Gun Club of Wyoming with a grand total of 759 out of a possible total of 800. The championship company team match was won by the range company of Quantico, Va., with a score of 746 out of a possible 800. The matches were shot from the 200 and 500 yard ranges.

The members of the Civilian Club team and their scores are as follows:

J. A. Wade, 192; C. M. Gettys, 190; J. C. Luse, 194; L. C. Bishop, 183. Total, 759.

The second place in the civilian club match was won by the Central High School team, of Washington, D. C., composed of boys from 15 to 17 years old, by a score of 735. Third, Ordance Rifle Club of Washington, D. C., score 733. Fourth, Utah civilian team No. 2, score 730. Fifth, Utah civilian team No. 1, score 729.

The winners of the match were awarded the Trigger Trophy, presented by H. M. Robinson, editor of The Trigger Magazine. Forty-seven teams participated in the match, which was shot under favorable weather conditions.

J. J. Faragher, score 187; C. L. Wegle, score 188; J. J. Andrews, score 185, and F. W. Waters, score 186. Total, 746. Second place was won by Company O. U. S. Marine Corps, score 744. Third, Company C, Marine Detail of Caldwell, N. J., score 705. Fourth, Company D, Third Infantry, Wyoming National Guards, score 701.

The match was shot by teams from many sections of the country.

One of the exhibitions was the shooting of the Aviation Department, which is holding a meet here. Six airplanes manned by "aces" of the American Expeditionary Forces flew high in the air and shot at a parachute target which was towed by another airplane. Major J. A. Rudolph was in command of the aviation forces. The shooting field was donated by J. Francisco, whose only reward was the promise of an airplane ride.

The visitors' house, costing $35,000, put up by the National Catholic War Council for use of officers' wives visiting the field, was opened to women visitors.

MUNSIE IS HIGH GUN.

Hunter Wins on Handicap in Shoot of Bergen Beach Club.

Ten gunners took part in the first August shoot of the Bergen Beach Gun Club. The contest was exceptionally close, as there were less than seven "birds" between the first and the last gunner. The winner of the high scratch prize was H. S. K. Munsie with a total of 91 out of a possible 100 targets. The high handicap prize was taken by Dr. Hunter. Then came A. V. Suydam and Miss Alice Doerkin, a fourteen-year-old girl.

The scores:

CLERY WINS BY 1 UP.

Walker Forces Titleholder to Fight for Hempstead Golf Laurels.

The first round of match play for the club championship was held yesterday over the links of the North Hempstead Club. E. D. Clery, the playing-through titleholder, had a hard-fought contest with Allen Walker, the naval aviator, but he managed to stick in the tournament by the narrow margin of 1 up.

The other results were as follows: Captain John Horton defeated Edward Roesler, 2 and 1; Frank L. Belden defeated Fontaine Fox, 2 up; Dr. L. A. Newman defeated F. A. Tasker, 3 and 2; W. H. Chrystall defeated J. H. Love, 4 and 3; Walter Dumser defeated H. V. Proskey, 2 and 1; J. B. Pitman defeated Henry Evans, 2 up; Edward Cluff defeated E. M. Strong, 3 and 2.

BARNHILL BEATS MR. BOGEY

Fox Hills Player Defeats W. K. Colonel, 3 Up, in Tourney.

Bogey competition was the order of the day at the Fox Hill links yesterday. In Class A, W. Roy Barnhill topped the field, turning in a gross of 76, which with his handicap of 3 put him 3 up on the Colonel. The players used three-fourths of their handicap in their match against bogey. There were forty entries in Class A. T. K. McCarthy finishing in second place, 1 up, followed by George Fawcett, all even; P. E. Bessire, 1 down, and H. W. Bearman, 1 down.

In Class B, with thirty-eight entries, G. S. Schofield came in with a 91, which, coupled with his 14 handicap, put him 1 up on bogey. There was a tie for second place between H. H. Lloyd, W. Richardson, and J. H. Young, all 2 down, followed by Fred Mohr, 5 down.

Next Saturday will be the annual Brooklyn Day of the club, and the qualifying round of eighteen-hole medal play will be held for the Gardner Cup.

NAHMA FIRST HOME.

Commodore Ellis Sails Fish Yacht to Victory Off Center Island.

OYSTER BAY, L. I., Aug. 9.—Ralph Ellis, Commodore of the Seawanhaka-Corinthian Yacht Club, sailed his little fish yacht Nahma first across the finish line in the weekly races of the organization off Center Island here today. The craft defeated Volador, the property of George Nichols, by 1 minute and 33 seconds for the prize. Owing to the light wind, a late start was made. In the 18-foot class the winner was Water Baby. The yachts went over course No. 1 in a light breeze from the west southwest. The summary:

FANTASIE IS FIRST IN GRAVESEND RACE

Alcyon and Mouse Also Win in Regatta on Lower Bay—Finishes Are Close.

BRISK WIND FAVORS CRAFT

Contests Off Atlantic Yacht Club Consist of a Reach, a Run, and a Stiff Beat Home.

It was the turn of the Gravesend Bay Yacht Club to manage the yacht race on the lower bay yesterday. It was the sixth championship regatta of the season, and although there have been better breezes this Summer, the south wind that blew had enough body to give the Corinthians a satisfactory and fairly interesting brush. As usual, the start and the finish were off the Atlantic Yacht Club at Sea Gate. The course chosen by Chairman J. K. Birch for all classes was made up of a reach, a run, and a stiff beat home.

Interest centred principally in the second division of the handicap class. These yachts have been having some interesting scrapping all Summer. Yesterday they were sent twice around the course. At the end of the first round Fantasie, an Islip one-design yacht, now the property of I. L. Beebe, Jr., Atlantic Yacht Club, was leading the fleet. She was clocked at 4:16:12. Then came H. Pimm's Careless at 4:17:22, followed by the old Manhasset Bay one-design yacht Scylla, owned and sailed by Phil Crovat of the Atlantic Yacht Club, at 4:18:07, and the old Lipton Cup racer Loafer at 4:22:01.

During the second round Fantasie continued to run away from the other yachts. She covered the 7.3-mile course in 1:40:22 actual time. On the second thrash to windward, which was from the Fort Hamilton to the Bensonhurst mark, Scylla almost overhauled Careless. The latter, however, finished second on actual, and as she had 1 per cent. handicap on both Fantasie and Scylla, the craft easily held second position on the corrected time sheet.

That Handicapper Rummell had done his work well is shown by the close finish in the corrected time of the third division of the handicap class. On actual time Alcyon led home the fleet, finishing 12 minutes and 45 seconds ahead of Bug II., the second yacht to cross the line. On actual time Alcyon also won and Bug II. took second prize. However, there was only 45 seconds between the yachts when the corrected time was figured.

E. T. Supper's Mouse scored another victory among the lower bay knockabouts. The craft took 2:04:22 to sail the course. The time was excellent, as it took R. H. Finlay's Meteor, winner among the Star yachts, 2:11:36 to cover the same course. The Star yachts were late in starting, which may account for the difference in times. The summary:

RANI LEADS ARROW CLASS.

First Home Over Indian Harbor Yacht Club Course—June Bug Wins

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., Aug. 9.—With light northwest and north winds prevailing, Clifford B. Mallory's Rani won the race among the Arrow Class yachts this afternoon, over the five-mile course at the Indian Harbor Yacht Club.

In the Indian Harbor, one-design class, the June Bug, owned by H. H. Sturgis, was the first to cross the finish line.

TOMLINSON LEADS MERMEN.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Aug. 9.—Gilbert E. Tomlinson of the Meadowbrook Club, Philadelphia, won the 440-yard Middle Atlantic A. A. U. swimming championship today in Broomall's Lake, Media, Pa., in 6 minutes and 23 seconds. Charles W. Cronover of the Girard College, Philadelphia, was second, two-fifths of a second behind the winner. W. H. Ralston of the Germantown Boys' Club was third.

Eleanore Uhl, Meadow Brook, won the 100-yard Middle Atlantic championship for girls by less than a yard in 1:16, from Gertrude Artelt, also of the Meadow Brook Club. Frances Clark, West Branch Y. M. C. A., was third.

Alfred H. Hickman, Germantown Boys' Club, with 14 seconds start, won first place in the 220-yard men's handicap. His actual time was 3:36 2-5.

The open diving competition was won by Elizabeth Becker, of the Philadelphia Turners, the Middle Atlantic Association champion.

Terse News of Sports in Town and Out.

Champion Sculler Gets Praise.

Philadelphia rowing enthusiasts are showering unstinted praise on the broad shoulders of Jack Kelly of the Vesper Boat Club, winner of the national single sculls championship title at the recent N. A. A. O. regatta at Worcester. Kelly's victory at Worcester gave to Philadelphia its first national sculling championship title, although representatives of the Quaker City have twice won the association senior sculls championship. James B. Juvenal captured the event at Worcester in 1902, and S. F. Gordon won at Washington in 1910. Both these oarsmen, incidentally, were members of the Vesper Club. Kelly modestly declines to monopolize the praise, but points with admiration to the feat of his clubmate, Paul Costello, in winning the association single sculls race in a shell which was completely foreign to him. Costello was compelled to use Kelly's boat when the craft the former was scheduled to use was disabled in an earlier race.

Boxer Travels in Style.

A boxer does not necessarily have to wait until he attains the top rung on pugilism's ladder to assume the dignity of a champion. Billy Cepak, a Bohemian boxer, hailing from Chicago, is an illustration of this point. Cepak carries two trainers and a valet with him whenever he travels for a bout, has two automobiles, and is a member of a number of clubs.

Clarke Likes Trapshooting.

Fred Clarke, former manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates, and regarded as one of the greatest field directors ever connected with the national pastime, is devoting his time now to trap shooting, farming and the oil business. The former Pirate leader lives at Winfield, Kan., and is now making plans to entertain the 1920 Kansas State trap shooting tournament there. Clarke doesn't boast of being as good a trap shooter as he was a baseball manager, but, at that, he does fairly well. He broke 246 birds in a recent State titular shoot, using a twelve-gauge single barrel gun, which was presented to him several years ago by Pittsburgh fans. The gun is extensively engraved, the principal adornment being a figure of Clarke in baseball uniform, bat in hand.

Georgia Tech Gets Gridiron Star.

Georgia Tech has gained the services of a line plunger who is expected to figure in many Golden Tornado gridiron triumphs during the coming season. The player is Frank Jahovac, of Pittsburgh, who attracted considerable attention in scholastic circles while attending Indiana Normal. Jahovac's acquisition will give the Georgia eleven much-needed strength in the backfield, it is expected. He is said to be a great line plunger and quick on plays off tackle and inside the guards.

Athletics for Wisconsin Guards.

Athletics will play a prominent part in the coming encampment of the Wisconsin State Guards, according to present plans. The guard is scheduled to go into camp from Aug. 16 to 22 inclusive. Tom Jones, athletic director at the University of Wisconsin, has been engaged as the camp sports director. Jones is planning to enlist his assistants from among the ranks of athletes who have service or S. A. T. C. training.

Sprinter Hosmer Takes Rest.

Eddie Hosmer, De La Salle Institute sprinter, who carries the emblem of the Glencoe A. C. in open A. A. U. competition, is enjoying a rest, and does not contemplate starting in the Metropolitan A. A. U. senior track and field championships at Jersey City, Aug. 23. The local schoolboy expects soon to begin a training period in preparation for the national title games.

Hamilton Back at Kansas.

W. O. Hamilton has returned to Kansas University as head of the Athletic Association there. Hamilton had withdrawn from the university and A. Carrol was reported appointed to Hamilton's position. Failure of the board of administration at K. U., to confirm the appointment upset the plans and necessitated a re-engagement of Hamilton. Carrol's status is unknown, as is also the standing of Leon McCarty, who was named as head coach.

Salem-Crescent Meet Today.

The Salem-Crescent A. C. will conduct a track meet for its members this afternoon at Macombs Dam Park. A program of five closed events will be contested, together with a special invitation 660-yard run, which is expected to attract a number of capable middle-distance men. The closed events include a 100-yard dash, handicap; 220-yard dash, handicap; 440-yard run, handicap; 880-yard run, handicap, and 880-yard relay. The events are scheduled to start promptly at 1 o'clock.

Brandt to Meet Reddy.

Dutch Brandt, veteran Brooklyn boxer, and Battling Reddy of the east side will be opponents in a bout at Meriden, Conn., tomorrow night. The lads will box fifteen rounds. The weight agreed upon is 126 pounds ringside.

Atlanta Nine Feted.

Minor league baseball teams are entertained and feted just as are the major league players when the occasion warrants. This was illustrated recently when the Kiwanis Club of Atlanta, composed of some of Atlanta's leading citizens, entertained the city's Southern Association representatives at a luncheon. The spread was given in appreciation of the work of the Atlanta team in gaining the lead in the Southern League standing. It is reported that the players showed an errorless game at the table.

PLAN BIG N. Y. A. C. FIELD

N. Y. A. C. TO IMPROVE ITS ATHLETIC FIELD

Travers Island Property Will Be Made Suitable Site for Championship Meets.

LAND WILL BE RECLAIMED

Several Acres Now Under Water Are to be Filled In and Extensive Track Facilities Provided.

New York will soon have an athletic field the equal of any in the country and suitable for the conduct of national A. A. U. track and field championships or try-outs for international athletic meets. Officials of the New York A. C. have undertaken to supply this necessity through improvements to be made to the Mercury Foot organization's Travers Island property. It is probable that a thoroughly modern athletic field will have been constructed at Travers Island by next season.

News of the proposed improvement is disclosed in the August number of The Winged Foot, the New York A. C. monthly journal. It is planned to reclaim about four and three-quarter acres of land which is at present under water to the right of the entrance driveway, or to the west of the grounds between the Travers Island shooting house and the mainland. The filling in of this site will eliminate the only remaining expanse of water which formerly completely surrounded the Travers Island property. An immense track and field will thus be provided. The additional ground will permit of the laying out of a quarter-mile track, with a 220-yard straightaway, and will afford space for other facilities which will make the ground available for important athletic meets and, at the same time, provide accommodations for greater crowds to watch the track and field stars in action.

Changes Wrought by Time.

In discussing the situation The Winged Foot has the following to say:

"Many, many years ago, so we are told, Travers Island was an 'island,' and to reach the grounds and clubhouse it was necessary to embark upon a perilous journey over a rough roadway which was so narrow that it permitted only one carriage to pass at a time. Wonderful changes have been brought about since the club acquired the property. Bit by bit the lands under water between the 'island' and the mainland have been reclaimed, until now, the only remaining expanse of water which formerly completely surrounded our country grounds is that situated to the right of the entrance drive or to the west of the grounds between the shooting house and the mainland. For years this has been the only unpleasant vista which has detracted from the perfect views and natural beauties of the island, and has received the serious consideration of many administrations looking toward its elimination.

"Now the dream is to become a reality and before the snow flies again this one remaining part will be but a memory, and in its place we shall have several acres of land, the value of which will more than offset the cost, which is remarkably low under the terms of a contract just entered into for the work. The fill is to be of the best, consisting of ashes of the highest quality from the power houses and sugar refineries around New York. Owing to the peculiar nature of the land to be reclaimed this is pronounced by experts to be the only and proper kind of material to be used. On top of this fill a layer of high-grade top soil or dressing will be placed and by next Spring the work will be fully completed.

Of Great Practical Value.

"Aside from the monetary value of the improvement, it is impossible to reckon its practical value to the club. For years one of our most needed improvements has been a larger athletic field. Our present field is small, the seating accommodations far from adequate to take care of the enormous crowds which never fail to attend our semi-annual events, and our baseball diamond has long since passed its usefulness. Not only as a club proposition is this true, but for the furtherance of athletics in general it is becoming a necessity that an athletic field be constructed in the vicinity of New York which shall be of sufficient size to enable the holding of the largest athletic events. With the new ground made by this improvement the possibility of such a field is brought nearer as the space would be large enough to permit a quarter-mile track with a 220-yard straightaway.

"The natural beauty and the sentiment associated with the present track and field give assurance enough that it will be retained for all time, if for no other purpose than to serve as a milestone in the history of our organization. Land under water to be reclaimed is approximately four and three-quarter acres. Unquestionably this is one of the most important improvements of the kind that has been made in many years.

"Not only is the club to make this improvement, but the owner of the property immediately adjoining the club's holdings to the west has made arrangements for a similar improvement to his lands, which will practically fill up the cove in that direction."

Water Baseball at New Orleans.

Water baseball and water basket ball will soon be introduced in New Orleans, it is reported. Officials of the Crescent City expect the sports to gain popular favor. This is foreshadowed in the interest manifested when it was announced the sports would be introduced. It is probable that with a popular welcome for the events they will play a part in the Southern A. A. U. aquatic championships to be decided Aug. 22 at New Orleans.

Betsy Head Playground Meet.

Betsy Head Playground in Brooklyn will be the scene of a track and field meet Labor Day, under the auspices of the Bureau of Recreation, Parks, and Playgrounds of Brooklyn. In addition to the regular list of playground events it is proposed to conduct four open A. A. U. novice competitions.

THANKS A. A. U. FOR AID.

Head of A. E. F. Athletics Reviews Triumph in Interallied Meet.

Through the recent interallied games in France are now athletic history, the overwhelming supremacy shown by the American competitors, who literally swept the boards clean, is still fresh in the memory of those who attended the games. Communications are constantly arriving on this side of the ocean telling of the wonderful work of Uncle Sam's soldier-athletes.

Colonel Waite C. Johnson, chief athletic officer of the A. E. F., and chairman of the Inter-allied Games Committee, is the latest to write of the showing made by the athletes who wore the emblem of Uncle Sam. In a letter to Frederick W. Rubien, secretary-treasurer of the A. A. U., who was instrumental in selecting the team which competed for the United States, Colonel Johnson pens some of the pleasure he felt in the successof the doughboys. Colonel Johnson was particularly ardent in his praise of Norman Ross, the California swimmer, who, almost single-handed, accounted for Uncle Sam's aquatic success, and J. Egan, the Yale boxer, who cowed his foreign rivals into submission, merely by his demonstration in the preliminary boxing bouts.

In his letter, Colonel Johnson extends his thanks to Mr. Rubien for the A. A. U. leader's efforts in sending abroad the team which overwhelmed the best athletes of the allied countries. Continuing, Colonel Johnson says in part:

"The supremacy of our men in all branches of the track and field was almost unbelievable. As it was, they won 93 points against a total of 26 won by all the other countries put together. Such a record speaks for itself. The men you sent were largely instrumental in this wonderful performance. Outside track and field the men you sent showed equally well. For example, Ross, in swimming events, to my mind, gave the most wonderful exhibition that any athlete has ever done. By his efforts alone the United States Army swimming team carried off the swimming competition, with a total of 21 points against a total of 21 won by all the other nations put together. In addition to his performances in the Inter-Allied games Ross won the seven-kilometer race through Paris, for which we had allowed him to remain over.

"In boxing also the men you sent assisted materially, especially Eagan, whose performance in the twenty-eight seconds which it took him to win the Inter-Allied boxing championship in his weight, gave promise of what he might have done had he been further extended. His victory in the first round was so complete that in the two final rounds both competitors defaulted to him.

"The showing which our team made would have been far different had it not been for your generous assistance. I trust that many of these men will be available as representatives of the United States in the Olympic Games of 1920".

The meet was full of incidents of interest which cannot be indicated in the tabulated results. For instance, there was the Italian boxer who, after surprising the crowd by whipping a husky Canadian in a bitter fight, instead of shaking hands with his defeated opponent rushed up and ardently kissed him on both cheeks. The Canadian was too weak to start another fight.

An impressive and easily noticeable fact was that the big men in the meet were the men from the new countries, America, Canada, Australia, and New Zealand. In all the contests which called for strength and power those men won. In fencing the new countries did not even get into the finals. In the long, slow runs they were outclassed, France easily capturing both the ten-kilometer run and the Marathon with a wounded war hero in first place. In the lighter weight boxing the old countries showed up well, but when it came to heavyweight and high-power events, the new countries had everything their own way, with America far in the lead. The only exception was wrestling, in which the Czechoslovacs and Greeks and Italians were easily superior to the best their Western allies could produce.

It is probable, however, that France, which won second place in the meet, would have shown up much better had not such a large percentage of the young men in its army been killed or wounded in the war. It is said that 58 per cent. of all the men in the French Army between the ages of 21 and 31 were killed.

The influence of the meet will be seen in Europe, particularly in France, fifty years from now. The great Pershing Stadium, which the Y. M. C. A. built for the meet, has been presented by that organization to France to be a permanent incentive to athletic development. There, in a few years, the Olympic games will be held, and already France is planning to demonstrate to the world in those games that she is a rising, not a declining, nation.

NEW OUTFIELDER FOR GIANTS

Though the outfield of the New York Giants is rated as the best in the National League, Manager John McGraw is willing to add other fly chasers to his squad. Announcement was made yesterday that the New York Club had purchased Centre Fielder Bob Kinsella from the Little Rock Club of the Southern Association. The new outfielder is a son of Dick Ginsella, who scouted for the Giants several years ago and is now doing some gum-shoe work through the minor leagues for Manager John J. McGraw.

Scout Dick has persuaded McGraw that Bob gives promise of being a major leaguer, and it was on the recommendation of the father that the deal for the son was closed yesterday. Kinsella is not expected to report to the New York Club until the close of the Southern Association season next month.

CLOSE RACE IN EASTERN.

Four Clubs in Exciting Contest for Pennant—Worcester in Lead.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Aug. 9.—For the first time since the organization of the Eastern League more than two clubs are fighting it out through the final weeks of the season for the season's championship. A margin of only four and one-half games separates the first and fourth place clubs, according to the official standing announced here today, to include games of Friday, Aug. 9. The standing follows:

GAIN $18,300,000 IN EARNING ASSETS

But Reserve Banks Report Reduction of $14,000,000 in Holdings of Discounted Bills.

LESS WAR PAPER ON HAND

Federal Deposits Show Increase of $40,300,000—Gold Reserves Fall Off.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Reduction of about $14,000,000 in the holdings of war paper and other discounted bills, as against an increase of $18,300,000 in other earning assets, is indicated in the Federal Reserve Board's weekly bank statement issued as at the close of business on Aug. 8.

The statement introduces a new item, "Gold in transit or in custody in foreign countries," amounting to $85,300,000, which represents the amount of gold held for account of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York by the Bank of Netherlands and the National Bank of Belgium. This gold was acquired from the United States Grain Corporation, which in turn received it in part payment for food supplied to the German Government. This gold is to be deposited within the near future with the Bank of England. After it has been assayed and its exact value determined, allocation of the amount among the several Reserve Banks will be made and the items will be shown among the bank's gold reserves under caption "Gold with foreign agencies."

War paper on hand declined $4,100,000, other discounts $9,800,000, while holdings of acceptances went up $6,500,000, and those of treasury certificates largely to secure Federal Reserve Bank note circulation $11,700,000. War paper holdings of the Chicago, St. Louis, and Minneapolis banks include $85,200,000 discounted for other banks; as against $99,300,000 shown the week before, while acceptances held by the Cleveland and San Francisco banks are inclusive of $44,400,000, (as against $47,300,000,) of acceptances purchased from other banks.

Government deposits show an increase of $40,300,000, and members' reserve deposits an increase of $14,300,000, partly as the result of the above described transaction with the Grain Corporation. Net deposits increased $54,600,000, while Federal Reserve note circulation went up $25,200,000. Gold reserves fell off $3,700,000, larger withdrawals for export being partly offset through gold deposits by the treasury. Cash reserves decreased $4,200,000. The banks' reserve ratio shows a decline from 50.5 to 49.4 per cent.

The Weather.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Pressure remains high over the Lake regions and is low and falling over the Northern Plains States. During the last twenty-four hours showers and thunderstorms have occurred in portions of the South Atlantic and Gulf States and the Rocky Mountain region. Elsewhere throughout the country east of the Mississippi River the weather has been fair.

Temperatures remain generally below the normal east of the Rocky Mountains except in the Northern Plains States.

The outlook is for generally fair weather Sunday and Monday east of the Mississippi River, except showers and thunderstorms are probable Sunday and Monday in the South Atlantic and East Gulf States and on Monday in the Northern Upper Lake region.

It will be somewhat warmer Sunday in the Upper Lake region and on Monday in the Lake region, the Ohio Valley, and the North Atlantic States.

The tropical disturbance in the Eastern Caribbean Sea is moving northward, but there are yet no indications of its intensity.

Winds off Atlantic Coast—North of Sandy Hook, gentle to moderate variable winds and fair weather; Sandy Hook to Hatteras—Gentle variable winds, mostly north, fair weather; Hatteras to Florida Straits—East Gulf Coast, gentle variable winds, partly cloudy with local showers and thunderstorms.

FORECASTS FOR TODAY AND MONDAY.

District of Columbia, Eastern New York, Eastern Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland, Delaware, Virginia, Ohio, Indiana, Tennessee, Kentucky, West Virginia—Fair Sunday; Monday fair, warmer.

Western New York—Fair Sunday and Monday, not much change in temperature.

Western Pennsylvania—Fair Sunday; Monday fair, warmer, except near the lake.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at 11 P. M., taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau is as follows:

AMOS R. E. PINCHOT IS MARRIED AGAIN

BRIDE IS 27 AND WRITER

Vice Chairman of American Union Against Militarism Was Divorced Last December.

Amos R. E. Pinchot, lawyer and publicist, a son of the late James W. and Mary Eno Pinchot, and a brother of Gifford Pinchot, and Miss Ruth Pickering, the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Pickering of Elmira, N. Y., a writer, and Vassar graduate, were married at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon in Saugatuck, Conn., at the home of the bridegroom's uncle, William Phelps Eno, by the Rev. Charles P. Croft of Simsbury, Conn. The guests included Mr. and Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, Miss Mary Pinchot Morgan, Mrs. Charles Broughton Wood, both cousins of Mr. Pinchot; the bride's parents and her two sisters, and a few others. They will spend the next two months on the Pinchot estate at Milford, Pike County, Penn.

It is Mr. Pinchot's second marriage. His first wife was Miss Gertrude Minturn, a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Minturn, and to whom an interlocutory decree of divorce was awarded in December last. Under that decree Mrs. Pinchot received the custody of their daughter, aged 17, Rosalind Pinchot, and to Mr. Pinchot was given the guardianship of their younger son, Gifford Pinchot 2d.

The second Mrs. Pinchot is 27 years old, and was graduated from Vassar in 1914. She has been on the staff of The Nation and other magazines. The Pickerings, originally Philadelphians, and of Quaker faith on both sides, have long resided in Elmira, where Mrs. Pickering is chairman of the Woman Suffrage Party.

Mr. Pinchot, who is about 46 years of age, was born in France, where his parents were traveling, and was graduated from Yale in 1897 and then studied law at Columbia and the New York Law School. He served in the 1st New York Volunteer Cavalry in the Spanish-American war and 1900-1 was Deputy Assistant District Attorney of New York. He is a member of the Yale, University and other clubs. In 1912, with his brother, Gifford, he broke from the Republican Party and aided in founding the Progressive Party with Theodore Roosevelt as its candidate. By 1916, however, his allegiance to Colonel Roosevelt became apparently nil and for some time before America finally entered the war Mr. Pinchot was Vice Chairman of the American Union Against Militarism, and just before the United States declared war he tried to influence Samuel Gompers in a movement to stop compulsory military service.

Houston-Ulbig.

The marriage of John Milton Houston of Mechanicsburg, Penn., and New York, and Mrs. Adelaide Coburn Ulbig, widow of Frank K. Ulbig of New York and a daughter of Gridley Bryant Coburn of Boston, took place yesterday at the home of the bridegroom's brother, Glen Roy Houston, 65 West 127th Street. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Joseph H. Ivey. Mrs. Charles Irving Allen gave the bride in marriage, and Glen Roy Houston was his brother's best man. The wedding breakfast was served at Claremont.

Los Angeles Brewer Wins Point.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—Judge B. F. Bledsoe of the United States District Court yesterday sustained a demurrer to an indictment against Joseph Baumgartner, an officer of the Bakersfield Brewing Company, who was charged with selling 2.75 per cent. beer in violation of the wartime prohibition measure. The demurrer was sustained on the ground that the indictment did not show that the beer was intoxicating. According to Gordon Lawson, Assistant United States District Attorney, this means that in each prosecution the jury must determine whether the liquor complained of is intoxicating.

PREVENTION OF RACE RIOTS.

Senator McCormick Says Whites and Negroes Must Unite for Solution

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Senator McCormick made this statement today:

"THE TIMES, as I am informed, republished, in part, about July 30, certain remarks attributed to me in a Chicago evening newspaper. What purported to be an interview was so incomplete and inaccurate that it entirely distorted my meaning, where it did not actually misquote me. Riot and murder can never be 'a matter of justification.'

"Race disorders have broken out in various parts of the country, and more are threatened. During the last year there have been a score or more of lynchings in the South, and, in the North, outbreaks of violence between colored and white people from the Atlantic seaboard as far west as Nebraska. Lawless elements, among both the whites and the blacks, have been responsible for the bloodshed. In Chicago the homes of good citizens—respectable and law-abiding negroes—were bombed. In some quarters men have tried by violence to prevent negroes from working. On the other hand, among the thousands of negroes who have come North during the war there have been some miscreants like those who in Washington have attacked women, and others whose truculence in public places invited resentment.

"Bishop Thirkield is quoted as saying of these that, 'Released from repressive conditions in the South and suddenly placed in an atmosphere of freedom, many may have translated liberty into license.' The City of Chicago and the State of Illinois resorted to force in order to restore and maintain order. That was necessary, but it is not enough. The two races will live side by side in peace only if we honestly face the elements of friction and candidly take steps to accommodate their differences and their interests.

"The successful, law-abiding colored people, many of whom have lived in Chicago for years, and the white citizens immediately concerned in the problems of negro employment and residence, no less than the civil authorities, have got to unite upon a policy and find a solution or we shall live in danger of a renewal of race rioting. And there must be equal justice in the punishment of violators of the peace. We cannot have race rioting in the North become the bloody counterpart of lynching in the South."

PROF. E. H. HAECKEL DIES IN GERMANY

RESEARCH BEYOND DARWIN

Author of "The Riddle of the Universe" Was Professor of Zoology at Jena for Fifty Years.

JENA, Germany, Aug. 9.—Ernst Heinrich Haeckel, Professor of Zoology in the University of Jena for nearly fifty years, and famous throughout the world for his research work supporting the theory of evolution, died here today.

Ernst Haeckel, the most famous of the German exponents of the doctrine of evolution, was born at Potsdam on Feb. 16, 1834. When eighteen years of age he entered as a student at the Bavarian University of Wurzburg and at once devoted himself to natural science. A lengthened period of study at Berlin and Vienna succeeded, and Haeckel, like Huxley, believing that he would do best if he devoted himself to the medical profession, settled in Berlin as a physician. There he fell under the influence of Johannes Müller, the physiologist, and at his instigation devoted himself to the study of the lower forms of marine animals.

When Professor Haeckel was only 25 he traveled extensively in the Mediterranean and began that long series of investigations which have become identified with his name. On his return to Germany he accepted the Professorship of Zoology at the University of Jena, a position which he held until shortly before his death. Professor Haeckel all his life was a traveler, but his travels were always undertaken with the object of enlarging his knowledge in his own special branches of study.

As early as 1863 he proclaimed himself a convinced adherent of the Darwinian theory, and at once entered the lists to do battle in the cause of which he was the first champion in Germany. When only 33 he made his first contribution to Darwinism, a treatise entitled "General Morphology." The importance of his labors, however, in this and in his other earlier books lay not so much in the brilliant powers of observation which he displayed as in the dominating trait of speculativeness which enabled him to accept without fear unproved conclusions provided they recommended themselves to him as logical.

The doctrine which became speedily associated with his name was that known as the "Biogenetic Law." This law asserts that the organism recapitulates in the short and rapid course of its individual development the most important of those form modifications undergone by the successive ancestors of the species in the course of their long and slow historic evolution, and the casual relation of the two histories is to be explained in terms of heredity and adaptation.

In subsequent works he presented the results of the extraordinary activity of the study of embryology which followed the publication of the "Origin of Species." His attempts to collect the entire living world under one point of view, and his courageous way of openly claiming that which has since been scientifically recognized, made him many enemies, but brought to his standard still more numerous friends who enthusiastically sounded his praises and supplied him with the necessary funds for continuing his investigations. He was regarded by his admirers as next to Darwin, the most eminent of Darwinians.

His "World-Problems."

In his "World-Problems" he went much further than Darwin dared to go, and has given us a program of the world's origin which wholly eliminates all elements of design in the scheme of things, with a vigor almost unscientific in its harshness. He rejects the idea of personal immortality as ludicrous; and, as for a moral order in the world, it does not exist. But his books teem with passages in which he recognizes the beauty of Nature, and in which mankind is urged to devote itself to the beautiful, the good and the true.

Professor Haeckel's best known works, in addition to those already mentioned, are: "The History of Natural Creation; The Genesis and the Genealogical Tree of the Human Race;" "Anthropogeny, and the History of Human Development;" "Monism, the Religious Confessions of a Naturalist," "Our Present Knowledge of the Origin of Man," and "Indian Travel Sketches." Professor Haeckel also contributed to the remarkable series of reports which embodied the scientific results of the Challenger expedition.

His Religion Called "Monism."

His religion was called "Monism," a term he invented to cover his belief in the essential unity of organic and inorganic matter. Some of these views he put in his most widely-read book, "The Riddle of the Universe." This had a tremendous sale all over the world.

Professor Haeckel did not differ widely from the official German view of the world war. He cried "Down with England at any price," and asserted that his knowledge of England for half a century had taught him that "England is rightly called the destroyer of peoples." He was one of those who demanded the retirement of Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg in 1916.

On his last birthday he sent an engraved card to his friends stating that he expected to die before next Winter. He then expressed the hope that "soon after the end of this mad, culture-destroying war, our longed for German peace will be firmly established on a scientific basis."

LEONCAVALLO DIES IN ITALY.

Composer of 'I Pagliacci' and 'Zaza' Expires in Rome at 63.

ROME, Aug. 9.—Ruggiero Leoncavallo, the composer, is dead.

With Mascagni and Puccini, Leoncavallo formed the famous trio of modern Italian operatic composers. He never attained in Italy the popularity of the others. He was born in Naples, Italy, in 1856, and received his musical education at the Conservatory there. For a long time he was forced to support himself by piano teaching, playing in cafés, and as a wandering musical artist in France and England.

His greatest success was "I Pagliacci," which is ranked by many critics as the greatest of all the great Italian melodramatic operas. Among his other operas were "I Medici," "Cesare Borgia," and "Zaza." He composed a "La Bohème" before that of Puccini, but Puccini's work has had by far the greatest success.

The only one of his operas so far produced by the Metropolitan is "I Pagliacci," but the management has announced that "Zaza" is in preparation for the coming season and that Geraldine Farrar is studying the leading rôle. Leoncavallo visited this country in 1906 and conducted his music in San Francisco.

PLAN CAMPAIGN BY STATES

Three and one-half million American Jews, organized and kept officially informed of the situation of their co-religionists abroad through the American Jewish Relief Committee for Sufferers from the War, are today, with the help of Christian friends, sending money and relief supplies abroad at the rate of $2,000,000 a month. Since Jan. 1 of this year, a total of more than $7,000,000 has been expended for this purpose, while the aggregate amount thus spent since the start of the war has now reached the large total of $31,940,224.79.

This amount represents the funds contributed to the above organization and directly to the Joint Distribution Committee of American Funds for Jewish War Sufferers. The latter organization is the central distributing agency for all American Jewish relief work abroad. Its Chairman is Felix M. Warburg.

The American Jewish Relief Committee was organized under the Chairmanship of Louis Marshall in the Fall of 1914, when it became apparent that the lives and welfare of Jews throughout much of Europe would inevitably be jeopardized by the world war. Other members of the original committee include Cyrus L. Sulzberger, Nathan Straus, Henry Morgenthau, Arthur Lehman, Jacob H. Schiff, Julius Rosenwald of Chicago, and many prominent Jews in other parts of the country. The membership of the committee now numbers over eighty.

The first action of the committee was to call to the attention of representative Jews in every State the situation abroad. The organization of local committees in every State in the Union was at once begun. At the present time such committees are found in more than 1,500 cities and towns.

During the time from 1914 to the end of 1916 practically all funds were raised by private collection. During this period, as well as during the time of American participation in the war, Jewish as well as other relief work faced almost insurmountable obstacles. Through the good offices of the United States Government State Department and also through American and neutral Ambassadors in various countries channels were found to get money and supplies abroad.

By 1917 the plight of the Jews in Europe had become so bad that aid on a larger scale was seen to be imperative. Increased funds were therefore sought through a wider appeal, and a semblance of a national money-raising effort was organized, with Mr. Rosenwald making an outright gift of a million dollars.

After the American declaration of war in 1917 an agency was established in Holland. This was placed in charge of Dr. Boris Bogen, formerly of Cincinnati, who has been abroad ever since 1917. Through aid given by the Holland Government, effective relief work was made possible in sections such as Lithuania, Galicia and other lands occupied by the enemy armies.

Meantime, such relief as was possible was extended to refugees and war sufferers in Turkey, Russia, Siberia, the Balkans and Palestine. Following the capture of Jerusalem by the British, large shipments of supplies were rushed into that country in time to save the lives of thousands of Jews in their native country.

Immediately after the armistice was signed about thirty commissioners were dispatched abroad by the committee to investigate the conditions of the Jews everywhere in Europe and prepare careful estimates of the assistance that American Jews would be called upon to send. The investigations of these commissioners are now virtually completed, and many of them have already returned to this country with their reports. These cover Poland, Galicia, Lithuania, Rumania, Bulgaria, Serbia, Greece, Turkey, Asia Minor, Palestine, Siberia and the needs of certain groups of Jews still held as prisoners of war as well as of colonies of refugees in Holland, Italy, Constantinople and certain other isolated places.

With accurate information in hand as to the detailed and specific needs, the American Jewish Relief Committee members have carefully canvassed the situation and find that a total of $35,000,000 must be raised in this country this year in order to do the work abroad that is absolutely necessary. This sum is now being sought by the committee, and plans are under way for holding State-by-State campaigns in the early Fall. Meantime, a steady stream of contributions is being received from the local committees in all parts of the country and these gifts are making possible the regular system of shipments of supplies that has been instituted.

Serbian Relief Work.

The Serbian Relief Committee of America, William Jay Schieffelin, Chairman, 70 Fifth Avenue, New York, reports the receipt of a cable from Saloniki announcing the arrival of a shipment of medical supplies, food, and clothing. These supplies will immediately be distributed under the direction of Major William A. Cressy, Director of Medical Relief in Southern Serbia. The unit of doctors and nurses who sailed July 26 are due to reach Saloniki this week, and will at once go to Southern Serbia and put into effect a comprehensive plan of medical relief. The plan includes the establishment of a headquarters dispensary with branches at strategic points, the visiting of homes by nurses, health of visitors, and social workers to supplement the work of the physician, the carrying on of an educational campaign with regard to the nature, prevention, and treatment of disease, the establishment of centres for the training of the Serbian women as relief workers, the establishment of necessary hospitals, laboratories, &c., and finally the organization of units composed of Serbians, to which the whole work may be turned over within a reasonable time, leaving the entire administration of Serbian relief where it should be, in the hands of the Serbian people.

Red Cross Students.

Three hundred students in Red Cross Home Service will be accepted for the Winter term for the course of training given jointly by the New York School of Social Work and the New York State College of Agriculture at Cornell University, it was announced yesterday by the Atlantic Division of the Red Cross.

Circular letters describing the course have been sent out to every recent graduate, male and female, from all colleges in New York, New Jersey, and Connecticut. It is expected that a large percentage of the students to be enrolled for the course will be recruited by New York County Chapter of the Red Cross.

The establishment of the course for the full Winter term, from September to June, at the university, is the result of the success of the brief Summer course, which is restricted to thirty members. This class will soon be graduated at the university.

"The need of trained workers for home service in the peacetime activities of the Red Cross is daily becoming more evident," said Ethan Allen, manager of the Atlantic Division. "Service to the families of soldiers and sailors and to the men themselves on their return from overseas will continue as a primary responsibility for many months to come.

"It is planned that during the Fall semester the students will be offered a selection of courses from the regular curriculum of the New York School of Social Work. In the Spring the class will continue its work by specializing in the rural field at the New York State College of Agriculture.

"The course claims the full time of students during the eight months' session, and a certificate will be issued by the Red Cross to each student completing the course."

Among the instructors who will give the course are Porter R. Lee, director of the New York School of Social Work; Raymond C. Branion, director of the Bureau of Training for Home Service of the Atlantic Division; Margaret Leal; Dr. Haven Emerson; Walter W. Pettit; Charles A. Beard; Dr. Bernard Glueck; Katherine Murdoch; Gladys Smith and Professor Dwight Sanderson, professor of rural organization of the New York State College of Agriculture.

Applications for admission to the school should be submitted by Sept. 5. Fees during the first semester will be $50 tuition and $5 entrance. A fee of $10 for the year's course will be charged by the Red Cross, the receipts covering incidental expenses of the course.

A Present Investment Is A Saving of 20% to 33⅓% Under Later Prices

EVERY woman will this season appreciate the economy of a fur coat or fur costume piece. Especially with present conditions, it will be realized that no garment in the wardrobe—at even near the cost of furs—offers the same usefulness and enjoyment. It is to be a Winter of furs as never before.

These Are Five Good Reasons Why Thinking People Will Buy Gimbel Furs

POINT 1—Gimbels bought earlier than most fur people thought it necessary; avoiding several successive advances in costs.

POINT 2—Gimbels bought fur skins in three-store quantities; an influence that received concessions in price everywhere.

POINT 3—Gimbels received first choice of the first pick of fur pelts; chosen with the expertness of a lifetime's experience.

POINT 4—The workmanship of fur garment makers chosen by Gimbels is of a standard as high as Gimbels own.

POINT 5—Gimbel fur assortments are a fashion review of the authentic 1919-1920 fur mode—all embracing.

FIND MANY FLATS UNFIT FOR LIVING

Rent Investigators Report Conditions on the East Side as Deplorable.

VISIT TYPICAL BLOCKS

2,714 Persons in One and 2,628 in Another Studied by Commission.

FEW MEET REGULATIONS

The problem of congested tenements is now to the fore, because inquiries have revealed that great numbers of people could not get accommodations, though there were over 21,000 vacancies in the old-style flat houses. Why people did not move into these vacancies is answered in the findings of the New York State Reconstruction Commission, the Joint Legislative Committee, and the Mayor's Committee on Rent Profiteering, which these organizations reported after a tour of the East Side.

They visited two typical blocks, one of them in the Cherry Hill section and the other in the neighborhood of the Henry Street Settlement. The Cherry Hill block housed 2,714 persons, of whom 561 were children under 5 years. The predominant nationality was Italian, mixed with Irish, Spanish, American, and five Lithuanians. In a survey which was made by the Reconstruction Commission it was shown that all but three houses in the block were badly in need of repairs.

Practically every apartment had dark rooms. There was only one apartment in the entire block that conformed to the minimum standard for health and sanitation laid down by law in 1901. It is estimated that it will be one hundred years before the last of the old law tenements will have disappeared from natural causes, such as fire, natural decay, or through abandonment by tenants because of conditions intolerable to human beings.

Found Only Cold Water.

In most cases there was cold water in the apartments, but in only two were there both hot and cold water. Two had no conveniences. In only three houses was there a sufficient number of garbage cans, and in few cases were the cellars clean or the yards free from refuse.

Most of the apartments consisted of two and three rooms of which one faced a court and the other one or two were dark. They had no windows and were lighted and ventilated only through a door opening into the room which faced the court. The members of the commission were told that in these inside blind rooms as many as five people slept and that it was no exception to find three and four occupying one bed at night.

The immediate interest of the visitors was to determine what the rentals were. The total number of apartments in the block is 658, of which 606 are rented. The lowest rent is $5 for an apartment of one room. The highest rent for one room is $16. Three rooms rent from $6 to $17, six rooms from $18 to $25, and one nine-room apartment is quoted at $35.

The survey of the Reconstruction Commission shows that the relation of rent to income is difficult to obtain. The highest income found was $260 a month, probably the result of temporary conditions and work of grown children saving for marriage. The lowest income was $21.60 monthly. There were more incomes between $60 and $70 a month than at any other rate, and there were more apartments rented at from $12 to $14 a month than at any other figure. The conclusion was that the $12 and $14 rentals are commensurate with the $60 and $70 incomes.

The fifty-two vacancies in the block were in houses which are in such tumble-down condition as to be indescribable. Investigators state that it would be impossible for human life to be maintained in any of them.

The other block visited was surveyed by the Henry Street Settlement. It houses a total of 2,628 persons, of which 417 are children under 5 years and 97 boarders. Jews are in the majority, numbering 1,363. Mingled with these are a few Italians, Poles, Russians, Lithuanians, and Irish. Of the 614 apartments in the block, containing 2,107 rooms, 544 apartments, or 1,890 rooms, were occupied, and 70 apartments, or 219 rooms, vacant.

Find Plumbing Deplorable.

The reason for the unusual number of vacancies was found in the wretched condition of the quarters. The flats found vacant were for the most part on the ground floor in the rear at the bottom of airshafts ten feet wide. Not only were they practically without light, but many of the rooms had no outside ventilation at all, not even that afforded by a ten-foot shaft. The floors in many cases lacked several boards, and the plumbing was described as deplorable. One entire wing was found built close up against a stable, without even the ten-foot space required by law. Only four houses in this block conformed to the new law.

The average length of tenacy was reported as less than three years. This conformed to an investigation of other blocks which showed the yearly "tenants' turnover" to be over 20 per cent. There was only one resident landlord in the block. It was found that where landlords occupy the houses which they rent conditions are likely to be far better than the ordinary.

The lowest rent found was $5 for two rooms, the highest $14 for two rooms. Three-room apartment rates averaged from $8 to $19, five rooms, $12 to $21. During 1918 and 1919 68 tenants were raised 50 cents, 162 were raised $1, nine $1.50 and nine $2.

Only one tenement house in this block provided bath tubs. Of thirty-one houses twenty-five had toilets in the public hall—usually used by two families—and eight had them in the apartments. Only thirteen houses in this block were found to have dumb waiters, and tenants in all the other houses were found to carry their garbage, sometimes as many as seven flights of stairs, to the garbage cans in yards of hallways.

The predominant population was reported as Jewish. The average income was about $80 a month per family, and the minimum at $60. In the latter cases it was found the wife earns from $20 to $30 a month by sewing at home for the factories, and in many cases the children have to assist by cutting buttonholes or similar odd jobs.

WAR CAMP PREPARING FOR PEACETIME WORK

The New York War Camp Community Service announced yesterday that a large part of its staff was engaged already in preliminary work on the peacetime program formulated for the organization, and that when the entertainment of soldiers was completed the various service clubs would be ready to continue the work among civilians in communities throughout the city. Division directors who are still occupied with work with soldiers also are seeking locations for clubhouses for the peacetime "Comrades' Clubs" or arranging to keep the old centres where soldiers were entertained.

Official reports reaching the headquarters of the service, at 15 East Fortieth Street, are that many of the citizens who aided in the war program of caring for the soldiers had volunteered to continue the work in the civilian centres. These volunteer workers will entertain visitors to the city, out-of-town students in the educational institutions, and form community clubs for their own entertainment. All this will be done without relinquishing the original aim of caring for soldiers and sailors who are passing through the city.

"The 'Comrade Clubs' are going to take the place of the loosely organized war clubs," says one of the outlines of the plan, "and one of the most important factors is to be the girls' divisions. As it is intended that every member of the club shall become well acquainted with every other member, no organization will have more than 100 members.

"The clubs will exist wholly to promote sociability. There will be weekly gatherings of a social nature—dances, boating excursions, skating parties. In addition, it is planned to have monthly district meetings, bringing several clubs together. These will be both of a social and educational nature.

"There are a number of schemes in the process of formulation at headquarters. One is to have the clubs occasionally go to institutions for the sick and disabled, and to prisons to give entertainments for the inmates and the persons employed there. Then there is the idea for having the clubs assist in Americanization work among foreigners. As war workers, the girls who will make up the 'Comrade Clubs' have been doing this to a limited extent. They have been holding dances in the foreign sections and succeeding, through the medium of sociability, in interesting large numbers of foreigners in night schools. All this is to be kept up and extended.

"The 'Comrade Clubs' will keep in close contact with other existing organizations working through the Y. M. C. A. and settlement clubs. It is hoped eventually to have a club in every neighborhood in the city. To avoid making mistakes on a large scale, the plan is to be tried out first in one limited section. The existing war groups, of which there are twenty-one, will be converted into 'Comrade Clubs.' They will be organized by an expert, then left to work under the general supervision of the central office.

"To get at the strangers, factories and all other places of employment in the neighborhood will be visited. Lists of them will be drawn up and distributed among the clubs. It will be up to the native New Yorkers to see to it that each stranger is brought to a meeting and made to feel that he is part of his own neighborhood's social centre."

SAILORS' CLUB FAVORED.

Officers Commend Proposal for a Permanent Home.

The Navy Club yesterday made public statements from several high officers of the navy as part of their campaign for a fund to provide a permanent clubhouse in this city for the sailors and marines. It is the intention of Herbert L. Satterlee, the President, and other officers of the club to abandon the present quarters at 509 Fifth Avenue and to build a permanent clubhouse with the fund of $300,000 now being raised.

"We have come to the conclusion that you gentlemen are undertaking a great work along absolutely the correct lines," wrote Admiral Mayo, who retired recently as Commander in Chief. "I think the conception of this club as a great monument to express the appreciation of New York City for the services of the bluejackets and marines during the war is a wonderful one."

Captain William W. Phelps, who commanded the transports Leviathan and Great Northern, said he believed that "it will be deplorable if citizens cannot be induced to rally in support of this effort of yours to institute the Navy Club on a permanent footing." Commander John R. Robinson of the Imperator declared that the club had tended to decrease the number of sailors who had been guilty of small offenses while on leave in the city. John F. Archbold of 26 Broadway is the Treasurer of the fund.

FAMINE IF TROOPS GO.

Half Million Armenian Lives Depend on British in Caucasus.

PARIS, Aug. 9.—Two hundred thousand American refugees in the Caucasus are on the verge of starvation and 300,000 more will be without food, it was stated here today by Walter George Smith of Philadelphia, member of the American Commission for Relief, if the British withdraw troops that have been guarding the line of relief supplies. Mr. Smith has been acting in the Near East for the Commission.

British troops alone, he said, are keeping the Tartars and Kurds from swooping down on the region and breaking up the entire system of relief on which the commission spent $25,000,000.

Still Delay Palmer Confirmation.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Action on a motion by Democratic members that a favorable report be made on the nomination of A. Mitchell Palmer as Attorney General was deferred today by the Senate Judiciary subcommittee after a long executive session.

An Acknowledgment.

Dear Sir,

I am desired by the Prime Minister to thank you for the package containing a copy of THE NEW YORK TIMES, which you kindly sent him by the British airship R-34.

Mr. Lloyd George wishes me to tell you how greatly he will value this memento of such a brilliant achievement as the great transatlantic flight. Yours faithfully,

BONDING SERVANTS NEW HELP SOLUTION

Surety Company Undertakes to Investigate Characters of Employes in Homes.

AIMS TO DIGNIFY SERVICE

Firm to Provide Security for Domestic Labor as Well as for Clerks.

To many a housewife the tidings that the servant problem is to be systematically dealt with will come as a boon. Very few households in New York will not rejoice in the announcement issued last week by a surety company that it has established a new service in connection with the ladies' department to investigate the character of servants and to protect the housewife against new, dishonest or undesirable ones.

Year by year the difficulty with domestic help has grown until it has reached such proportions that many a family has been forced to abandon its home and take refuge in a hotel or studio apartment, where only the lightest sort of housekeeping was necessary. Since the war the situation has grown steadily worse, for such a premium has been placed upon other lines of work that both men and women have shown less and less inclination to undertake domestic labor.

Not only are servants very difficult to procure, but those that are available are likely to be undesirable. So many cases have been cited recently where expert criminals have secured positions in homes of the best families by forged references and absconded with all sorts of valuables that the surety company was moved to establish this new work. As it has bonded clerks and offices employes for a number of years, investigating the character and standing carefully the firm is prepared to attack the domestic help problem.

"For some time we have been planning to take up this work," said the head of the department, "but we wanted to have the problem well in hand before we undertook to master it. We are now so confident that our plan will work out that the company is willing to back up to the last degree any guarantee that is made to a housewife who appeals to us to investigate a servant.

To Improve Service.

"The present-day conditions warrant this service now more than ever before, as there is an imperative need for protection against a very low type of both men and women who have entered the domestic field. There are several reasons why the servants as a class continue to deteriorate, but the chief one seems to be that the criminals and adventuresses find such a fertile field for their operations, and more and more the household is becoming a prey to these insidious lawbreakers.

"It is only fair to the faithful servants who have remained in families for years and who are endeavoring to raise their profession to some degree of dignity, to protect them against these invaders as well as the mistress of a home. Any number of cases have come to our attention where faithful servants have unsuspectingly had evidence turned toward them when a new servant in the house was guilty of some theft or wrongdoing. And, while their innocence might be proved they were never restored to the same basis of trust.

"Our plan is to investigate the servant either before or after he or she has become a member of the household. Each servant's character and standing will be looked into quite in the same way as we investigate a clerk or office employe. Certainly the need in this case is much greater, for is it not more important to have trusted persons in the home, where they come in contact with the family, and where a family's most valuable possession are found.

"It is indeed most unpleasant to feel that perhaps a maid or butler, who must naturally have the key to the household and know the secrets therein, may be a thief or perhaps a murderer. It is these persons we mean to ferret out, and before very long, with the co-operation of the housewife, we are sure to accomplish our purpose. Of course we have no intention of conducting a campaign against the person who may have made a mistake and therefore had a bit of a blot on his record, such as an ex-convict who has served for a minor charge or one who has been discharged from a place without sufficient reason. We will take up their cases and hear their side without prejudice, for we realize that these people must live and have every right to assistance in getting set right again. Our plan is to bond four servants to the extent of $5,000 or a lesser number at a corresponding rate.

Ferret Out Imposters.

"Since we have opened the department any number of interesting cases have come under our observation. In one instance a mother and daughter, considerably above the servant class, took places in a household in the country. After a very short time they were suspected of taking jewelry and other valuables, and upon investigation we found that the mother had been exposed before as an accomplice to a man posing as an evangelist, with whom she traveled the country. She continued her operations under his guidance and it developed that he was marketing their loot.

"We have already found cases where very young girls were using the place of servant to get into the homes of fashionable people. In one home on Long Island the mistress had had so much difficulty with servants that she decided to try some one from the village. She engaged a 19-year-old girl on whom she thought she could rely. The girl demanded her money in advance, and before the first week had elapsed she fled, taking all the money and most of the silverware in the house.

"One particularly interesting case was that of a maid who was recommended to a place by a settlement worker. She had a criminal record, which the settlement worker was aware of, but she was unwilling to disclose that fact, for fear of hurting her chances. The woman took the place, but after a very short time she began sending packages away very mysteriously. She was finally watched and her letters intercepted, disclosing the fact that she was in communication with convicts at different prisons.

"It is pretty difficult to judge by appearances, for any number of the most innocent-appearing countenances have been proved to be involved in the most flagrant lawbreaking schemes, so we feel it our duty to start the movement to stamp out these conditions in the home and make it a safe place to live in."

Transport Men Join Legion.

The New York State Branch of the American Legion announced yesterday that one of the posts to be organized in this city would be named after the Antilles, the first American transport torpedoed by the Germans. An application for a charter already has been made by soldiers and sailors who were in the transport service. Francis H. Robinson of 192 Broadway is Secretary of the proposed post, and he has sent out notices requesting all former transport men to join the new branch.

Thirteen Army Planes Start This Week On Scientific Flight to the Pacific

A squadron of thirteen army airplanes, accompanied by a Motor Transport train, will leave Hazelhurst Field on Wednesday for a tour of more than 4,000 air miles through fifteen States. On its route the squadron will collect data for the Army Air Service, for the Air Mail Division of the Post Office Department, and recruit men for all branches of the service.

To show that the efficiency of the Air Service in this country will overcome almost any difficulty, the commanding officers of the "Pathfinders' Squadron" decided last week to take thirteen planes instead of nine and to make the official start of their tour on the thirteenth of the month. In an effort to show additional defiance of hoodoos and superstitions the pilots obtained permission from the War Department to paint on the fuselage of every machine a gigantic black cat, with the tail of the beast tied up into the figure "13."

For the last two weeks the airplanes of the squadron have been carrying on practice flights between Pittsburgh and the Long Island fields, and the pilots have completed their aerial mapping and photography between the two points. The motor truck train will leave the field early in the week, so that the entire unit may be able to go into its first demonstration camp at Columbus, Ohio, on Aug. 18.

Instead of taking along a war-strength personnel of thirty officers and 250 men, all the units will be skeletonized and the strength of the entire squadron and its convoys will be about twenty-two officers and 250 enlisted men. The sections of the expedition are: Headquarters and Advance section, Recruiting section, Flying and Field Operations section, Photographic section, Balloon and Airship section, Searchlight and Field Lighting section, Motor Transport section, Supply section, and a detachment section to handle mail and provide personal comforts for the men. Major Ora M. Baldinger, the commanding officer, will operate the unit as a mobile army post.

The Balloon section will carry six propaganda balloons, an observation balloon, and a working model of a dirigible operated by electric power. The Searchlight division will carry a war light with a diameter of sixty inches and capable of throwing a strong light about three miles. The strength of the light is about 300,000,000 candle power, and an airplane pilot is able to see it at night for a distance of 110 miles. A special mobile power plant will furnish electricity for this light and for the lighting system of the convoy.

In the convoy will be kitchens, repair shops, a motion picture machine and screen, the new loud-speaking "wireless or amplifier, and many other features to interest the public in the branches of the service represented in the unit. There is also equipment for charting the air and making "mosaic" maps. It is pointed out by the officers that the main object of the trip is to fnid sites for air stations, hangars, radio stations, and data for the Air Service and the Air Mail Service, with recruiting only as a side show.

The units have been assembled at Hazelhurst Field by Colonel Archie Miller, commanding the Long Island fields. No definite schedule has been laid out, but the squadron will proceed through Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana, Idaho, Washington, Oregon, and California.

LIEUT. DECHERT GETS $125,000 FOR LEGACY

SETTLE CASE OUT OF COURT

Referee Finds That Both Nephew and Aunt Were Victims of Blind Confidence.

As the result of a settlement announced yesterday, James F. Dechert, who served as a Lieutenant in France, will receive $125,000 as his share of the estate of his grandmother, Mrs. Sarah J. Flanagan, who died in 1906, although his uncle, De Witt C. Flanagan, formerly a Congressman from New Jersey and original promoter of the Cape Cod Canal, misappropriated his share of $113,000 in his grandmother's estate.

The settlement under which the payment is to be made by his aunt, Mrs. Gertrude E. Shannon, of 121 Madison Avenue, wife of J. Porter Shannon, real estate broker, follows upon the report of John Quinn, named in 1916 as referee to hear objections by Lieutenant Dechert in the accounting by Mrs. Shannon, and Mr. Flanagan, his uncle, as executors under his grandmother's will. Mr. Quinn took testimony in the case for two years in order to determine the accountability of Mrs. Shannon for the acts of her brother, and finally decided that the decisions in similar cases compelled him to hold that both Mrs. Shannon and Mr. Flanagan should account for Lieutenant Dechert's $113,000 with interest since 1906. Counsel for Mrs. Shannon objected to the liability ruling against her on the ground that she had acted innocently, and had been guilty only of blind trust in her brother, but before the attorneys for Lieutenant Dechert had presented a decree to the Surrogate directing the payment of the $113,000 with thirteen years' interest, overtures for a settlement were made, and as a result of the acceptance by her nephew of her offer of about $125,000 the proceedings will be dropped.

Mr. Quinn's report states that Lieutenant Dechert's mother, Lillian F. Dechert died in Connecticut in 1898, and named Flanagan, her brother, as executor under her will and guardian of her son. The referee states that he never qualified as the guardian of his nephew in New York and had no authority to receive property here as his guardian.

The accounting of the executors to which Lieutenant Dechert objected was filed in 1916, and stated that the entire residuary estate of Mrs. Flanagan had been distributed in 1906 among four beneficiaries, each of whom was entitled to $113,000. The share alloted to Lieutenant Dechert consisted of mortgages for $54,000, $40,000, and $19,000 respectibely. Mrs. Shannon joined in this accounting.

After the objections had been filed Mrs. Shannon filed a supplemental accounting, in which she stated that she had just learned for the first time that the mortgages set apart for her nephew and delivered to his uncle in his behalf were retained by Flanagan and thereafter "reinvested" in a bond made by himself for $67,600 to the Sarah J. Flanagan estate, and secured by mortgage by himself and wife of his third interest in the premises at the southeast corner of Columbus Avenue and Sixty-sixth Street, and in a promissory note by himself to the estate for $63,258.

Referee Quinn stated that the $67,600 mortgage was never recorded and was of little or no value, and that no collateral for the $63,258 note was given. The referee points out further that, although Mr. Flanagan had received his own $113,000 from his mother's estate he borrowed $100,000 from Mrs. Shannon in 1908 and she took three mortgages on the third interest in the Sixty-sixth Street and Columbus Avenue property, on which he gave his nephew the $67,600 mortgage as security, but these were recorded and took precedence over the mortgages for her nephew.

WILSON TO REVIEW MARINES

Brigade of Second Division Will March in Capital on Tuesday.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—President Wilson will review the famous marine brigade of the 2d Division in Washington on Tuesday. Orders for the two regiments of marines to parade here were issued today by Acting Secretary Roosevelt.

These will be the first returning troops to be reviewed by Mr. Wilson, and aside from the District of Columbia units they will be the first to march in the capital.

HOTEL MEN WANT DRY BILL AMENDED

Congress Asked to Alter the Search-and-Seizure Clause Affecting Their Guests.

FEAR LOSS OF BUSINESS

Permanent Residents Might Leave if Discrimination Against Them Remains.

On the ground that no protection is afforded to residents of hotels under the search and seizure clause of the Volstead dry enforcement bill, the hotel men of this State have requested the United States Senate Judiciary Committee to make three amendments to the measure as it left the House of Representativs. The request was made through the Hotel Association of New York, it was announced yesterday. The claims of the hotel men are urged by Campbell & Boland of 51 Chambers Street, attorneys for the association.

"The act as drawn does not protect residents in hotels," the latter said. "Many of these residents live permanently in hotels, and never reside in the so-called 'private dwellings.' Furthermore, their private rooms, under the act as now drawn, would be subject to search. Such guests could not even lawfully possess liquors in their apartments, nor could they have them in the storerooms of hotels, where it is customary for permanent guests to store their liquors."

The proposed law covers immunity from search to private residences, and the hotel proprietors, through their lawyers, want Congress to insert in the bill theis defination of a private dwelling: "The term 'private dwelling' shall mean a house or building, or any portion thereof, or any apartment or room therein, used and occupied exclusively for residential purposes."

Concerning the right to search the hotel men ask this amendment: "But such right of search shall not extend to private dwellings or living roome in hotels and boarding houses."

The Enforcement bill, as it goes to the Senate, contains a clause which exempts the private home as follows: "But it shall not be unlawful to possess liquors in one's private dwelling while the same is occupied and used by him as his dwelling only, and such liquor need not be reported, &c.," and the hotel keepers are requesting that this be inserted:

"And it shall not be unlawful for a person residing in a hotel to possess liquors in his own room, or apartment, or in a store room or other convenient place of storage in such hotel; provided, however, that all liquors possessed by hotel residents which are kept or stored outside the private rooms of such resident, shall be plainly marked or labeled with the name of the owner, and shall be reported to the Commissioners."

In explaining the reasons for asking these amendments, Frank A. K. Boland of counsel for the hotel associations of New York, said: "Hotel proprietors feel that their guests should be afforded the same protection which occupants would have in private dwellings, and we apprehend that the guests of such hotels would demand such rights. It would not be drawing very strongly on the imagination to contemplate an exodus from many of our hotels by its permanent guests if the act were to become a law in its present form.

"For the last four or five years there has been a large increase in the permanent guests of hotels, many families finding it well-nigh impossible to solve the servant problem and surmount the other difficulties of modern housekeeping. The fear of the hotel proprietors is that the tide will be turned back to the private dwelling if the rooms of permanent guests are not protected as their homes."

TO STOP SALE OF GRENADES

Swann Declares War Devices Used for Souvenirs Are Still Weapons.

Protest against the sale as souvenirs of hand grenades such as were used in the recent world war was made yesterday by District Attorney Edward Swann in a letter addressed to Commissioner of Police Richard E. Enright.

In his leter the District Attorney reminded the Police Commissioner that there is a law against the sale and possession of dangerous weapons, and the hand grenade, in his opinion, comes within this category. The Police Commissioner is advised to arrest persons found to be selling grenades or having them in their possession.

District Attorney Swann said many complaints that hand grenades are being sold have come to his office recently.

TO FIGHT REGULARS IN PARTY PRIMARIES

Democratic Insurgents Will Bring Out Numerous Contests Throughout the City.

FEW REPUBLICAN FIGHTS

Kings County Races Arouse Interest—Complete List of Candidates in the Field.

While this is an "off-year" in politics, the primary campaign will be marked by many lively fights, principally on the Democratic side.

Brooklyn will be the real battleground, the anti-McCooey faction in the Democratic organization of Kings having placed in the field candidates for all county offices and men of their own to contend with the organization candidates for the nomination for Assembly and Aldermanic Board in a number of districts.

In the Borough of Richmond, too, general insurgency against the dominant element in the Democratic organization has resulted in primary fights all along the line on the Democratic side.

On the Republican side there are few fights and practically all are local in character.

THE TIMES publishes herewith a complete list of the candidates of the leading parties to be voted for in the primaries throughout the city:

*Incumbent.

The Socialist Party is torn by dissension, and for the first time in its history there will be lively primary fights in a number of districts where contending candidates representing the radical "left wing" faction have been placed in the field to contend with the "right wing" regulars for nominations. The Socialist fight will materially lessen if not entirely mar the prospect of any Socialists being elected to either the Assembly or the Aldermanic Board, for it is predicted that the factional bitterness will outlive the primaries.

GIVES MEMORIAL COTTAGE.

Mother of Inez Milholland Sets Aside Estate for Women Writers.

In memory of her daughter Inez Milholland, the well known suffrage worker, Mrs. Jeanne R. Milholland has set aside a cottage on the country estate of the family, Meadowmount, in the Adirondacks, for a vacation and rest resort for women newspaper and magazine writers of New York City.

The place is beautifully located, with 6,000 acres of land in meadows, mountains, forests, and with springs and bathing pools, an elk and deer park. On one of the highest points of land on the estate is a flat slab of granite on which has been inscribed the word "Inez." Mrs. Milholland makes the announcement at this time, she says, because Aug. 6 is the anniversary of the birth of Inez Milholland. Plans for those who take advantage of the offer are in the hands of Mrs. Zoe McClary, 305 West Forty-fifth Street.

CHURCH A FORCE FOR LAW.

Bishop Brent Warns Against Violence as a Remedy for Evils.

The Right Rev. Charles Henry Brent, D. D., Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of Western New York, in a statement given out yesterday in support of the nation-wide campaign of the Episcopal Church includes in it a warning against the use of physical force as a remedy for existing social conditions. Bishop Brent during the war was a chaplain on the staff of General Pershing.

"Nothing," he says, "can save the Church from a continuance of her desultory, individualistic, uneconomic career short of the same sort of self-study in the presence of a great demand upon her life such as awakened a sluggish Government two years ago."

Finally, Bishop Brent thus sums up the duty of the hour and the mission of the campaigns as he sees them from the viewpoint of a militant churchman: "The Church in general and our Church in particular are needed to quell the rising forces of disorder by unveiling the Christ of order and promoting social justice, and to bind men together by the law of love, without which no part of nations can hope to do more than gum together the outside edges of life."

SEVERE SENTENCES IN ARMY REDUCED

20 FINAL VERDICTS OUT

NAVAL CASES PUBLISHED

Ensign Confined for Six Years on a Charge of Forging Signature.

Army orders published yesterday contain the verdicts and final sentences in twenty court-martial cases. These decisions, coming as they do after the Ansell-Crowder controversy, are taken to indicate the trend in court-martial activities in the army both at home and abroad. Naval orders published yesterday also give the results of a number of cases involving officers and enlisted men of that arm of the service.

One of the cases cited is that Private Sherman Miller of the 38th U. D. Infantry of the 3d Division, who on Feb. 1, at Metternich, Germany, was accused of killing Johann Esch, a German subject. He was charged with murder, and the court-martial set aside his plea of not guilty and sentenced him to serve two years in prison, forfeiture of all pay and allowances, to be dishonorably discharged from the service. Secretary Baker, when the case reached him, ruled that "the reviewing authority not having approved those parts of the sentences imposing dishonorable discharge and forfeiture of allowances and that part of the action of the reviewing authority approving so much of the sentence as imposed forfeiture of pay being illegal, the only part of the sentence which legally remains is the provision imposing confinement. If thus executed, there would exist the anomalous situation of a soldier serving a sentence for manslaughter and being still in the military service of the United States and entitled to pay and allowances. The accused will be discharged from the service under the provisions of A. R. 139 and 150 (3)."

Cook Robert Neilson, 358th Infantry, was convicted at headquarters 358th Infantry, American E. F., on Jan. 18, 1919, of having shot with intent to kill Private Richard Lay, 358th Infantry. He was sentenced to be dishonorably discharged and confined at hard labor for one year. The Secretary of War announced that "the specification does not allege facts sufficient to constitute an offense under the 93d or any other A. W. in that it fails to charge the accused with the commission of an unlawful act, neglect, crime or offense. The failure to allege that the act complained of was felonious or unlawful is a fatal defect, and is not legally sufficient to sustain the finding of guilt upon the charge and specification thereunder and the sentence of the court. The accused was ordered released from confinement.

Captain Edwin C. Weisberger, Corps of Engineers, was convicted by a G. C. M. at Governors Island, N. Y., on March 24, 1919, of violation of the 95th and 96th A. W., and sentenced to be dismissed the Service. The President confirmed the sentence and remitted it. Captain Weisberger was restored to duty. (G. C. M. O. 204, War Dept., June 28, 1919.)

Lieutenant Roy F. Reid, Field Artillery, was found guilty by a G. C. M. at Camp Zachary Taylor, Ky., on March 10, 1919, of having told Captain H. P. Rives, assistant to the Provost Marshal at Camp Zachary Taylor, that his name was "Brown," which statement he knew to be untrue. He was sentenced to be dismissed the service. The President commuted the sentence to a reprimand by commanding officer, Camp Zachary Taylor, restriction to the limits of post for three months, and forfeiture of $25 per month pay for same period.

Lieutenant Leo G. Guyer, Medical Corps, was brought before a G. C. M. at Camp Jackson, S. C., on March 14, 1919, charged with violation of the 95th and 96th A. W. He was sentencud to be dismissed the army and confined at hard albor for five years. The President confirmed the sentence.

Lieutenant Halder E. Perry, 1st Infantry, was convicted at Camp Kearny, Calif., on Dec. 16, 1919, of having shot and killed Captain Abram Pusner, 81st Infantry, in the highway near San Diego, Calif., on Dec. 1, 1918, and of having deserted on the same day. He was sentenced to be hung. The President commuted the sentence to dismissal from the army and confinement at hard labor for life.

Captain Edward M. Harding, Signal Corps, was brought before a G. C. M. at Governors Island, N. Y., on April 8, 1919, and convicted of having taken an army automobile from a M. T. C. garage in violation of orders and of having broken arrest. He was sentenced to be dismissed from the service. The President commuted the sentence to a reprimand by the Commanding General, Eastern Department.

Lieutenant Raymond W. Bowdoin, Infantry, was found guilty at Camp Dix, N. J., on March 3, 1919, of being A. W. O. L. and of having falsely told his Commanding Officer that the reason for his absence was the illness of his wife in New York City. He was sentenced to a reprimand, to be administered by the Commanding General, Camp Dix, restriction to limits of his post for six months and forfeiture of $50 per month pay for a like period.

HCaptain Thales E. Gyllenflycht, infantry, was convicted at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., on Dec. 16, 1918, of appearing in civilian clothes while on duty as Provist Marshal, giving whisky to enlisted men, having used without author-by an automobile belonging to a citizen and of having wrecked it. He was sentenced to be dismissed from the army. The President commuted the sentence to a reprimand by the commanding General, Southeastern Department, restriction to limits of his post for six months, and the forfeiture of $25 per month pay for a like period.

Captain Joseph Raedig, United States Guards, was found guilty at Camp Dix, New Jersey, on April 24, 1919, of having stolen a photographic camera, property of the United States. He was sentenced to be discissed the service. The President confirmed the sentence.

Lieutenant Edgar Black, 29th Infantry, was brought before a G. C. M. at Camp Shelby, Mississippi, on April 3, 1919, and convicted of having appropriated money belonging to enlisted men and to having been drunk in camp. He was sentenced to be dismissed the army. The President confirmed the sentence.

Lieutenant George F. Holderried, Infantry, 165th Depot Brigade, was convicted at Camp Travis, Texas, on Feb. 27, 1919, of having presented fradulent claims to the Government for commutation of quarters, heat and light, and for services alleged to have been rendered, of presenting two pay vouchers for the same month, of appropriating $200, the property of an enlisted man, and of having told untruths to Brig. Gen. C. O. Cross, commanding 165th Depot Brigade. He was sentenced to be dismissed from the service and confined at nard labor for five years. The President confirmed so much of the sentence as involved dismissal.

Lieutenant Royal C. Carpenter, Infantry, was convicted at Camp Gordon, Ga., on April 1, 1919, of having been A. W. O. L. and of breaking arrest. He was sentenced to be dismissed from the army. The President confirmed the sentence.

Private Lester G. Ott, First Casual Battalion, Conscientious Objectors, stationed at Fort Riley, Kan., was found guilty by a G. C. M. at Camp Funston, Kan., on Oct. 25, 1918, of having refused to obey an order of Col. J. C. Waterman, C. S. A., to clean up a pile of dirt. He was sentenced to be shot to death with musketry. Gen. Leonard Wood, commanding the Central Depot, recommended that the sentence be commuted to dishonorable discharge and confinement at hard labor for twenty-five years. The President commuted the sentence to dishonorable discharge and confinement at hard labor for six years. (G. C. M. O. 221, War Department, July 14, 1919.)

Lieut. Frank B. Sliger, 31st Inf., was convicted at Vladivostok, Siberia, on Feb. 17, of desertion, embezzlement of $1,077 received from the sale of subsistence stores, untruthfulness, failure to obey orders, and of obtaining from a civilian a fraudulent voucher for $362 more than was paid for certain property purchased. He was sentenced to be dismissed, the army and confined at hard labor for ten years. The President confirmed the sentence, but reduced the term of confinement to five years.

Lieut. Roy S. Spangler, Infantry, was convicted at Camp Sheridan, Ala., on Feb. 13, 1919, of having while exchange officer of the 67th Infantry exchange, stolen $155, and also with having officially certified that the accounts of the exchange had been closed out and turned over to a civilion, which statement he knew to be false. He was sentenced to be dismissed the service and confined at hard labor for one year. The President confirmed the sentence.

Lieutenant Eugene W. Tippetts, 29th Infantry, was convicted at Camp Beauregard, La., on Feb. 7, 1919, of having browen restriction to camp and of having falsely denied to his commanding officer that he owed money to a civilion. He was sentenced to be dismissed the army. The President commuted the sentence to a reprimand by Commanding General, Camp Beauregard, restriction to limits of his post for there months, and forfeiture of $25 per month pay for three months.

Lieutenant Ulric J. Martell, Infantry, was found guilty at Camp Travis, Texas, on Jan. 13, 1919, of having forged a number of checks at Camp Travis. He was sentenced to be dishonorably discharged and confined at hard labor for five years. The President commuted the sentence to two years.

Private John Sullivan, 28th Infantry, was brought before a General Courts Martial at headquarters, 2d Infantry Brigade, A. E. F., Germany, charged with having misappropriated 3,934 marks, the funds of the Y. M. C. A., at Berod, Germany. He was sentenced to be confined at hard labor for six months and forfeit two-thirds of his pay for a like period. The reviewing authority approved the sentence, but the Judge Advocate, War Department, ruled that "while the specification originally stated that the money misappropriated was a part of the funds in his hands belonging to the Y. M. C. A., that statement was eliminated by the findings. Inasmuch as the court accepted from its findings the words 'knowingly and willfully misappropriated,' and the fact that the money squandered and used was a part of the funds of the Y. M. C. A., there is nothing to show that the act was criminal. In the absence of some word or allegation to the contrary an act must be presumed to be lawful and innocent, and such being the presumption in the present case, the accused has not been found guilty of a violation of the 96th or any other A. W." The findings were therefore set aside and the accused restored to duty.

Lieutenant Richard A. Templon, 13th Receiving Battalion, 157th Depot Brigade, was convicted at Camp Gordon, Ga., on April 11, 1919, of having made a false statement to his commanding officer. He was sentenced to be dismissed from the service. The sentence was confirmed by the President.

The naval court-martial cases included in the navy orders, published in yesterday's Army and Navy Journal include the following:

Second Lieutenant Ralph H. Woods, U. S. M. C., was convicted by a G. C. M. at Port au Prince, Haiti, on May 27, 1919, of A. W. O. L. and drunkenness. He was sentenced to lose $50 per month of pay for six months.

Lieut. Com. Charles Geddes, U. S. N. R. F., was found guilty by a G. C. M. on May 7, 1919, for neglect of duty. He was sentenced to lose $50 of his pay per month for three months. In consideration of the former creditable service rendered by Commander Geddes the sentence was reduced to loss of pay of $25 per month for three months.

Lieut. Com. Frank H. Atkinson, Pay Corps, U. S. N. R. F., was found guilty by a G. C. M. on May 12, 1919, of absence from station and duty without leave and drunkenness. He was sentenced to dismissal, and the sentence was confirmed by President Wilson.

Lieutenant, (j.g.) Edgar R. Winckler, U. S. N., was found guilty by a G. C. M. May 19, 1919, of sleping on watch. He was sentenced to lose 100 numbers in his temporary grade of Lieutenant (j.g.) and to lose 100 numbers in his permanent grade of ensign. The sentnecew as mitigated to the loss of fifty numbers in his temporary grade and to a loss of fifty number in his permanent grade as ensign.

Ensign Harry M. Scholder, U. S. N. R. F., was found guilty by a G. C. M. on April 14, 1919, of desertion, scandalous conduct, forging a signatuer for the purpose of fradulently obtaining money, fraud, theft, breaking arrest, assaulting and striking a civilian, and robbery. He was sentenced to be dismissed the service and to be imprisoned for twenty years. On the recommendation of the J. A. G. the sentence was reduced to six years' confinement in the Navay Prison at Portsmouth, N. H.

Ensign Frank E. Stallman, N. S. N. R. F., was found guilty by a G. C. M. on May 8, 1919, of drunkenness and was sentenced to dismissal. The sentence was confirmed by President Wilson.

Ensign Oscar F. Berger, Pay Corps, U. S. N. R. F., was found guilty by a G. C. M. on May 7, 1919, of scandalous conduct. He was sentenced to dismissal and to confinement for three years. On account of his previous excellent character and his long and honorable service he was recommended for clemency and the period of imprisonment was reduced to one year. The sentence was confirmed by President Wilson.

Gunner Frederick E. Peterson, U. S. N., was found guilty by a G. C. M., Feb. 24, 1919, of scandalous conduct to the destruction of good morals. He was sentenced to be dismissed the service, and President Wilson approved the same.

Seventeen Killed in Mexican Mine.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 8.—Seventeen deaths were caused by a dynamite explosion yesterday in the Rosario Mine, Pachuca, according to latest reports. Two trains, one carrying 3,000 pounds of explosives, crasher near the main entrance to the mine. It was at first feared that more than a thousand miners were entombed.

THEY CHART FACES FOR THE HIGH POINTS

EVERY BUMP AN INDICATOR

It Has a Meaning of Its Own in Choosing Your Life Job—This Seriously Taught Downtown.

Do you wish to avoid taking a job—say as a window cleaner, one of those human flies that one sees working away up on the fifty-steenth floor of the Woolworth Building—when you really should be in charge of the operations of a hive of bees, down at the end of some old garden, full of honey flowers? Or, do you wish to avoid hiring, to sell your best brand of cigars on the road, a man who, if he found his true vocation, would inevitably run an anti-smoks, anti-drink, and anti-everything campaign? Then hear ye! as the old town crier used to say.

There was a young man—no, this is not a Limerick—there is a man who believes that he has solved the unemployment question and has started in to prove it. According to this theorist, there is work for all, work that clamors to be done, and some that probably never will be done to the entire satisfaction of those who have it to dispense.

And, on the other hand, there are the workers. To the earnest advocate of vocational analysis the world presents itself as a vast place where the worker—millions and millions of him—hustles around in circles, vainly trying to grasp the work that he can do, the work that suits him, the work that is his work.

About all the average human knows is that it costs more to buy everything or to have any piece of work done than it ever cost before, and it doesn't make any difference whether it is a house or an automobile, or whether you want a hole mended in Maggie's old agate ware double boiler, or whether it is a question of planting a gold crown without waiting to "shuffle off this mortal coil." The dentist says: "I can give you an appointment in ten days; sorry, but that's the best I can do." The cleaning and dyeing establishment will promise to return your old suit—which you are having cleaned solely because you are in dire need of a new one and feel you cannot afford to buy it—in a month, and will talk about the great rush of work at present "in this line." There is always a rush, as far as one can see—and in every "line."

The question of servants—domestic service—has become too sore a subject to be touched upon lightly, awakening, as it would, a responsive pang in so many hearts.

And, yet, in spite of all this, thousands and thousands of people are looking for work. Employers everywhere will tell you how difficult it is to get the right kind of secretary, or stenographer, and yet the rooms of the regular employment agencies and likewise the employment bureaus run by the various typewriter concerns are crowded with applicants, of all ages and complexions, creeds and races.

Is it possible that the would-be secretaries should be dressmakers and the aspiring dressmakers the stenographers; that the drug store clerk should be selling life insurance, while the life insurance agent should be writing movie scenarios? Are we to believe that people do not choose their occupations with any sense, and, failing sense, not even with instinct?

New System—Vocational Analysis.

That is just about what we might think if we listen to the exponents of the New System, which, be it said, is the system of vocational faculties-analysis, who have opened an establishment where a course is given, which will enable you to choose, and choose wisely, your course in life. Take a good dose, it is promised, and you will be able to determine your real vocation, not to mention that of others, with the unfailing accuracy of the small boy's knowledge of when it is time for dinner.

At present, if one is seeking employment and goes to one of the established agencies, or perhaps direct to some representative of big business, a large and imposing wheel is thrust upon one, which looks unpleasantly like a certain recent income tax paper, and one is mildly requested to "fill it out." It will be found to cover everything from the color of the applicant's eyes—"to be given separately, please, in case they differ"—to careful probings as to whether one prefers eggs for breakfast, or no eggs.

If we are to believe the vocational analysis gentry, we may hope to see this all done away with, and all over the country will be little clinics, perhaps private perhaps public, perhaps Government owned, where Mary and Jimmy, when they leave high school, or come out of business college, will sit, and where Mary at least will giggle, while a plausible young man runs his fingers down the side of her nose and says that, no matter what she may try to do, the profession she will eventually follow will be that of a nurse! And aspirants for places will appear armed, not with the letter of recommendation of ancient tradition, but with a chart bearing little wiggly marks looking like stenographic notes without curves.

This will be one's basic analysis of vocational faculties. Among other things, it will have big headings, such as "Intellectual Elements," under which "Science," "Letters," "Art," etc., are sub-headed; then "Social Elements," and further down on the chart, "Volitional or Will Elements." It will be interesting to note that "Commerce," "Wealth," and "Rulership" are among the divisions bracketed under "Will Elements." These subheads are again divided. For instance, let us take "Art"—because everybody is interested in art—"Art" is divided again into "Form," "Color," and "Number." An artist would ask: "What about balance and line," which are omitted and both of which are dear to the artist's heart. However—

It does stand to reason that the man who is going to sell clothes-wringers must have a somewhat different mental equipment from the man who is going to sell essay, tall paper, or ladies' dress silks, just as the man who is going to sell anything must have a different character from the man who is going to construct things or the man who is going to work a machine.

Charts of Little Wiggles.

A vast field of speculation opens up before one's interested vision. We now file, index and cross-index the card system of our business records, so, in time, perhaps, we may expect to see applicants for such places cross-indexed by their face charts, and the charts themselves may be grouped under headings of a, b or c, according to whether one boasts the urbanity of a real estate agent, the persistency of the book agent, or the insinuating quality of the high-class silk salesman. Everything will be on the chart; the degree of destructiveness, the amount of endurance; faith, hope and love will stand side by side with frugality, system and perseverance, enthusiasm, tact and candor, besides other things not thought quite so nice, as rigor, severity, &c. They are all taken care of.

One may "pick the winner" at a glance. In time it may even be possible to convince Willie, the office boy, that, although he may have all the qualities that cause him to look forward to being President some day, he never will be able to fill the bill as a lickeron of stamps in your office.

The new idea addresses itself to a wide audience, employers and employes, which would seem to include most folks. In the first place, are you one of the workers? Then, do you know whether you are "giving yourself a chance?" Are you engaged in the occupation best suited to your abilities and characteristics? You don't know? Then you should come and have your face read and find out. That is not what they call it, but an irreverent memory of the man who reads one's bumps persists, and while we are told that this has no more to do with phrenology than it has to do with black magic, still one thinks that little old bump reader and refers to the new ideas as reading one's face!

Square Pegs in Round Holes.

You are not a worker, in the exact sense of the word? But still, the people with whom you come in contact, the men with whom you deal, would you not be at a great advantage if you could size them up in an accurate and exact manner, and, withal, in the twinkling of an eye? Of course you would.

Mr. Auto Broker, how many times have you lost a sale because of that little inability to size your man up just right, what you call "overlooking a bet" somewhere? You would not like to say just how many. Perhaps he could not afford a $6,000 car, but you might have sold him a $600 one. Or, again, perhaps he did not show the slightest inkling in your $600 offering, but went and bought a $6,000 car from your most hated rival. You thought his clothes—but clothes don't always tell the whole story, or manner, either. Many a man who walks as though he were afraid of hurting the floor, and looks too meek to be the possible owner of anything, could buy and sell a lot of blusterers.

Then, for the busy manager or executive, who feels, perhaps, that he is unable to get the best out of his men—what a boon this system will be for him? Instead of packing off John Doe because he isn't making good, he will send him over to the vocational bureau where, after the investigator has gone prodded all the knobs of his physiognomy and played an adagio movement on his countenance in studying the topography of his facial map, Mr. Manager will be told just where Mr. Doe will fit in. In other words, there will be no more trying to fit square pegs into round holes.

How It Works.

But where can one learn all about the New System?

It is a hot and steamy night, and one walks up a couple of flights of stairs in an old-fashioned house in the neighborhood of Fourteenth Street. One comes out into a room, well filled with people, mostly men. One sees the clerk seeking to improve his condition, the master mechanic who has dropped in to see "if there is anything in it," and school teachers, male and female. Some of these teachers are ardent supporters of the new idea and are attending the full course of lectures, in which the strange-looking charts, hanging on the walls, are doubtless made use of and explained. One chart shows a man's face, another a woman's face, and the high points are emphasized and cabalistically marked with double initials. It all looks very impressive.

An enthusiastic young man rises and tells the audience something of his past career, the various and widely varying kinds of work he has done, until finally he took up this new study which he considers all-important. He tells something of the high points of the face, and how these are not always natural characteristics, but sometimes acquired, as, for instance, if a subject studied much along certain lines, he would strongly develop the corresponding portion of his face.

He tells how it is customary to study, for the benefit of the audience, a couple of subjects at each of these public meetings, and calls for volunteers.

A general shyness ensues, and one modest man is nabbed just as he is about to escape. He is told, after examination, among other things, that he is probably a minister or a teacher, but that although he may have all the qualities that cause him to look forward to being President some day, he never will be able to fill the bill as a lickeron of stamps in your office.

The new idea addresses itself to a wide audience, employers and employes, returns to his seat, to have the pleasure of seeing some one else "be the goat," as per possibly, to be happier to be interested in this vocational guidance. In connection with his teaching, to get ideas to help him in his work.

The lecturer, or demonstrator, or whatever you wish to call the enthusiastic young man, states very plainly that there probably are some who think he knows the people there, but permit him to say that of all the roomful he recognizes but three, whom, of course, he would not consider for readings.

A blonde young man, with good manners, and a pleasant, rather intelligent face, is the next subject and is told he might very profitably take up stenography, not with a view to becoming and ending life as a stenographer, but as a stepping-stone to a secretaryship with some big business man or politician, where he could get a "high-paid" job. The young man blushes happily and admits that he is a bookkeeper. He is advised to lose no time in combining the two branches of knowledge.

The Ladies Hard to Diagnose.

The lecturer explains that he does not like to trouble the ladies, especially in view of the prevalent modes of hairdressing, which enable a woman pretty thoroughly to disguise a goodly portion of her face, the forehead, temples, and region in front of the ears, the ears themselves. Unfortunately, no one of the ladies present offers to draw her hair straight back from her face for the good of the cause. So attention is called to the marked characteristics of a face, the length of nose, height of brow, the strength or weakness of chin, the bumps between the eyes, showing a sense of "form"; the bumps further to the side, indicating a strong feeling for "color" (what the artist present knew as "color sense"). Some of the bumps over the eye, the lecturer says, are such as an excellent mechanic might have who was used to watching and "following" machinery in motion—indicating "form in motion," in other words; the pouches of flesh at either side of the mouth indicate egotism. A high development of this is shown on a chart.

Another man has his face "read." He is told that he is too good for a butcher, but not good enough for a surgeon—which is a very unpleasant approximation of ideas for any one in need of the attentions of the latter. It is explained that he has a tremendous lot of aggressiveness and destructiveness, but lacks a sufficiency of the higher powers that he could not build up; had no feeling for detail. That sometimes the destructiveness is very nice about it, and, instead of starting in to exhibit his chief characteristic on the demonstrator, for whom the audience must have trembled, explains that his business is to improve his conditions, reconstruct buildings, but that perhaps they could tell him why he always lost interest right away, that he could start a thing, but could not carry it through.

He is told that he has the ability to destroy and plan to change, but not the power to build up and work in the mass of detail apparently necessary.

That's the New System. It may be bad, but those who have devised it rarely seem to lack an interested audience.

COLUMBIA CHANGES COLLEGE COURSES

Freshmen Not to be Required to Study History and Philosophy.

NEW COMPOSITE COURSE

To Compel Attendance of First-Year Men at Lectures on Politics and Contemporary Problems.

Another change in the curriculum of Columbia College believed by the trustees and other authorities of the university to have been made necessary by new-world conditions was announced yesterday from the office of President Nicholas Murray Butler. It was pointed out that President Butler, the trustees, and the deans of all the Faculties in the university considered that the change would have far-reaching results in changing educational methods and would tend to give every student a more intimate knowledge in public affairs and a greater interest in them.

In beginning its revolution of teaching methods for the Freshmen in the college the Faculty announced that hereafter no student would be required to take any course in history or philosophy. In place of these studies every student who enters the college will be required to take a course in contemporary civilization, a new course that has been framed in conferences of the department heads in the college. The classes will meet five times a week.

Instead of placing the control of the instruction in this course in one department, the authorities have decided to call upon five of the principal Faculties to furnish instructors and material. These departments are History, Government, Philosophy, Economics, and Sociology. A special study room for a's the students who are required to take this course will be provided in Hamilton Hall, where the students will be enabled to reach all their instructors outside the classroom.

Faculty members who discussed the new required course said they believed that the radical change would be successful from the beginning, and they pointed out that the course would tend to give the student an intimate grasp of local, national, and world problems and would create more interest than the old academic, routine way of teaching merely to impart facts. The probability that another radical change of the curriculum might follow also was pointed out by members of the Faculty.

"The Faculty of Columbia College believes that it is of pre-eminent importance that students, early in their courses, should direct their attention to the social and political conditions and problems in which they will participate," said Dean Herbert E. Hawkes of Columbia College. "To learn how these problems have developed historically and to understand the proposed solutions is to increase the student's ability to play his part with intelligence rather than prejudice. In the troubled times which we are facing enlightened participation in public affairs is essential to national health and industrial stability."

"In the first semester the course in contemporary civilization begins with the presentation of the materials which must be used in the solving of any problems affecting human welfare," says the announcement of the course. These materials are natural resources and human beings. A rapid survey is made of natural resources and their artificial control, and a longer period given to the consideration of the human traits which are significant in all matters of social control.

"This survey is followed by the presentation of the controlling ideas of the present, ideas which are different from those held 100 years ago. The first of these is the changed view of nature, which was once thought of as hostile, and is now thought of as subject to man's control in the interest of his own well-being. The second is the changed view of man, which regards him as a part of nature, and capable of indefinite improvement.

Next are considered changes in the human life incident to the transfer of production from the home to the factory, and to the internationalising of commerce. The first semester closes with a discussion of the forces of political evolution; that is, a democratic, co-operative government as a substitute for an autocratic, monarchical form of control. It is felt that all of these changes are significant in the consideration of practically all of the problems which face us today.

"In the second semester a brief survey is made of the chief events in the nineteenth century history of the great nations. This is a rapid review, and is intended to form a background for the discussion of the international relations and the political problems in the next section, which is entitled 'The Fundamental Problems of Today.' Here such problems are posed as the following:

"How to produce many goods cheaply and humanely; how to affect a political and legal organization which will be at once responsive to social opinion and yet stable enough to make possible operations requiring knowledge of conditions over a long period; how to preserve at once national integrity and unity and characteristic distinction, and the benefits to be derived from international relations and co-operation, and, finally, how to provide education which will be profitable both from a cultural and commercial point of view, individually and socially.

"This five-hour required course will be taught by men from the departments of history, government, philosophy, economics, and sociology. Each instructor will teach the entire material of the course. This feature will require a large amount of research on the part of the instructors, but it is felt that this will be beneficial because it will tend to break down department isolation. Furthermore, courses which have been conducted in the past by having individual instructors each give two or three weeks have been without exception unsuccessful. A great amount of enthusiasm has been shown by the instructors who will be charged with teaching the course.

"A new study room will be provided, funds for this purpose having been provided by many friends of the college, who feel that the new course is one of the most significant educational innovations in the field of college instruction."

The discontinuance of the freshman requirements in history and philosophy was determined upon at a meeting of the Faculty of Columbia College. A committee composed of Dr. A. L. Jones, Director of Admissions; Professor R. A. E. Chandler, Professor B. B. Kendrick, Professor H. E. McBain, and Professor H. R. Mitchell was appointed to consider plans for the course in contemporary civilization. With the assistance of this committee a syllabus has been prepared in collaboration by Professor John J. Coss, Professor Kendrick, H. J. Carman, Irwin Edman, E. D. Graper, and Herbert W. Schneider.

JUGOSLAV REDS PROTEST.

Join Bourgeoisie in Anti-Italian Manifesto Over Fiume.

Joining their bourgeois fellow citizens in protesting against a pro-Italian solution of the problem of Fiume, the Socialists of Jugoslovakia, through their party's Executive Committee, have addressed an appeal to the world asking the aid of the proletariat of the nations represented at the Paris Peace Conference. This appeal was printed in a recent issue of l'Humanite of Paris. It begins by declaring that the Peace Conference has shown no comprehension of the real needs of the Balkan peoples and has merely complicated political matters instead of smoothing them out, and then says:

"Italy wants to subjugate a part thereof by annexation in order to penetrate the Orient economically. It is obvious that Italy in order to disaggregate the peoples of the Balkans, wants to play there the part which Germany and Austria-Hungary have once played. For this purpose, she cuts off from the Slovenes all the roads leading to Trieste as a Yugoslav port.

"In the meantime the Italians, feeling embarrassed by Wilson's proposals concerning Fiume, try to counteract them by promoting the creation of an abortive state, comprising the territory of the town of Fiume and of a part of its hinterland."

The appeal concludes by demanding a plebiscite of all the peoples concerned in the territorial readjustments and repeating its protests against violence and imperialism of all kinds.

DELIVERED TO YOUR HOME FOR A MODERATE DOWN PAYMENT

Balance $7 Monthly

THE cost of the Style 430 Vocalion is but $125. Yet it will bring from your records such a wonderful richness of tone as you have never heard from a phonograph before. The Vocalion is supreme in depth of tone and in the fidelity with which it reproduces the individual voices and instruments. Combined with its unequalled richness and power, this artistic phonograph possesses a delicacy and refinement for passages requiring these qualities, which is not to be found in phonographs of other make.

Many of the world's greatest musical artists have heard this beautiful phonograph. Not one has denied that it marks a wonderful advance in the reproduction of musical sound. And those who are won by the fine tonal qualities of the Vocalion will find these qualities enhanced by a delightful new privilege.

With the Graduola—the revolutionary Vocalion expression control—each note of voice or instrument is your own.

The GRADUOLA alone is sufficient to make the Aeolian-Vocalion your choice. It is a simple and yet artistic device, which makes it possible, if you choose, to vary the expression, the shading of every piece you play. Thus it gives added life and endless variety to your records. It is not necessary to use the Graduola. The Vocalion is a perfect phonograph without it.

PRESIDENT'S WORDS GIVE COTTON LIFT

LIVERPOOL A GOOD BUYER

Yesterday's cotton market, after the President's address had been digested overnight, appeared to view it in a favorable light. Opening prices were advanced from 17 to 40 points from Friday's closing, and a better trade demand appeared almost immediately with orders from the West making themselves felt. The forward movement was accelerated when shorts covered themselves on the report that a tropical storm of unknown violence was developing over the Carribean Sea, and the tone of the market was buoyant when compared with recent sessions. October contracts, which opened at 31.85, sold off 5 points and then advanced steadily to 32.40, while the high price for December futures was 32.63. January, March, and May contracts also sold higher.

The cotton trade, which had been somewhat fearful of what the President might suggest in the way of price cutting, was evidently relieved that his suggestions embraced a lowering of prices between the retailer and the consumer without a broad disturbance of actual raw material prices, and the market showed this.

Although the Liverpool cotton market was closed for the regular Saturday holiday there was some substantial buying from that source. Profit-taking on a comparatively small scale served to cause an easing off in values before the close. Last prices showed advances of from 45 to 55 points over Friday's closing.

Yesterday's quotations follow:

	Open.	High.	Low.	Close.	Prev. Day.
Oct.	31.85	32.40	31.80	32.12@32.15	31.58
Dec.	32.10	32.63	32.00	32.28@32.30	31.75

The local market for spot cotton was steady at 32.65c for midland upland up to 65 points; sales nil.

Southern spot markets were: Galveston, 31½c; New Orleans, 31½c; Savannah, 30⅞@34c; Augusta, 30½c; Memphis, 34½c; Houston, 31.65c.

STEEL INGOT OUTPUT GAINS

Thirty Companies Show Increase of 300,000 Tons in July.

An increase of about 300,000 tons in steel ingot production is reported by the American Iron and Steel Institute for July, the figures being compiled from the records of thirty companies which manufacture approximately 85 per cent. of the output of the country. The July production amounted to 2,508,176 gross tons. The June output was 2,219,219 gross tons. The total for last month is the largest reported since March.

The following table shows the ingot production of last year and the first six months of this year, as compiled by the American Iron and Steel Institute:

The production is still much below the 3,352,196 gross tons which were produced in October of 1918, which was the high point for that year.

SEEK PLACES FOR WOMEN.

Movement Under Way to Open Equal Chances in Civil Service.

The Federation of Women's Civil Service Organizations has issued a pamphlet, "Woman's Place in Civil Service," which is being sent to women's organizations all over the country to enlist their co-operation in work to obtain equal opportunities in the service for women. The report was prepared by May B. Upshaw, Assistant Chief Examiner Municipal Civil Service Commission, New York City. The platform upon which the federation will work will be "To open Civil Service Examinations to women; to abolish sex eligible lists; to secure equal pay for equal work in the public service, and equal opportunity for advancement; to obtain appointments for women on civil service commissions."

To put this through Mrs. Anna Martin Crocker, President of the Federation, says in some cases legislation will be necessary, and in others a change of rules by the Civil Service Commission. Others require only a change of practice.

STEEL TRADE BOOM GROWS.

Gain of 1,200,000 Tons in Unfilled Orders in Two Months.

The United States Steel Corporation yesterday reported an increase of 685,806 tons in unfilled orders standing on the books of the company on July 31 as compared with the figures for June 30. This is an increase even greater than was expected in view of the heavier shipments and the increased operations of the company's plants during July. The unfilled tonnage now stands at 5,578,661 tons, or a greater total than has prevailed since February of this year, when the figures were 6,010,787. In the early part of the year and all through 1918, in fact, unfilled tonnage was decreasing with almost each successive month. The trend was downward even in the latter part of 1917.

During the last two months there has been a gain in unfilled orders of about 1,200,000 tons and in trade circles this is taken to indicate that the steel industry has passed through the readjustment period and is now on the way toward great activity. The Government orders, which were cancelled, have now all been stricken from the Steel Corporation books, so that the figures represent business in hand.

Feb.	6,010,787	9,288,453	11,576,697	8,568,966
March	5,430,572	9,056,404	11,711,644	9,331,001
April	4,800,685	8,741,882	12,183,083	9,829,551
May	4,282,310	8,337,623	11,886,591	9,937,798
June	4,892,855	8,918,866	11,383,287	9,640,458
July	5,578,661	8,883,801	10,844,164	9,593,592
Aug.	......	8,759,042	10,407,049	9,660,357
Sept.	......	8,297,905	9,883,477	9,522,584
Oct.	......	8,353,293	9,009,675	10,015,260
Nov.	......	8,124,663	8,897,106	11,058,542
Dec.	......	7,379,152	9,381,718	11,547,286

The increase of July over June this year is greater than in the three preceding years, in fact there was a lose of some 500,000 in 1917. The pinnacle of orders was made in April of 1917 when the unfilled tonnage amounted to 12,183,083.

LOW DEATH RATE IN JULY.

Rainy Weather Credited with Decreasing Usually Fatal Illness.

On the basis of figures just compiled, the Health Department announces that the city never had a weekly death rate in the month of July as low as in the week ended July 26. The rate was 8.87 per thousand, only 1,021 deaths in the week, as against 1,262, a rate of 11.21, in the corresponding week of 1918—a decrease of 241 in the deaths and of 2.34 in the rate. The next lowest rate was for the week ended June 21 of this year, which was 9.10, and the next lowest to that was for the week ended July 19, which was 9.16.

"In the past," continues the report, "high mortality during the month of July has been from heatstroke, and from diarrhoeal diseases among children. It will be remembered that during the ten days preceding July 21 we had rain every day, and, as a rule, when we have plenty of rain in June and July we have a diminished mortality from diarrhoeal diseases among children, and from heatstroke. During the week just passed we had ninety-two deaths reported from diarrhoeal diseases of children under five years of age, against 128 similar deaths in the corresponding week of last year—a decrease of 36.

"Many other diseases showed a falling off in mortality, especially chronic organic deases of the heart. There was one death reported during the week from sunstroke, as against eleven in the corresponding week of 1918; 102 deaths from violence as against 120 last year; 194 deaths reported of children under one year of age as against 215—a decrease of 21."

Japanese Cotton Profits.

A report issued by the Japanese Cotton Spinners' Union shows that net profits obtained by thirty-five cotton spinning companies during the last year have shown remarkable increases. The industry started thirty years ago. In 1913 profits were $9,533,314, but last year they amounted to $54,343,479. The paid in capital in 1913 of these companies amounted to $41,782,270, and in 1918 this was increased to $67,593,600.

ROCKEFELLER SEES NEED TO CO-OPERATE

Founder of Standard Oil Issues First Statement in Several Years.

MUST PUT WORLD RIGHT

Tells Employes Heritage of Generation Is to Establish a New Order.

In the first public statement which he has made in several years, John D. Rockefeller, in this month's number of The Lamp, the official bulletin of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, says that the needs of mankind today are the same as fifty years ago and that the greatest need is co-operation. The message, which is in response to a request from the editor of The Lamp, reads as follows:

"It is with reluctance that I consent, because I have been so long out of actual participation in the direction of the affairs of the company. Yet it is perhaps fitting for one who was present at the organization of the Standard Oil Company, spent his years of business life in it, and is still deeply interested in its success, to address a few words to you.

"The world we live in today is a very different world from that into which the original Standard Oil Company was launched, in 1870. Conditions have vastly changed. Yet even with the complete remaking of the world, which we see going on around us on every hand, the needs of mankind are the same today as they were fifty years ago. And what is the greatest need? Co-operation. The world needs, above all else, co-operation; that is, working together, which implies friendship, brotherhood, mutual endeavor, mutual sympathy, and mutual support.

"Conditions throughout the world have changed, but the principle upon which our company was built has anevr changed; the principle of service to all mankind along the lines of co-operation and conservatism.

"You do not need to be reminded of the business success our company has attained. The thing it has striven hardest for has been to help itself by helping mankind to prosper. Let us look at what our company, with other oil companies, has done for humanity in the war. Each one of you has given the best that was in him to aid in this triumph of right. How happy you must feel, how happy we all must feel, to think that we have done so much to defend the liberties, the rights of mankind.

"But much remains to be done. A new world is to be established. You are to play an important part in making it right and keeping it right. In our beginnings we had everything to do and nothing to do it with. You have a world to put right, but you have much to do it with. The men of this generation are entering into a hertiage which makes their fathers' lives look poverty-stricken by comparison. You need only to steer the straight course, to apply yourselves assiduously to the task, to use your imagination, your sympathy, your best judgment, and success must be yours.

"It may not be amiss to remaid you that we are all one company—the originators, the developers, the men of the past, the present, and the future. We have achieved results by giving our best to serve mankind. If we continue to do that we shall not fail. I wish you all the greatest happiness—the satisfaction of duty done to the best of your ability."

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

There was a firm tone throughout yesterday's session on the Consolidated Stock Exchange. United States Steel common was bid up 2 points, Crucible 3, and Bethlehem Steel B 2⅜, all falling back about a point on final hour selling. Mexican Petroleum was advanced 4¼, while Pan American improved 3⅜ and Royal Dutch of New York 3⅜. Tobacco Products was best of its group, rising 4⅜, while General Cigars moved up 2⅜. Central Leather netted a gain of 4⅜. United States Industrial Alcohol 3⅜, and United Retail Stores 2⅛, to 109⅜. The demand for equipment shares was the outstanding feature of the session, American Car and Foundry advancing 7½, while Baldwin Locomotive gained 4½ and American Locomotive 3½. The copper properties and the marines averaged gains of from one to two points, while the motor issues scored gains ranging from 2 to 8 points, this last in the case of General Motors. Gains of from 2 to 4 points were averaged in the active rails.

The Railroad Situation

How does the present crisis affect the investor?

What is the actual position of the owners of railroad securities in the light of the sensational demands of the Railroad Brotherhoods?

Thomas Gibson in a clear, dispassionate analysis of the situation finds that consternation has obscured some facts of vital importance in consideration of the problem. Read his article in this week's Financial World. Send for a copy.

Has a Blight Fallen Upon the "Bull" Market?

In tomorrow's issue of The Annalist the leading article deals with how professional traders have succeeded in beating industrial stocks down 30 per cent. and "weak" accounts have been reduced. Indications still point toward confidence among farsighted stock owners that the future holds promise of prosperous times. Some present handicaps.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Prices of Stocks Are Helped by President's Address and Short Covering.

The further recovery of stocks in yesterday's session of the market was aided by several factors. The President's address to Congress on methods to deal with the high cost of living and kindred matters was the cause of rather general satisfaction. The manner in which Mr. Wilson handled the economic aspects of current conditions was the subject of favorable comment. The soundness of his appeal to labor to cast aside radical tendencies and help to increase production found much support in banking and business quarters. News that railway shopmen were returning to their posts in increasing numbers had reflection in buying of the railroad shares. Supplementing the brighter appearance of the labor situation were steady purchases in the way of short covering transactions after the week's decline, the net result of all the influences being net gains extending from 1 to more than 3 points.

The market had as its special feature a gradual strengthening of prices all the way along. One or two issues were bid upward with vigor, but in general the advance was cumulative under moderately active dealings. Steel, rubber, tobacco, and equipment stocks were, perhaps, more prominent than others, although the rails displayed more force in recovery than had been seen for a long time past. The President's address seemed to give many traders confidence that the program of the brotherhoods for nationalizing the roads would find little support in public or official quarters. The Street saw in a statement issued by brotherhood leaders at Washington, to the effect that no violence or threats were intended to carry through a plan for tripartite management of the roads, an indication that a new light had been seen by the labor representatives.

Week-end news from the steel trade showed the forward movement of June had gained more progress in July. The Steel Corporation reported an increase of $80,000 tons in unfilled orders during the month, which denoted a large inflow of new business, inasmuch as shipments were more extensive than in June. Since June 30 the bookings have expanded nearly 1,300,000 tons, and forward orders at the end of July amounted to the largest figure since Feb. 28. Ingot production in July was 300,000 tons or more greater than in June, according to the returns from the greater part of the country's capacity.

The Clearing House bank statement showed that loans had declined $21,900,000 during the week. In view of the liquidation of stocks this might seem to be a relatively small recession in the banks' loan account, but at the time market loans were being retired it may have been that the demand for accommodation for general business purposes recorded an increase over the week before. The surplus reserve declined $15,000,000, leaving the excess over legal requirements $51,100,000, compared with $29,400,000 on July 5 and $83,000,000 on July 12. The reserve of member banks with the Federal Reserve Bank declined $20,900,000. Only small changes were recorded in the Reserve Bank's discount operations. Discounts secured by Government obligations declined $2,500,000, other discounts receded $4,500,000, and the total of bills bought increased $8,900,000.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

President's Message a Tonic.

So much has been circulated throughout the financial district about the effect the President's message would have on stock movements by those who had sold stock and wanted to cover at lower levels—apparently there were many—that when the text of his address came out and had been thoroughly digested all of the suggestions it contained seemed to act as a tonic on the market. Uncertainty, which had been the real market damper on Friday, was over with yesterday, and many of the issues which had suffered heavily in the declining market of the last week made sharp recoveries, with the specialties again leading. With the opening gong yesterday stocks began to move up, and the recovery continued fairly well throughout the half-holiday trading session. That the outlook for the railroads was viewed with less apprehension was clearly evident in the advances recorded by low-priced rails, which have been weak in recent days. Among the industrials the advances were even more pronounced, with some of the equipment issues particularly active.

New Pools Forming.

One of the incidents which have been lacking in recent weak trading sessions reappeared yesterday. When prices were breaking on Thursday, and when the market, although showing improvement on Friday, still indicated a spirit of uneasiness, the rumors about new pools forming in various issues, with the attendant gossip and tips on different stocks, were conspicuous by their absence. Yesterday, as the general list moved forward buoyantly, there were the usual number of pool rumors going the rounds of the commission houses, and the usual gossip about company earnings and dividend prospects that have accompanied former bull markets.

Ready to Present Their Plan.

The vanguard of the Association of Railway Executives is en route for Washington, where it is expected that the Standing Committee of that organization will offer its revamped plan for legislation necessary for a return of the carriers to private operation before the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce. In local banking and railroad circles it is believed that close attention will be paid to the suggestions made by the practical railroad executives who will represent the association at the Senate hearing, and it was apparently the consensus of opinion that the final plan as it will be presented will embrace all of the good points brought forward in other plans for remedial legislation. This belief was based on the early statement by the association that it stood ready to adopt the best of the points brought out by other agencies which offered possible solutions of the problem.

Marine Preferred Gossip.

As the tone of the general list improved in yesterday's stock market rumors surrounding International Mercantile Marine shares again began to circulate. The common shares were quite active and gained more than a point, while the preferred moved up more than two points. Accompanying the advance in the latter there were persistent rumors that the back dividends on the stock would soon be paid off without a large Federal tax thereon. And to aid the rumor it was also asserted that the company was buying in its bonds so that it might redistribute them to the preferred stockholders as payment for accrued dividends.

Steel Corporation Orders.

The figures of unfilled tonnage on the books of the United States Steel Corporation on July 31, as announced yesterday, show a gain of 685,506 tons over those of June 30. This is nearly 200,000 tons greater than Wall Street's predictions and is a striking testimonial to the improved condition in the steel industry. While the figures apply only to the Steel Corporation, it is logical to assume that other companies, large and small, have increased their booking of orders correspondingly. The surprising fact in connection with the Steel Corporation increase is that it was made in a month usually rather dull as regards new business, and against presumably much heavier shipments than during June. In other words, the increase is even more significant of improvement than the June figures, which showed an increase of more than 600,000 tons, for the corporation was working during July at something very close to 80 per cent. of capacity, while in June operations were much lower.

Prices for Steel and Iron.

It seems quite improbable that there will be any increase in the current prices for steel and iron for some time unless labor demands should make an offsetting increase necessary. The steel industry as a whole has followed a very conservative course as to prices, and while some of the smaller companies are not making profits commensurate with what they believe fair, it is nevertheless true that the industry has gained much through its complete dissociation from any profiteering. Conservatism has been the keynote and from all indications it will continue to be so in the future. Price advances in steel products would not be popular at the present time and might have the detrimental effect of checking the business that is flowing in at a tremendous rate.

Strength in Rubber Shares.

The rubber stocks were strong in yesterday's trading partly because of the favorable comment to be found in the statement made by the Directors of the United States Rubber Company and partly because there was room for a natural rebound after the sharp reaction of the early part of the week. Furthermore, there were reports that the prices for tires would be advanced. Such a course would mean greater earnings as the price of crude rubber is lower now in years, but it hardly seems probable that this policy will be adopted by the rubber companies. It was only a short time ago that tire prices were reduced and this reduction was followed by rumors of another price cut to follow. One large company denied this. Now the gossip mart has brought forth the direct opposite, namely, that prices are to be advanced. Such reports appear to emanate from stock market sources rather than from trade circles.

Food Stocks Advance.

There was a good recovery in the food stocks yesterday. The fear as to the President's recommendations to Congress had been overdrawn and the food stocks thereby depressed. A careful perusal of the address led to the conclusion that there was to be no wholesale slashing of food prices except where there was actual profiteering. Some traders on Friday undoubtedly thought that the Government might commandeer the food production plants. The hint that the real profiteering was in many instances not being done by the producer, but by the retailer, was reassuring to investors in stocks of the food companies. Corn products gained over 4 points for the day.

WHY BONDS?

Because, as is generally conceded, high grade bonds present one of the simplest and yet most profitable forms of investment. They require almost no personal attention; the income is available in convenient form and the security may be marketable should occasion require.

Circular T-72, our current list of offerings, will be sent upon request.

OUR STEEL EXPORTS MOUNTING STEADILY

JAPAN AND CHINA BUY HERE

South America Also a Large Consumer—Demand Falls Off in Great Britain.

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 9.—Iron and steel exports in June totaled 544,530 gross tons, this being the largest amount for any month since December, 1917. Exports last February were less than half. All things considered, it seems probable that the June tonnage represents approximately what is to be expected by way of exports for some time to come, and comparison with the export rate before the war, as well as with the present productive capacity, is therefore of interest. An illuminating comparison can be made only by considering steel products alone, eliminating pig iron, castings, &c.

The steel exports in June amounted to a trifle less than 500,000 gross tons, representing an annual rate of nearly 6,000,000 tons. This is about 16 per cent. of the productive capacity, which may be estimated at 37,000,000 tons, in terms of finished rolled steel, the ingot capacity being about 49,000,000 tons. Production of steel in June was at about 67 per cent. of capacity, so that the steel exports represented about 24 per cent. of the actual production. Before the war the heaviest exports of steel and steel products represented a rate of about 2,400,000 tons a year, that being about 10 per cent. of the existing capacity.

The only important steel export trade that this country can expect is to Canada and to nonproducing countries. Great Britain, Belgium, and France are even more eager to make steel than to consume it. Japan, China, and South America have been the great consumers of the steel industry of the United States lately, and that condition will continue. The possibilities in those quarters are scarcely limited in any respect except by the ability to finance purchases.

Pig iron production in July was at the rate of 28,900,000 tons a year, which would be 66 per cent. of capacity if that could be taken at 44,000,000 tons. There is a question as to what the actual commercial capacity is at this time. According to former methods of reckoning the industry probably could produce more than 44,000,000 tons of pig iron in a twelvemonth, but there is the new condition of very high wages, whereby between 5 and 10 per cent. of the capacity formerly counted may have to be set out of the reckoning on account of the abnormally large quantity of labor the furnaces involved must employ per ton of pig iron produced. The most modern furnaces have a wage cost per ton only a small fraction of that at old-fashioned band-filled furnaces.

Pig Iron Production Increased.

From June to July pig iron production increased between 10 and 11 per cent., but a more remarkable showing is made in the fact that the capacity operative on Aug. 1 was 19 per cent. greater than the capacity operative on July 1. The recent increase in pig iron production has been entirely on the part of the steel interests. The production of pig iron by merchant furnaces decreased 10 per cent. from June to July, according to the detailed statistics gathered by The Iron Age, and it may be estimated that the merchant production in July was only 55 per cent. of capacity. The fact that pig iron is by no means plentiful at the moment is readily accounted for, while the large amount of idle capacity is a guarantee to consumers that prices will advance little, if at all, for some time to come.

There is somewhat less snap in the finished steel market than a week or two ago, but a large volume of business is still being placed, particularly for the finished lines in which the producers are already comfortably sold up. Some of the recent buying is attributed to fears on the part of consumers that steel production may be curtailed by labor troubles, but such fears are probably unfounded.

The Connellsville furnace coke market is a shade easier, some sales of spot furnace coke having been made in the last week at $3.80, the usual asking price for several weeks having been $4. Foundry coke is very firm and in by no means plentiful supply. The divergence between the two grades is attributable to labor conditions, as an extra amount of labor is required to prepare foundry coke. Averages for the spot market for July were $4.06 for furnace and $5.08 for foundry, thus showing a spread of fully $1 a ton. Last March the spread averaged about 70 cents. The furnaces as a whole are showing no anxiety to buy coke for stocking purposes.

There is a continued heavy demand for tubular goods, this being accentuated by the fact that the majority of the mills are out of the market for early deliveries except to old customers. On lap weld sizes the majority, if not all the mills, are sold up practically to the end of the year. Demand for butt weld sizes has been improving steadily, and now is practically up to the capacity. Boiler tube demand is still below capacity, but has continued to show improvement. The chief flaw in the boiler tube demand is the absence of railroad buying.

Rolling billets, as an open-market proposition, continue quiet, there being practically no demand in the general market. Specifications against contracts have continued to increase, and now are moderately heavy. They are not up to the normal of active times, however, chiefly because some important buyers under contract are in the railroad business, and thus are not crowded with orders. There are no sheet bars for the open market originating in the Pittsburgh district.

There is a moderate demand for forging billets, and mills state that they are obtaining the full March 21 price of $51, which maintains the war control differential of $12.50 above rolling billets.

Wire rods are in fair demand, both in domestic and export markets. A sale of 1,000 tons of rods for Canada is reported this week, maker's mill, the regular domestic price, but it is said that in general Canada is being quoted the export price of $57.

British Demand for Steel Lighter.

Some of the Pittsburgh steel interests report lighter export demand for steel products from Great Britain and the Continent, and state that until conditions change for the better the demand from these quarters is likely to be less than it was earlier in the year. What effects will follow the reductions in transatlantic freights by steamship lines, effective on Aug. 1, remains to be seen. Rates to Great Britain were reduced from $16 to $12 on pig iron and from $17 to $12 on billets, rates on steel products generally being reduced about $4 per gross ton.

The rivet makers have advanced prices $4 a ton, making button-head structural rivets $3.90 and cone-head boiler rivets $4. The cost of making rivets is regarded as being very high by reason of high wage rates. The consumption is moderate. Consumption by shipyards has fallen off since the close of the war, although fabricated steel is on the increase. Operations at boiler shops are rather light, but there is a fair volume of activity in tank construction, particularly for the oil trade.

Improvement is noted in tin plate demand, and tonnage outputs are satisfactory. One large mill has just had the experience of starting every mill scheduled on time on Monday morning after a Saturday pay, which would have been impossible a year ago, or even up to the time that wartime prohibition went into effect. Mills are well filled with business, and can see operation ahead at the present rate until the end of September, with probabilities that there will be much buying between now and then, enough to insure at least moderately full operation through the usually dull period. Tin plate prices in the domestic market are well held, and there is no prospect of any decline very soon. The tin plate price of $7 is based on 60-cent tin, and the market is regarded as not unlikely to advance to that level from the present basis of 54 to 55 cents for tin for importation.

Fabricating interests report that while they are working at about 75 per cent. of shop capacity, prospective builders are rather slow in closing contracts, so that the outlook in this line is not altogether as rosy as was being predicted a few weeks ago. The Pennsylvania Bridge Company has taken 800 tons of fabricated steel for machine shop buildings for the Phoenix Iron Works Company at Meadville, Penn. The Jones & Laughlin Steel Company reports 175 tons taken for extensions of the Pittsburgh Valve and Fittings Company at Barberton, Ohio. The McClintic-Marshall Company has taken 400 tons for the White Company at New York, 600 tons for a plate warehouse for the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company, 300 tons for a cold-mill building for the Superior Steel Corporation at Carnegie, Penn., and 900 tons for the Pittsburgh Gauge and Supply Company's warehouse in Pittsburgh.

The edge is off the scrap market. There is hardly a steel mill in this district that would buy scrap today at any price that would be quoted, and very few west. Values, however, cannot be said to have decreased materially, as there is no scrap pressing on the market, and the buying disposition may be restored at any time.

SEES BRITISH EAGER FOR OUR FRIENDSHIP

FAVORS LEAGUE OF NATIONS

Declares Irish Have Been Well Treated—Economic Situation in England Improves.

Alexander Lyle-Samuel, M. P., who is one of the leading authorities on economic conditions in the British House of Commons, talked yesterday on Anglo-American conditions, the Sinn Fein problem in Ireland, and present conditions, economic and otherwise, in England. Mr. Lyle-Samuel is an enthusiastic advocate of the League of Nations, and believes the League to be the all-important factor in the maintenance of the future peace of the world. Furthermore, Mr. Lyle-Samuel is convinced that the commercial future of England demands the continuance of the free trade policies of the empire.

"It is almost impossible," said Mr. Lyle-Samuels, "for the American people to realize the eagerness of the mass of the British people to remain in the most friendly relations with the people of the United States. The two people have never had any real ground for a difference. The Declaration of Independence was not only an American declaration of liberty, but it blazed the trail which led ultimately to the liberty of the British people at home.

"When Britain went into the war in August, 1914, it was to fight for the preservation of democratic institutions throughout the world and to prevent Europe from being flung back into a state of political despotism, a despotism unknown in this country since 1776. Had we not gone in in August, 1914, with all our resources of men and treasure, pledged to fight on until victory, the freedom of the world would have been lost.

"Naturally the British people asked what will America do in this crisis? The difficult thing for the masses of the people in England to understand was anything approaching American neutrality on the issue of a world fight for freedom. We fully realized the difficulties of the American Government and we waited in perfect confidence for that hour when Germany by her own acts should have exposed her perfidy and thus insure the co-operation of the United States with the Allies.

"When that moment did come and America came in, it not only brought an instant sense of relief and a wonderful sense of security, but it undoubtedly saved the allied cause by bringing new life and renewed confidence into the hearts and minds of the strained Allies, who had endured the awful burden for nearly three years.

Looked to Stronger Friendship.

"We knew that not only by her entrance into the war had America saved the allied cause, but we believed that such a bond of friendship would be established between the masses of the people on either side that he should have saved civilization itself, for the world issue at this hour is whether civilization is to be saved or destroyed.

"It is the unanimous feeling of the masses of the British people that only by the continued co-operation of the United States and Great Britain and the self-governing Dominions can peace be really brought to the stricken world.

"What we trust has been accomplished in Paris has been a world settlement upon such sure and well-laid foundations that the world may remain, every part to every other part, however remote, that the pestilence of war may not pass over the world again, at least within the visions of those who are responsible for the present settlement, for it is perfectly clear that unless civilization has found the means to destroy war, the resources of civilization today, if directed in war, will destroy civilization itself. The world is at this moment in real danger of drifting back to barbarism. One thing alone can save civilization today, and that is the new hope which has been born in the hearts and minds of those who are determined to apply honestly toward all peoples the principles of the League of Nations.

"While it would be putting it too high to say that there is no division in the minds of British people in the practicality of the League of Nations, there is a pathetic yearning on the part of the overwhelming mass of the people that their leaders, by means of the League of Nations, will lead them into the promised era of permanent peace. It would be impossible to exaggerate the thrill which has gone through the hearts of the thinking people as they have listened to the lofty appeals of President Wilson in this matter. If a national of another country may express an opinion we earnestly hope that the President will have the overwhelming support of his own fellow-citizens in his determination to the power of his great nation to make this gift to the world."

In answer to a question concerning the situation in Ireland Mr. Lyle-Samuel replied:

The Irish Question.

"There is no doubt that the Irish question does present a cause of irritation which has sometimes seemed to amount almost to alienation between the British and a certain political section of the American people. But from my own observation I believe that to be too surface a view of the case. It may not be unfair to ask some of the Irish agitators, who have sought the hospitality of American shores, to what cause, which is precious in the United States, are they loyal? They are loud and leather-lunged in their denunciation of Great Britain. They enjoy at this moment a larger political representation in Parliament than any other part of the British Isles. They have received from the British exchequer grants amounting to $1,500,000,000 loaned to them on a three per cent. basis to enable them to acquire the land of Ireland. All of the great landlords have been bought out and today Ireland is in a more prosperous condition than she has ever been at any time in history.

"The Irish enjoy every advantage permitted to any citizen of Great Britain and many advantages which are not granted too ther citizens. Their religious institutions are reverently guarded in the fullest exercise of their loyalty to Rome, and they have absolute control of the schools in which their children are brought up and taught to put Rome before any other institution in the world. Their bitterness beggars description, while their hatred has resulted in a degree of political and spiritual impoverishment such as is hardly to be found in any other country in the world. Hate never healed anything, and the atmosphere of hate in which political affairs have been discussed in Ireland is one of the prime causes of the present discontent.

"I do not wish to be understood as signifying that there has been no hatred or bitterness on the part of the loyal Irishmen of the north of Ireland. These men, after all, represent substantially one-fifth of the population of Ireland, and they are intensely loyal to the Union.

"If any we of Great Britain could find a solution of the Irish question which would be satisfactory to all Ireland and would protect the rights of all Irishmen we would all be eager to put it into practice.

"If the League of Nations could adjudicate in Ireland and bring peace and order and good governmetn to Ireland I am confident that it would be the unanimous wish of the people of Great Britain that they compromise any sovereign rights they may have in order to achieve that most to be desired end."

Economic Situation.

Asked concerning the economic situation in Great Britain Mr. Lyle-Samuel replied:

"The economic position of Great Britain has naturally been such as to cause the gravest anxiety. We have spent such sums as it was hardly realized existed in any country prior to 1914. We have an enormous burden of debt. This, however, must not be taken as representing absolute loss. To begin with over tow-thirds, perhaps nearly three-fourths, of our war debt is owed in our own country. Then there are some very tangible assets, as for example, an industrial England which is organized and equipped as never before in our history. Great combinations have been formed and our manufacturing resources are today probably five and perhaps ten times greater than they were before the war.

"Our credits are larger than ever before. The financial resources of our industries would enable them to trade on a scale they would never have dreamed of five years ago. But the great trouble through which we are passing in our industrial life today is that we have to place our industries upon a real economic basis, that is, transfer them from the false economic basis upon which war compelled us to conduct them.

"But there will be no industrial revolution in England. Some of the processes of adjustment may cause bitter local strikes, but the common sense of the mass of the people, which is a British tradition, will save the day.

"Two things are needed in England. First, a reduction in the cost of the necessaries of life, and secondly, the restoration of the liberties of our people which the Government was compelled to deprive them of during the war.

"We are hoping to organize a forty-eight-hour week for all our principal industries. Admitting to the full the difficulties and anxieties of the present hour, I am confident of the happy outcome of all our afflictions."

Mr. Lyle-Samuel closed his interview with a reference to the tariff question.

"I am personally," he said, "a strong free trader. The last thing to be wished is that a tariff war should follow the years of war that have just ended. There are some who think the time has come for England to abandon the free trade policy. I do not share that view, and I shall always speak and vote in the House of Commons against the introduction of a tariff. I should indeed despair of England's future if she started a tariff war with the United States, whether under the name of 'fair trade versus dumping' or of 'imperial preference to consolidate the empire.'"

PRICE DROP MARKS WEEK IN COTTON

Broad Liquidations Bring About a Decline of More Than 425 Points.

Agitation for a sharp reduction in the high cost of living with the attendant uncertainty as to just what position President Wilson would assume in the matter, and with a general unsettlement, the cause for which was the decline in prices on the New York Stock Exchange, brought about an active and declining cotton market in the past week.

While there were substantial recoveries in future contract prices at the end of the week, there was a drop of more than 425 points from the high prices of the preceding week to the low levels last week, which was equivalent to approximately $21 a bale.

The feature of the trading was clearly the broad liquidation which brought about the decline, breaks in some of the individual trading sessions reaching more than 200 points. On Aug. 1 October contracts were 34.95 at the close, December were quoted 35.10, January 35.00, March 35.10, and May 35.05. The low prices on Friday of last week were October 30.60, December 30.80, January and March 30.70, and May 30.75. This shows plainly the selling pressure which predominated throughout the better part of the week.

Southern sellers offered contracts freely when the break was on, and sales by Liverpool served to further unsettle the market. Spot holders hedged by selling near deliveries, and the speculative element was forced to shorten its lines to secure funds for adequate protection of interests in other markets.

After the heavy selling had continued for the better part of three days there was a temporary upturn, which was again followed by further liquidation until the market gave evidence on Friday that speculators had fairly well cleared out their interest. There was further selling on that day, but substantial recoveries were recorded at the close, and the last day of the week brought about a steady upturn, recoveries ranging from 120 to 130 points.

There appears to be a growing appreciation of the fact that credits must be arranged before Germany can become an important purchaser in this market. This is slowly but surely taking the edge away from the natural assumption that Germany would be one of the heaviest buyers here, and while it is still believed that she will need anywhere between 1,000,000 and 2,000,000 bales along with the other Central Powers, to make up for the lack of cotton during the war years, it is also being appreciated that she must make adequate arrangements to pay for what she buys. This is affecting the speculative argument that the price of cotton should go to 45 and 50 cents a pound because of that demand.

Further obstacles in the way of Germany immediately coming into the American market are the shipping situation and exchange market conditions. Under present conditions it has been estimated that the German cotton spinner would not be able to secure the raw product for working for less than $1 or more a pound. The exchange position of other European countries has also been a factor against large purchases here.

Generally the trade realizes that America must furnish the war-torn countries of Europe with raw materials, and that there should be a good foreign demand in the future, but just what measures should be adopted and how conditions should be rearranged to allow for the shipment of such materials abroad is something generally considered some distance away.

That an appreciation of these difficulties has become more general is acknowledged, and it is also apparently the belief that the sharp upward trend in prices was checked by this realization, along with the local disturbances and uncertainties of the last week.

SHOE DEALERS DENY CHARGE

Assert Trade Commission's Assertions Are Unfair.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9.—Charges that shoe retailers are profiteers, as made in a report of the Federal Trade Commission, were denied today in a statement by A. H. Gueting, President of the National Shoe Retailers' Association. The bulk of next Fall's shoes will be sold at from $8 to $12 a pair, instead of higher prices, he said.

The statement further said that it is unfair to hold up one line of merchandise as a "horrible example," when in reality the profit is not more than 6 per cent.

The Merchant's Point of View

SOME weeks ago the prediction was made in these columns that the continuance of the efforts to boost the prices of commodities would lead to official action to check them. This is what is now happening, and the announcement of the steps in contemplation had a more pronounced effect on business in general during the last week than any other circumstance. Needless extravagance on the part of many people, as a reaction to the enforced economy of the war period, gave the opportunity to producers to exact huge profits which were furthermore swollen by the tribute taken by speculators who invaded almost every field. Ingeniously concocted stories of alleged scarcity were used to alarm buyers and to get them to bidding against one another. In these ways, prices to consumers were made to rise to unheard of levels, and even further advances were threatened for the future. Dealers as well as the general public were urged to do their buying quickly or else run the risk of going without. In the report of the Federal Trade Commission especial attention was called to the effect which these efforts produced on the cost of shoes. But a similar state of affairs could be shown with regard to certain foods and the textiles as well. Some time or other, the condition had to cease. An endless rise in prices was an impossibility.

Similar Conditions Abroad. The position of this country in this respect is not unique. Other nations, including the former neutrals as well as belligerents, are having troubles of the kind similar to those here. They are also trying to overcome them in the same way that is suggested here, that is, by official regulation. In some countries maximum prices have already been forced for foods and other necessary commodities and standardization of shoes and fabrics been brought about. Profiteers are being prosecuted criminally in certain countries, Italy and France being conspicuous in this respect. In Great Britain official food control is to be kept up indefinitely and the cost of clothing has received the serious attention of the Board of Trade with a view to State action to prevent profiteering. It is curious to note that in Parliament specific mention was made of the influence of American packers, who also control the supplies of meat from South America and to some extent from Australasia, in preventing a reduction in the price of meats. Meanwhile, a purchasing commission will attend to the buying here of foods for the allied nations, and for Germany as well, in order to prevent the raising of prices by competitive bidding. And one of the possibilities is that of international concerted action, if necessary, to bring about this result. There are sufficient supplies of foodstuffs and raw materials for the things that people wear. Adequate measures for distributing them where they are needed are all that is required, and this may call for combined action by a number of the nations.

Big Figures of Foreign Trade. Completed figures of the country's foreign trade for the fiscal year ended June 30, given out during the last week, bore out the amazing total indicated in previous estimates. The aggregate of over $10,300,000,000 for imports and exports combined makes a new record not only for the United States but for all countries. The excess of exports over imports was more than $4,100,000,000, which is another record. The increase in imports over 1918 was about $150,000,000, and that of exports was about $1,300,000,000. As compared with the normal fiscal year 1914, the imports last year were greater by about $1,100,000,000, and the exports by about $4,000,000,000. It is curious to note the comparisons by grand divisions. These are given in the following table:

IMPORTS.

Europe	$895,603,868	$372,953,593
South America	222,877,075	568,374,904
Asia	286,952,486	830,904,001
Oceania	42,144,398	190,008,129
Africa	19,149,476	81,065,759
Total	$1,893,925,657	$3,005,876,582

EXPORTS.

	1914.	1919.
Europe	$1,486,498,729	$4,634,816,841
South America	124,539,909	400,901,601
Asia	118,425,616	603,924,548
Oceania	83,568,417	208,351,493

These figures show increases in both imports and exports with the sole exception of the imports from Europe. Yet, under normal conditions, the trade with European countries makes up about one-half of all this country's foreign commerce, and this state of affairs is bound to return in course of time. This is a circumstance worth bearing in mind. How much of the added trade to and with other quarters of the world which the war has sent this way can be retained is the problem for the immediate future.

For Protection of Dyemaking. Rather wisely, the dye people have determined not to annex their fortunes to any general tariff revision, knowing this to be impossible of accomplishment within any reasonable period. So the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives has reported a bill specifically for the benefit of the interests based on the use of coal-tar products. In this it is following the suggestion of the Tariff Commission. The bill steers a middle course between the views of the advocates of a prohibitive tariff and of those favoring a licensing system for imports. Added duties are imposed to enable the domestic dyemakers to hold their own against the importation of the many coal-tar crudes, intermediates, and finished products which are now made in quantity here. But recognition is taken of the fact that many colors essential in the textile industries are not now produced in commercial quantities in this country. For these a licensing system is provided with discretion vested in a board containing representatives of the textile, paper, and drug industries, as well as of the domestic dye producers. This board is empowered, by majority vote, to issue licenses for the admission of such products as "may be unobtainable from domestic sources on reasonable terms as to price, quality, and delivery." It is to function for two years only. Presumably within that period the domestic industry will be in a position to hold its own against foreign competition with the aid of the regular duties and with that of the provisions against "dumping" and other unfair practices which are now in such shape as to be effective. The time limit may also act as a spur to the domestic concerns to bestir themselves into adequate development, instead of simply turning out vast quantities of the products most easily made.

Position of Potash Industry. A great advantage the dyemakers have in their purpose to secure protection for their industry, aside from the fact that their plants are needed in wartime to make explosives, is that the users of their products are willing to have duties imposed to help the domestic manufacture of them. This is not the case with regard to another article, of which the Germans also had a monopoly, namely, potash. While the war lasted, those who had to have that chemical in one form or another paid extravagant prices for it. This led to the establishment of plants which could only pay if ten times the usual price could be had. But those who put money into these ventures have been loath to let go and have been trying their best to keep out foreign supplies of potash. They have made an especial point of the capital invested in their venture regardless of the fact that all of it has been written off to profit and loss. The farmers of the country, however, could see no reason why they should be made to pay more for fertilizer simply to benefit a few persons, and they emphasized the fact that higher cost of potash would simply mean higher prices for food, cotton, &c. The Republican Ways and Means Committee favored a high duty on imported potash so as to help the domestic producers. But the War Trade Board, acting on the advice of the President, has lifted the ban from the importation of German potash, which will now be permitted to come in freely on the old basis.

Cotton Prices and Supplies. Such violent changes as occurred during the last week in the quotations of cotton were merely indicia of the unstable conditions attending the present artificial price levels. Estimates of the crop now growing are at the best merely guesses, as so much depends on what is to happen in the growing districts during the next three or four weeks. Much is made of the ravages of the boll weevil, which is said to be active and rather more widely distributed than usual. But, on the other hand, the consumption of cotton continues rather low and the carry-over from the last season is estimated at the large total of 6,800,000 bales. Unless something unforeseen occurs, there is likely to be available a stock of over 17,000,000 bales of American cotton for the year. This does not look encouraging to the Southern enthusiasts who have been predicting 40-cent cotton. They are basing great hopes, however, on their plan to keep a lot in storage, and their ability to market the crop gradually. The warehousing project is expected to be in shape in two or three months with a storage capacity provided for about two and a half million bales. The goods market has been rather quiet. The mill men are getting somewhat cautious and the numberless speculators are doling out their supplies from time to time as they are able to. All are beginning to be rather doubtful if the present high prices can be maintained and none are talking, as they did some time ago, of still higher levels. In knitted goods of all kinds the market remains steady, with prices high and with supplies rather curtailed.

As to Wool and Woolens. London's wool auctions will be resumed tomorrow, and the announcement is made that Americans will be allowed to bid on a limited amount of the offerings for the first time since the war. This information has been received with satisfaction here because there is a demand for certain fine Australian wools. A lot of these varieties, especially adapted to the needs of American mills, was included in the contract with the British authorities which was canceled after the armistice went into effect. This Government had so much wool on hand that it was loath to incumber itself with more, but there are many who believe a mistake was made in not securing the allotment from Australia. During June the domestic mills consumed 55,000,000 pounds of wool, grease equivalent. This is somewhat more than in the month preceding, and indicates that production of fabrics is getting to a normal basis. In the goods market the principal matter of interest was the opening of fancy fabrics for Spring by the American Woolen Company. A very limited quantity of goods was offered, and the supplies were allotted in some kind of pro rata fashion to regular customers. It was assumed by some that the company would offer no more of the goods, but this may be questioned. It was also reported that there would be no opening of staples. The prices are very much higher than those for the previous season. No fear prevails in any quarter that there will not be enough goods available to supply all needs, every indication to the contrary notwithstanding.

WHAT IS URGED ON GARMENT BUYERS

Reasons Given by a Manufacturer as to the Need of Making Early Purchases.

"Never has the ready-to-wear industry of the country been in a more chaotic condition than it is at the present time, and it is without any intention of crying 'wolf' that I advise all buyers of outer garments for women to cover their needs for Fall at the earliest possible moment. Buyers of medium-priced merchandise especially should not delay placing their orders." This assertion was made yesterday by one of the best-posted dress manufacturers in the local trade, a man who has a reputation for the conservative character of his methods of doing business and of his utterances for publication. He continued:

"Buyers have been advised to cover their needs early in the season ever since the birth of the industry, and, to use a slang phrase, most of them have come to regard such advice as 'bull.' In order to dispel any impression that what I have to say is not just talk, I am going to tell the facts as they exist, and particularly as they affect moderate-priced goods. Let the buyer then make up his own mind as to what he ought to do.

"Let us first take the labor phase of the situation. Thirty-five per cent. of the workers employed by the manufacturers of coats, suits, and dresses in this market are men. In 1914 the average male employe earned $40 a week. Today the average wage for men is $85, and the working week is considerably shorter than it was five years ago. In 1914 the average weekly wage got by women employes in this industry was less than $12. Today the average is close to $40. So much for the cost of labor.

"Now let us take up production. This industry is now working on a forty-four-hour week basis. A year ago the working week was forty-nine hours. In itself, the reduction was not so very important from the manufacturing point of view, for if the workers would only stir themselves a little they could—and without undue effort—turn out as much merchandise in forty-four hours as they did last year in forty-nine. But they are not making that effort, and the result is that the manufacturer who is now getting better than 60 to 65 per cent. of his corresponding production for 1918 is in an enviable position. This, to be brief, means that deliveries on all orders will be delayed more or less, and that shipments on many orders lately placed—or not yet written—are practically sure of not being completed at the time the retailers will need his goods the most.

"While the shorter working week, coupled with a deliberate refusal on the part of the employes to speed up even a little, is a prime factor in the reduced production, the high wages paid, strange to say, is even a more important one. Instead of giving our people an incentive to work, they are giving them an incentive to loaf. Men who have recently taken automobile trips through the mountain sections of this State and New England tell me that they were literally amazed at the number of ready-to-wear workers they saw in those places on vacations. When asked how it happened they were not in the shops at the very height of the Fall manufacturing season, the invariable reply was that they had had such a good Spring season that they did not have to work this Fall. This was especially true of the women who replied to the questions asked.

"Other workers, having heavier responsibilities, perhaps, also take advantage of their better earnings to stop work whenever they take a notion. This is particularly apt to happen on hot days, when the call of the surf is strong. The desire to be as comfortable as possible is ingrained in every human being, but when this comfort is sought at the ultimate expense of the men who make employment possible, I believe that the line is being overstepped. The principle of the thing, however, is neither here nor there. The fact remains that it all reduces production. In doing so it increases the cost of dressing for women all over the country, the workers themselves included.

"Frankly, I do not see how women clerks, stenographers, bookkeepers, etc., as well as housewives operating on a limited income, are going to pay the prices that must be got soon for even the so-called moderate-priced garments unless the employes in the industry see the effects of their work—or, rather, lack of it—and change their ways. I am not asking for the return of a longer working week. I am not asking for lower wages for the workers. But I am asking that the workers fill the empty seats in the shops, and that, once in them, they do an honest day's work for the wages they are paid.

"So much for the labor factor in the high cost of finished garments and the slowness of their delivery. Now turn to the fabric side of the question. It is an open secret that the cloth and silk manufacturers are out to get 'theirs.' That they are succeeding is only too true. For a cutter-up to complain means only a worse deal than he is getting at present. It is like getting blood from a stone to get deliveries of a woolen cloth from a mill at the present time. The only way you can get goods quickly is to buy them from a jobber, many of whom are only thinly disguised cutters-up who see a chance of making more and easier money by selling their goods in the piece than in the made-up garment. Tricotines, for instance, that were originally bought at $3.25 a yard, are being 'jobbed' at $5.50.

"There is more than a suspicion afoot that many of the silks ordered early in the season at given prices, and which now are 'unavoidably delayed in delivery,' are actually being delivered to later buyers at substantial advances. I am told, in the case of certain sellers of silks, that the only way the original buyers of the goods have been able to get them is to have some third person order them at a higher price and then divert the shipment to the rightful owner. Of course, a proceeding like that costs money, and it all goes to boost the cost of the finished garments. In the end the public pays.

"The buyers themselves are in a peculiar position. Those who are well posted on general market conditions are being hampered in their operations by merchandise men who either have not been or won't be convinced that the situation is as serious as it is. The allotments of many buyers have not been increased enough over those for Fall, 1918, to let them do the right thing for themselves or the stores. In some cases the attitude of the merchandise men, in a business sense, is suicidal. They are putting checks on the buyers at absolutely the worst possible moment for such a thing, and about Oct. 1 they are going to have a great light dawn on them.

"The buyers themselves, according to reports now current in the trade, are advising each other to hold off—again on medium-priced merchandise—in the belief that by doing so they will 'break the market.' If they think they can do it, all right and good. But my knowledge of the situation tells me that they are practically in the position of a man who fires a revolver at his wife just to see if it is loaded. Somebody is going to be hurt. The merchandise simply will not be here to be bought when these buyers think the time is ripe to turn in their orders. Nor will there be time then to make and deliver it."

British Let in Shoes and Autos.

The British Board of Trade will grant free licenses for the importation of 5,000 automobiles, including trucks over one and one-eighth tons, and also permit the importation of boots and shoes from the United States to the extent of 25 per cent. of the 1913 imports in addition to the 25 per cent. already shipped. The latter concession will extend over a period of three months, beginning Aug. 1.

Food Restrictions Removed.

A public notice issued by the Colonial Secretary has cancelled all regulations in Newfoundland with respect to foods of all kinds. This order, explains the American Consul at St. John's, relates particularly to wheat flour, the importation and sale of which will now be permitted.

BUYING OF MILLINERY.

Reasons Why This Is a Harder Proposition Now Than Usual.

Asserting that millinery buying this season is more of a man's-size job than ever before the bulletin of the Retail Millinery Association of America says in part:

"Today the retailer faces a more difficult buying task than he ever faced during the war. Manufacturers are sold up for from three to six weeks. Labor is restless. Workers are shifting from one establishment to another, and even a six 'weeks' delivery promise is more or less uncertain, because the manufacturer cannot account today for what labor's attitude will be tomorrow.

"In addition to the difficulty of securing definite deliveries, there is the additional problem of higher costs. For instance, one retailer says that, where he bought fifty hats not so very long ago at approximately $450, today similar hats in the same quantity would cost $600. That means a little care in placing the first orders; its means a larger initial expenditure in early buying. That requires better buying and better financing. One jobber recently expressed the opinion that the next season would be the biggest jobbing season the trade has ever known. He based his contention on the above statement of fact, and there seems to be a deal of truth in what he says.

"If the retailers were not faced with the same labor problems that confront the manufacturer, then surely the conditions would make for a greater development of the millinery workroom in retail establishments. But even the retailer finds himself uncertain as to workroom conditions and, since the workroom has always been a difficult problem to handle profitably, he is naturally reluctant to assume even more onerous burdens."

RAW SILK MARKETS.

Japanese and Canton Prices Lower, While Others Have Risen.

The Japanese raw silk market continued quiet during the week just closed, and prices, which had advanced a little at the beginning of the week in the expectation of better business, sagged off again near the end. Yokohama is now quoting 2,240 for Shinshiu No. 1. The visible stock there, according to cables received by A. P. Villa & Brothers, Inc., of this city, is estimated at 16,000 bales.

Canton is not quite as firm as a week ago, and, while prices have not changed, reelers undoubtedly will have to make slight concessions in consideration of the easing off of Japanese silks. At Sanghai the tendency is still upward for all grades of steam filatures and tsatlees. Tussahs are being held at very high prices, with no buyers.

The Italian market has advanced another 5 lire at Milan, on account of large buying by American importers, who are taking advantage of the present low rate of exchange and are placing large orders. Extra classical for single weaving is now quoted at 190 lire, against 185 lire a week ago.

In the local market, business is somewhat hampered by the strikes in Pennsylvania and New Jersey silk centres, and manufacturers have almost entirely withdrawn. Prospects point to a renewal of buying as soon as the situation shows improvement.

Invents a Conducting Aluminium.

Dr. Georges Giulina, an expert in the aluminium trade, has invented a conducting aluminium whereby ordinary metal of the sort is put through a special patented process by which it acquires the same mechanical qualities and capacities as bronze, copper, and brass, without changing its specific weight. The price, according to Consul Philip Holland at Basel, Switzerland, can be kept within very low limits, so that it may compete favorably with copper and brass. Besides the electrical trade, the inventor anticipates a good market among builders of motor cars, airplanes, ships, and railway carriages. Those to whom the invention is known are said to be impressed with its possibilities.

Sugar from the Philippines.

Sugar will soon become the leading export of the Philippines, in the opinion of the Director of Agriculture there, owing to the interest being taken in the industry by both domestic and foreign capital. There are now under construction sugar centrals in Calamba, Negros, Pampanga, and other sugar provinces, which, when completed, will double the present production of this commodity. While it may be years before the production of the Philippines will equal that of Cuba, it is hoped that with the completion of the increased facilities now under way the islands will soon produce one-fourth the amount of Cuba's yield, which is now calculated to be about 4,000,000 tons annually.

Can Trade in Egyptian Futures.

Future trading in Egyptian cotton has been resumed on the Alexandria, Egypt, exchange, according to Consul Arthur Garrels, who is stationed in that city. The control and purchase of Egyptian cotton by a special commission ceased on July 31. The market's closing price on Aug. 1 was $62.20, for November, per cantar of ninety-nine pounds, which is $20 higher than the purchase price of the commission for spot.

London to Remain Fur Centre.

The London Fur Trade Association has been formed for the purpose of insuring the leadership of that city as the centre of the raw fur industry. Members of the trade are said to have in view the efforts which will be made by the Germans to revive the important Leipsig sales, and joint action is probable, according to the British press, between British, French, and Italian furriers to prevent this.

Italy Fixes 1920 Grain Prices.

A royal decree issued recently fixed the price of home-grown grain in Italy for 1920 at 70 to 80 lire per quintal of 220.46 pounds, with a supplementary price of 12 to 13 lire for grain of the provinces that were invaded, of the islands, and of certain zones in the provinces of Rome and Grosseto. The figures are from P. A. Day, Counselor of the American Embassy at Rome.

Philippine Tobacco Suffered.

Drouth has lowered the Philippine tobacco crop for 1919 to from 40 to 50 per cent. below last year's production. Although this is expected to cause a considerable rise in price, it is thought that the cigar and cigarette manufacturers who supply the American trade will bid sharply to obtain their supply.

Japanese Buy Philippine Island.

One of the largest land transactions ever consummated in the Philippines was the recent purchase, by Japanese interests, of the entire island of Calambayungan, which is a part of the Province of Camarines. The price paid is reported to have been $500,000.

Canada Hide and Leather Embargo.

Owing to the high prices prevailing in the domestic markets the Canadian Government has placed an export embargo on hides, skins and leathers of all kinds. Notice to this effect was transmitted by the Canadian War Mission at Washington.

Italy Renews Trade with Germany.

A royal decree has authorised, according to a cablegram from the American Consul at Genoa, the renewal of import and export transit trade between Italy and the German republic.

BUSINESS NOTES.

A fee of 5 halkwan taels, or its equivalent, $7.50 Mexican, is to be charged for each trademark or patent filed for provisional registration at the branch office of the Trade Marks Bureau at Shanghai, China.

Archer, Ritchie & Co. of London, England, through their agents, Smith, Angrove & Co., Inc., of 347 Fifth Avenue, are now booking orders for serges, fancy tweeds, &c., for men's and women's wear for January delivery.

SALVAGING WAR MATERIAL.

Uses Which the British Have Found for Metal and Engines.

The Munitions Inventions Department of the British Government, near Esher, England, is stated to be using the most expert inventive genius and up-to-date business methods with a view to finding commercial uses for the vast quantities of waste war material which the country has in stock. In conjunction with the Committee on the Utilization of Surplus War Material, according to Trade Commissioner H. G. Brock at London, the department is discovering many methods of working up odds and ends usually destroyed as being valueless.

In the construction of special crane piles of wood and wire (piles having the strength of steel with only one-third its weight) for airplanes and airships, large quantities of wood sawdust accumulate. It has been found that this sawdust, on being mixed with glue and certain other substances and compressed, can be planed and worked in the same way as wood; by varying the pressure its solidity can be altered to suit the purposes for which it is required. Women's shoe heels, ear trumpets for airplane spotting machines, and many other articles can be fashioned from this sawdust material.

Shells of various caliber have been proved, by experimentation, to have considerable commercial possibilities. The steel of which they are made is in many cases capable of being rendered glass hard, and milling cutters have been produced which are reported to have stood the most exacting tests. Shells being already hollowed out, there is a great saving in labor and material by using them instead of solid steel for couplings and other articles, when the dimensions are suitable. A special lathe extension, constructed from spare parts, enables waste 18-pounder cartridge cases to be cut into strip brass; and containers from sharpnel shells can be used, with a slight alteration, as lamps.

The most interesting and important experiments from a commercial point of view are said to be those in connection with the utilization of airplane engines for ordinary commercial purposes. By making an alteration in the carburetor it is possible to run the engines on coal gas, and with couplings made from shells they have been connected to dynamos with very good results. While second-hand airplane engines have a limited market, it is believed that as stationary power units they will prove a useful innovation. On one such machine an air bomb has been fitted as an expansion chamber and silencer; on another, a similar article is in use as a compressed-air chamber; a tank, with the unnecessary part cut away, and a bogey fitted at each end, has been made into a valuable workshop locomotive.

DRESS INDUSTRIES' DATA.

They Are to be Collected and Compiled for Use of Buyers.

Questionnaires prepared by the statistical department of the Associated Dress Industries of America will be sent tomorrow to the various active and associate members of that organisation with a view to obtaining first-hand information on conditions in the different branches of the dress manufacturing industry. This information will offer to all concerned, when it is collected and compiled, more data on the industry in question than have ever before been available from a single source.

"Time and time again," says a statement announcing the sending out of the questionnaires, "buyers coming to this city from all parts of the country are at a loss to know where they can procure merchandise of various grades, and made up of various fabrics. This information will hereafter be available for them at the headquarters of the association at the Holland House. The data to be got there will include information concerning every city in the country where dresses are made."

Leaf Tobacco Holdings Drop.

Leaf tobacco stocks in this country shrunk somewhat from April 1 to July 1 this year. A preliminary report of the Federal Bureau of Census gives the quantity of leaf held by manufacturers and dealers in the United States on July 1 as 1,400,963,823 pounds, compared with 1,627,233,876 pounds on April 1 and 1,386,049,368 pounds on July 1, 1918. The amount on hand on July 1 this year included 940,836,910 pounds for which marked weight was reported and 460,126,913 pounds for which the actual weight was reported. Allowance should be made for shrinkage on the amount reported as "marked weight" in order to determine the actual weight. In the July total was unstemmed tobacco to the extent of 1,235,062,195 pounds and 165,901,628 pounds of stemmed leaf.

Trademark Piracy in Mexico.

According to information received from Trade Commissioner Edward F. Feely at Mexico City, there has occurred considerable unauthorised registration of foreign trademarks, and American manufacturers are warned of the importance of registering their trademarks in Mexico. Applications for registration must be accompanied by a power of attorney, a statement as to name, location, and kind of factory, the name and address of the applicant, articles to be marked, and a description of the marks, as well as twelve copies and electrotype.

BUSINESS RECORDS.

In Town.

ABRAHAM ALBERT SALSBERG of 65 Fort Washington Avenue, formerly a manufacturer of powder at Uyumi, Bolivia, has filed a petition in bankruptcy here with liabilities of $85,122 and assets of $15,627, consisting of stock at Uyumi and raw materials at Ouro, Bolivia, $5,627; machinery, $5,000, and real estate, $5,000, land at Rio Marques, Bolivia. The debts were contracted mostly in New York, Paris, England and Chile. Among the creditors are Stow & Trowbridge Company, New York, $26,342; William R. Grace & Co., $5,155; Charles Naschevits, Jr., Birmingham, $17,645; John Rickerd, Cornwall, England, $11,804; William Balfour & Co., Autofagusta, Chile, $9,480, and Regal Shoe Company, Whitman, Mass., $2,150.

WILFRED P. ELLISON, builder, of 9 West 34th Street.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against him by the National Surety Company, creditor for $822, on a judgment obtained June 7, 1917, on a bond given to discharge a mechanics' lien. It was alleged that he made preferential transfers to various creditors, among whom are the Ellison Construction Company, $300, and Peter Smith, $500.

JOSE BAGAT JORNET, exporter of suits at Rens, Spain.—Judge A. N. Hand has dismissed the petition in bankruptcy filed on March 4.

JUDGMENTS.

In New York County.

HOW TO GET GREEK TRADE.

Samples, and Not Catalogues, Said to be What Are Needed.

Samples, and not merely catalogues, are required to sell American merchandise in Greece, according to Trade Commissioner E. G. Mears, who is stationed at Athens. After explaining to the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce why the Greek merchant is loath to trade without seeing the goods, Mr. Mears writes:

"In order to promote the sale of American goods other than staples there is perhaps no greater need at present than for an organization equipped to handle and display American products and to deal directly with the foreign buyers. In this way the long delays incident to securing catalogues, samples, and quotations would be avoided, and there would be an opportunity to promote sales in a direct and definite manner.

"It must be remembered that except for a few lines American goods are practically unknown. The merchants are willing to meet the manufacturers half way, and the trade is open to them, but the importers demand, naturally, that they have more information concerning the adaptability of the products than can be gained from pictures and price quotations."

Mr. Mears tells of a number of formal expositions that are to be held in the Near East by British and French manufacturers. An exhibition of British products will open in Athens next month, and will continue for some time. Mr. Mears expresses doubt as to the trade-pulling powers of shows of this kind when compared with more direct sales methods, but says, however, that they are better than nothing at all.

FOR MAKERS OF CORSETS.

Meeting to Take Up Matter of the Supply of Raw Materials.

Owing to the stringency in materials for corset manufacture, great interest is expressed in the discussion upon the present problems of the market, which will be held at the Corset Evening in the Bush Terminal Sales Building on Wednesday at 8:30 P. M. Some of the manufacturers are covered for materials only until November, and others until January, while it is known that many manufacturers may find themselves unable to buy materials until January, 1920.

It is stated that it is not improbable that some of the small corset manufacturers will have to close down, or, at least, will be placed in a difficult position unless something is done to relieve the situation. The fact that a number of manufacturing experts who are able to speak authoritatively on the present conditions have signified their intention of being present at the meeting, will give the trade the unusual opportunity of listening to an open discussion. The trade has been invited to attend.

BUYING AMERICAN SHOES.

Australia and Italy Two of the Countries Wanting Them.

Australian buyers who are in the market here buying American shoes desire no change made in the styles that prevail in this country, according to Arthur I. Benedict, Manager of the Shoe Department of the Bush Terminal Sales Building, who described a few of the features of the export trade in shoes yesterday. The Australians, it seems, are making the British lasts themselves, and when American shoes are bought American styles are wanted. One of the largest stores in Melbourne, which also has a branch at Sydney, has been placing big orders recently.

Mr. Benedict mentioned that one New York store is sending a man to Italy to sell shoes. These, he said, will comprise men's heavy working shoes and also women's shoes of medium weight and grade. Another department store has entered into negotiations for 850,000 pairs of men's, women's and children's shoes.

Open London Wool Auctions.

The Department of Commerce has received from Consul General W. Stanley Hollis, London, a cable dispatch describing the opening of the wool sales in that city to buyers of other countries. The next series, it says, is fixed for a period running from tomorrow to Aug. 22. The approximate quantities include 41,000 bales of Australian and 29,000 bales of New Zealand wool. The Ministry of Munitions, Wool Section, has announced that this series is open to buyers from neutral countries, the United States, and Japan, although the amounts to be bought will be limited. The Board of Trade states that the British Government holds 900,000 bales of Australian and New Zealand wool in Great Britain and has 158,000 bales more in transit. About 1,220,000 bales remain in those countries.

Forecast of Greek Currant Crop.

A recent cablegram gives the forecast of the Greek current crop as 130,000 tons. There are reported to be 5,000 tons of old stocks in sight.

FOR THE "BLOUSE WEEK."

General Interest in the Matter Being Shown by Retailers.

Beginning this week manufacturers of women's waists in this city will distribute to retailers in all parts of the country circular matter dealing with the National Blouse Week that is to be held from Nov. 10 to 15, inclusive. About 50,000 retailers will receive bulletins, cards, and folders telling them all about the movement and enlisting their cooperation in it. The project, which is sponsored by the United Waist League of America, has for its main object the demonstration of the superiority of American-made blouses.

All of the printed matter to be sent out has been prepared by the league and, according to a statement issued yesterday by Executive Director M. Mosessohn, the movement is already an assured success. Letters have been received from retailers who congratulate the league on starting the movement and giving assurances of their desire to bring home to the consumer the purpose behind it. The week will be widely advertised by the retailers to their patrons, and will be backed up by special offerings and unusual window displays. The manufacturers are making a number of preparations for introducing new merchandise, and are making every effort to produce the best manufactured waists ever put on display in this country.

Suspend Coffee Exports.

Peru has suspended the exportation of coffee until the price in that country is sufficiently reduced, according to Consul General Handley at Callao. The step was taken as a method of holding down living costs. When coffee prices come down sufficiently and exports are again permitted, a tax of $1.46 a quintal, or 101 pounds, will be levied on outgoing shipments.

THERE'S A NEW WAY; TRY PSYCHOLOGY

Columbia Authorities Point Out the Advantages of a New Study.

FIELDS IN WHICH IT APPLIES

Women Especially Adaptable to the Recently Devised Method of Fitting the Work to the Worker.

Women today are playing an ever-increasing number of parts in the theatre of general endeavor, but they have a new special field—psychology. Dr. Albert T. Poffenberger of the department of psychology at Columbia University says so.

According to Dr. Poffenberger, psychology offers great opportunities to women, and they are already doing today the bulk of the examining work in this field. "There is a constant call for women who can give the psychological tests in institutions of all sorts; women examiners are required for the Children's Courts and for the Probation Courts," says Dr. Poffenberger.

Apparently there is no lack of places for trained psychologists in the industrial and commercial fields at present, and new opportunities are constantly opening up. Many fields of social service call for women psychologists, and as the department stores and other business concerns employing large numbers of woman are rapidly adopting the system of psychologic tests women experts will be more and more in demand.

The growth of interest in applied psychology itself has been extraordinarily rapid. Industrial concerns are profiting by the experience of the Government with psychological tests during the war. These tests had been worked out in the laboratories of the country's colleges and universities, but the Government's recognition served to bring widespread attention to their worth. Thus since last June psychological tests as an alternative method of admission to Columbia College have been applied. These tests have been prepared under the leadership of Professor Edward L. Thorndyke of the department of education, Teachers College. Other universities, notably Pennsylvania and Illinois, have since adopted them; in fact, it is said that educational methods today are largely psychological methods, based on proved psychologic principles.

Dr. Poffenberger is authority for the statement that psychology is now the basic course for teachers in the school of education at Teachers College. A psychological laboratory and workshop are maintained for working out vocational and educational tests as applied to the school child, and students are engaged in determining the means of ascertaining vocational aptitudes of children of various ages.

In short, according to the Columbia authorities, psychology has already passed from the experimental to the proved and practical stage. Psychology students are going direct from university laboratories to the big industrial concerns, financial institutions, commercial houses, railroads, advertising agencies, law courts, reformatories, and institutions for the insane and defective. The progressive employer now wishes his men classified according to their ability to advance. The psychologist so classifies them. He—or she—is also of value here in mapping out the scheme of working hours most favorable to particular groups of men as well as different types of work to be done. Fatigue-eliminating devices, for lighting and ventilation, for doing away with noise, are worked upon, in conference with these psychology experts, to obtain a maximum of production with a minimum of effort.

About eight years ago Professor Harry L. Hollingworth of Columbia established a course in the psychology of advertising which has since proved successful. This course last year was attended by about 150 students, mostly business men and women, interested in advertising or expecting definitely to take it up as a profession. The course is well known among advertising men and the department is constantly receiving requests to try out trade names, to write or criticise advertising copy, to test out containers and labels for products to be put on the market.

This year Professor Hollingworth is introducing a course in industrial psychology, which will aim to fit men directly for work in the great industrial concerns of the country. It is said that this is probably the widest and best-paying field for psychological experts at the present time.

"The expert, entering a business concern," said Dr. Poffenberger recently, "is prepared to give trade tests and to determine for what type of work a man is best fitted; such tests mean a tremendous saving for the employer, eliminating the unfit before the employer has borne the expense of training—a very large item in the huge business organizations of today."

Responding to the demand from social workers for assistance in meeting their special problems, Professor Robert Sessions Woodworth of Columbia established three years ago a course in social psychology. Applied psychology covers many fields, among them vocational guidance, selection of employes, industrial management, medicine, criminology, eugenics, education, and the diagnosis and treatment of mental abnormality. Columbia also now offers a large number of courses in abnormal psychology, a field offering many opportunities. "Every institution for the insane should have its psychological laboratory and institutions, for defectives require psychologists capable of grading the inmates according to the degree of mental deficiency, upon which treatment should be based," said Dr. Poffenberger.

Courses in psychology and personnel management will also form part of Columbia's home study curriculum, which begins in September.

FLOWER SHOW POSTER CALL

Following the close of the war the big International Flower Show is to be resumed, and the first announcement comes in an offer of $100 in gold as a prize for the best design for a poster for the show. This will be held at the Grand Central Palace, as heretofore, from March 15 to 22 inclusive, 1920. The artist winning the contest will be allowed to sign the poster, and will receive wide publicity. A committee will be appointed to judge the poster designs submitted.

All drawings should be sent to John Young, Secretary of the show, at 1,170 Broadway, before Jan. 1, 1920, on which day the competition closes.

The Annual Clearaway of GOOD CLOTHES for MEN

—Nine Hundred and Thirty Suits Are Being Sacrificed —Sacrificed at Prices Much Lower Than They Were —Sacrificed at Prices Way Way Less Than They Will Be

Not reluctantly but reverently did our clothing chief bring us his copy for this ad. For he was in truth putting all selfish motives behind him—placing his offering on the sacrificial altar of service.

To say that these suits are reduced is to tell only a fraction of the tale. How much they are reduced you must judge for yourself when you see them. What we do say is that they are reduced much more than they need have been to clear them quickly.

If we were to hold these suits their value would increase by leaps and bounds. We know that we will not be able to purchase them next season at anywhere near these prices. But we always have had a clearaway in August—and our patrons must not be disappointed. So——

Every Suit in Stock—with the Exception of the New Autumn and Winter Suits—Must Be Sacrificed.

Important—Remember that this is a Clearaway and that the size range is therefore incomplete. If you cannot find your size in one model you will find it in another—just as smart, just as well made and just as good a value. But, of course, the early comers will have the wider choice.

Women Have Heeded the Call to Buy Blankets in This Great August Sale

When, in this same space, on Sunday last, we told women —that prices on all merchandise made of wool or cotton are advancing, not rationally but frantically —that in some instances the increase has been 100% in less than a year —that prices in this Sale are lower than they will be next Autumn
—that in many cases they are lower than todays wholesale cost to replace we expected women to have confidence in our statements and to act accordingly. And we were not disappointed. Women believed, and women bought—to the tune of thousands of dollars. So much so, that we better than doubled the biggest days blanket business this House—a house of great achievements—has ever seen.

HOMESTEADS FOR VETERANS

In a report upon the National Soldiers' Settlement act, the title of the bill introduced by Representative MONDELL to establish returning soldiers and sailors upon the land, Chairman SINNOTT of the Committee on Public Lands says that "there is one thing on which all are "agreed, something should be done for "the soldier." It is a noteworthy circumstance that a Kentucky soldier, KING SWOPE, was recently elected to Congress in the Eighth District because he advocated six months' pay for the soldier and sailor who served in the war. The district had never before, it is said, gone Republican. The disquieting thing about this overturn is that the veteran SWOPE would never have been elected if he had not demanded a draft on the public Treasury of six months' pay for 4,800,000 soldiers and sailors. A distinction could not, or would not, be made between the American who was lucky enough to serve with the colors in France and the American who was undergoing training at home; and the presumption is that every soldier and sailor —that is to say, all of the rank and file, officers and privates and marines and seamen—would receive for six months the same pay they drew while the war lasted. An enormous sum would be taken from the Treasury, and little good the soldier would derive from an award the use of which would be fleeting.

Now, it is obvious that such legislation by Congress would be the signal for one long-drawn-out raid upon the Treasury, lasting until and after the surviving veterans of the host of 4,800,000 had passed from the scene. The pension list of the civil war would doubtless be exceeded by billions of dollars. It was to avert such a burden from the back of the taxpayer that Congress opened to the American soldier serving in the great war the opportunity of insuring himself at a very moderate cost. Of that opportunity he can still avail himself; and yet there are all kinds of proposals to do something additional for the soldier, in many cases without much regard for his welfare permanently. When States make provision for their own soldiers, as Massachusetts has done, by providing a bonus of $100 for each of its veterans, ($20,000,000 for a total of 200,000,) it is an affair of the people of that State; but when it comes to Federal aid it is an affair of the whole people, and public sentiment will require that something worth while be done for the soldiers and sailors.

One very objectionable scheme is a system of loans to them for the purpose of buying homes anywhere on the installment plan, to cost the nation a minimum of $16,000,000,000 and a maximum of $40,000,000,000. It has been well said that this "would result in the wildest "orgy of land speculation the world has "ever witnessed."

Many States will be disposed to make gifts of money to their soldiers, but if the nation—that is to say, Congress—is to do something for their benefit, it should be on a plan that will not only make them independent of further aid during their lives, but increase the prosperity of the whole country, and that is the purpose of the utilitarian Mondell bill, which is thoroughly practicable. Briefly, it designs to place the soldier on land reclaimed by his own efforts, for which he is to receive liberal compensation; he will pay for the land on easy terms during a period of years. He is also to have credit for all the tools, machinery, and stock he needs to develop his farm and make it profitable. It is Secretary LANE'S plan, thought out wisely to the last detail. He has consulted men in all walks of life and occupations, engineers, agriculturists, stockmen, sociologists, bankers, and business men, as well as the soldiers themselves, Governors, and members of Congress.

The American Legion, which represents 4,800,000 soldiers and sailors, any of whom may acquire homesteads and the means to maintain them, is a unit for Secrtary LANE'S proposals as embodied in the Mondell bill. It provides an appropriation of $500,000,000, but not a dollar of the sum is to be expended without the supervision of Congress. The Secretary of the Treasury will be the general manager and director of operations. The Committee on Appropriations may be likened to a Board of Directors, and all the members of Congress to stockholders. Governors and commissions in the various States are to co-operate. Thus there need be no blundering in the execution. It is provided by Section 9 of the bill that States supplying 25 per cent. of the capital required by settlement within their borders may assume the entire administration of the work, except that the Reclamation Service will prepare the land for their soldiers, giving them employment meanwhile at current wages, so that they can save the moderate sum which they are to put into the homesteads themselves. Nearly 90,000 soldiers have already made formal application for land under the terms of the Mondell bill, and this number will suraly be increased as the plan comes to be generally understood. The aim is to establish on the land every soldier and sailor who feels the call to it and elects to become a farmer or stockman.

It must always be borne in mind that every soldier and sailor may take out or continue the insurance offered by the Government, and clearly enough the majority of veterans will go back to their old occupations by choice and will need no assistance from State or nation, or have any desire to solicit or accept it. There will remain, nevertheless, large numbers of veterans who must have aid to become independent. The Mondell bill, the National Soldier Settlement act, affords the model method, and it is evident that the crops and live stock raised by the homesteaders would add measurably to the wealth of the country and reduce the cost of living. States may do what they please to help or reward their soldiers and sailors, but the nation cannot do better for them than to establish them on the land and give them an opportunity to become self-supporting and independent.

FRIENDS OF THE PEOPLE.

When the members of the fallen Hungarian Communist Government scurried toward the comparative safety of foreign parts, none was more speedy in his departure than TIBOR SZAMUELY, who seems to have done most of the rough work for the organization. He reached the border, but before he could cross it he had the bad luck to meet a man whose brother he had executed. That was the end of SZAMUELY; but before he breathed his last the Communist had time to fling a phrase to history—"I was only the enemy of the enemies of the proletariat."

This remark deserves to live, for it explains a good deal of recent history; indeed, about the only other final word that deserves to be set beside it is NERO'S "Qualis artifex pereo." Times change and ideals with them; a mere artist is nothing in these days by comparison with an enemy of the enemies of the proletariat; but the spirit is the same. Indeed, this SZAMUELY was a person after NERO'S own heart. His corpse was debarred from the cemetery on the ground that he had killed not less than forty men; and when this last friend of the people perished 140,000 crowns and much valuable property were found on his person. For a time, being the enemy of the enemies of the proletariat was a gainful occupation.

SZAMUELY was not so fortunate as BELA KUN. KUN, more canny, not only got away with his life, but he almost got away with 5,000,000 crowns which eventually were discovered in the baggage of himself and his party. When the Communists took charge in Budapest four months ago the Treasury contained $14,000,000 in gold securities and $6,000,000 in gold coin. When the Communists were driven out there was no money left. This alone would explain the eagerness of a good many of our revolutionists; expropriating the expropriators may bring no lasting profit to the proletariat, but quite a great deal to those of its friends who are prudent enough to start bank accounts beyond the frontier.

But the credit is fully as important as the cash; and SZAMUELY was determined that history should give him the credit. The world has seen many Szamuelys in power in the last year or two—a grotesque type, which apparently has long been familiar in Russia, and which can be studied with leisure and safety in the novels of ARTZIBASHEFF. In literature it is sometimes pathetic and sometimes amusing; in politics, however, it becomes inconvenient. SZAMUELY was what NERO might have been if he had not been born in a palace.

And his creed deserves a little attention, as well as his expression of it. America is familiar with the professional "friend of the people," but friendship and the idea of the people are both out of fashion. To your revolutionist there is no people, only classes; and friendship for anybody is hopelessly mid-Victorian, contemptible in contrast with a healthy hatred for everybody who stands in your way. Government by the Szamuelys could not unfairly be called a kakistocracy, the rule of those whose only qualifications are their failure in a competitive world and the resultant bitterness. After studying them we come back with a certain relief to our professional friends of the people, who are at least amusing in a time when amusement is badly needed.

A MIDDLE-CLASS BOLSHEVIK.

At the first session of the International Socialist Conference in Lucerne Mr. ARTHUR HENDERSON, the eminent middle-class semi-Bolshevist head of the British Labor Party, cheerfully said that before Winter there will be "a ter- "rible spasm of rage and despair among "the peoples of Europe, in which the "final remains of civilization will be "annihilated."

No doubt Mr. HENDERSON has looked upon the world with jaundiced eyes since the voters in his district enthusiastically refused to re-elect him to the House of Commons. The spasm of rage and despair is in his own bourgeois-Bolshevist breast as it is in that of his fellow-mischiefmaker, likewise at Lucerne, Mr. RAMSAY MACDONALD, likewise cashiered by his constituents last December.

Since Mr. HENDERSON'S dearly beloved brethren in Russia have been doing their worst to annihilate civilization there, and hope to annihilate it in all other "capitalist" countries, a universal terrible spasm of rage and despair must be exactly what he wants. It is the necessary corollary of his teachings put into practice. Those Liverpool rioters and looters, that strike of the police, inviting disorder, plunder, arson, summoning from their obscene dens the criminals of Liverpool, exactly as they appeared in Russia to perform good works according to the gospel of his friends, LENIN and TROTZKY, were a sufficient lesson to the British people, to that sound and controlling body of real laborers, who will never consent to be led to the devil by these amateur nihilists.

PROFIT AND PROSPERITY.

Profiteering is as much worth discussing as wages in getting at the root of present conditions of unrest; not the sort of profiteering which is a crime whenever practiced, or by whomever, but the legitimate profiteering which labor condones when it asks for its share of what it produces. If the profits are excessive, or extorted, whether by labor or capital, there is only one side to the question. That sort of capitalism is taboo, just as some sorts of wage increases are defensible only with difficulty. But the capitalist system is under attack, and socialistic notions are so strenuously advanced that there is danger of forgetting what capital does for society. Capitalism is represented, broadly speaking, in horsepower, for no one supplies mechanical energy without also supplying the means of using it. Nor is it possible to use horsepower without making it necessary to employ human overlookers. As the products go into unlimited consumption labor benefits by access to the cheapened product, in addition to the money wage. This groundwork affords a basis for discussion whether it is truer humanity to raise wages and shorten hours or to enlarge production even though that enlarges profits.

Labor does not benefit itself alone by bettering its working conditions. In the aggregate there is a benefit to the community, and that is desirable and commendable within limits which, when overpassed, may be described as labor profiteering. But labor seeks the benefit of labor as labor. Capitalists' profits are proportioned to production for consumption. No factory produces goods for the personal use of the proprietors or for storage. If the products are not distributed there are no profits, and to distribution labor makes no such contribution as to production. It is true that there could be no production without labor, but there could be no production without materials, fuel, taxes, interest on the cost of the machinery, rent of the factory, repairs, depreciation, many other items of "overhead," and finally dividends if earned, all other items of cost coming before them. The muscle power is indispensable, but muscle power is used by the individual for personal wages, which are a first charge on industry like a mortgage. The items which are provided by capital, at its risk of profit or loss, are not less necessary to the joint product, and there can be nothing for profit unless the product goes into general consumption. In proportion that production is checked by increased costs due to concessions of labor's demands the community suffers.

It is otherwise with profits. They are not earned unless the community consumes what labor and capital have provided together. Therefore, although it is true that the community welfare is increased when labor prospers, it also is true that the benefit of the class may be pushed so far as to prejudice the community by the increase of costs and decrease of production. Both labor and capital are essential, but capital cannot earn profits unless it shall have benefited the community.

There are in the world, according to British authorities, 75,000,000 horsepower devoted to industrial uses, apart from railways and shipping. Human and brute muscle could not supply that energy. That is to say, labor does not produce all, and could not produce what the world needs without capital, and capital is as worthy of its earnings as labor, if for no better reason than that nothing can be had without paying its cost. If more capital supplied more horsepower, as is possible without such limit as there is to increase of muscle power, there would be more employment and production of goods to be consumed. The farmer is complaining that his workday is not limited like the shorter and shortening day of organized labor. But Mr. FORD says that crops can be raised in twenty days' work per year, with machinery. What is true of foods is true of goods. Labor would make the world pay more for the benefit of labor. Capital would provide more of everything, with less muscle labor, if allowed its profits. Profits are as necessary to prosperity as fair wages. Excess wages, labor profiteering, would reduce production and the consequent benefit to the community more than excess profits of capital, and profits are proportioned to both production and consumption.

A word in behalf of capitalism is not superfluous, judging from the incidents of the many strikes now happening. Capital is doing its best to serve the community, while some of the strikers are doing their worst to serve their class. Labor does not even preserve its own discipline, it flouts the advice of its own leaders. Many of the acts of labor approach anarchy, and contain threats against our institutions, which could not be overthrown without injuring labor with others. There is no possible benefit to the community in disorder and obstruction of steam or trolley transportation. The merits of strikes are not to be considered under such conditions as we are experiencing in common with nations across the ocean. Marxian socialistic theory has been shattered in fact, but the theory of helping the poor by harming the best friends of the poor has as many lives as a myth.

EDITOR NAPOLEON.

When General BUTLER was amusing himself in 1884 with a somewhat attenuated candidacy for President, he emitted the profound theory that there should be at Washington a daily newspaper published by the Government. Of late Mr. BRYAN, bettering the wisdom of his predecessor, is said to have advocated Government-censored and Government-owned newspapers. One wonders if the amiable gentleman from Nebraska has ever heard of the workings of Government interference, inspiration, censorship, and control in the case of the German press; if he has ever read of German suppression of the honest Belgian press and the substitution of doctored German news, lying communiqués, and perverse comment. Has the real classical example of the Government press in Russia never come to his notice? The Bolsheviki strangled all the opposition papers or turned them into thick-and-thin champions of Bolshevism. That is the extreme, but the one honest and straightforward, form of a Government press. It is much less dangerous, much less subtly corrupting than a Government press which tries to lead the public by the nose, which censors, improves, suppresses news, and tries to mislead public opinion in various and devious ways.

BISMARCK was the archbedeviler. Besides the official press bureau at the Foreign Office, he had an elaborate press bureau conducted by such clever men as BUSCH and Professor AEGIDI. Besides its "semi-official" matter in the Norddeutsche Zeitung, and sometimes in the Kölnische Zeitung and the Kreuz-Zeitung, the conservative organ which, under the editorship of the once famous HAMMERSTEIN, was as often fighting the Chancellor as supporting him, BISMARCK had articles and letters written in all sorts of papers. He would send misleading news to opposition journals. He would give official information, false or true, to obscure provincial papers. One of his favorite devices was the manufacture for the press of letters supposed to be written by "a Prussian long resident in Paris," "a South German intimate with Vatican circles." There was no end to his methods of mystification, misleading. A bitter press campaign against France, Italy, Russia, Great Britain was carried out to order. The same thing was even more true under his successors; and the sophistication of the German press, including the Socialist organs, during the war is but too well known.

It is sometimes forgotten that NAPOLEON was an assiduous journalist, and that he long attempted to manufacture and guide public opinion. In the journal of the Royal United Service Institution Major COMPTON reviews and studies NAPOLEON'S connection with the press. While only a Lieutenant he wrote a pamphlet which won him the notice of the Jacobins. As Commander-in-Chief of the Army of Italy he was not too busy to establish, keep a watchful eye on, and even write political leaders for a couple of newspapers. He started a couple more in Egypt. This was his apprenticeship at journalism. As First Consul he bought the Moniteur and set to work in earnest to form public sentiment. He let the publisher and business manager have the profits. There was a titular editor, who "did" the theatres. The First Consul was editor-in-chief. He was manager-in-chief, too. He wrote articles. He criticised articles by his collaborators. He even controlled, Major COMPTON tells us, "the copy and paging of the paper." He looked carefully after its expenditures and its circulation. Naturally, he was an excellent circulation manager, as he suppressed every dangerous competitor. Every French paper was censored except two that appeared on the sly, one of them in manuscript.

NAPOLEON was as active, energetic, and thorough in the newspaper business as he was in every other into which he entered. In many respects he anticipated the Germans. He advocated his own measures in "powerful," enthusiastic editorials. He fought bitterly the hireling sheets of perfidious Albion. He ordered some news to be printed without change, some not to be printed at all, some to be discreetly edited. It is characteristic of him, or characteristic of the French genius, that he scrutinized articles on literature and science as carefully as political articles, including his own.

It is curious to find that he read every issue of the Moniteur as carefully after he became Emperor. He even founded another official or semi-official organ, the Bulletin de Paris, which died unregretted after a short and sickly existence. What, indeed, is the use of an official, semi-official, Government organ? As Mr. SIEYES told the Emperor, everybody soon learns who owns the semi-official paper and for what object it is run; "it is read less for forming opinion "than to know what the Government "want the public to think. When the "public see the Government trying to "form opinion from day to day they "resent it, and it usually has the op- "posite effect to what it is intended." Exactly as in Belgium under the Germans.

NAPOLEON saw the point. While he wouldn't allow the French to have a free press; while, even toward the end of his life, he maintained that his control of the press had been for the good of France, he treated himself to a free private press. He got this same sensible Mr. SIEYES to send him articles discussing with absolute freedom all matters of interest to the public, and often expressing an unfavorable opinion of NAPOLEON'S own policies. He had to know the truth, or what passed for it. The freedom of the press which he denied to the public he found necessary for himself. It is more than a little curious to find any contemporary American wishing to revive the fatal censorship, supervision, dictation, and poisoning of public opinion by a Government press.

THE BOOKLOVER'S SHOP.

What has become of the old-fashioned book shop, the booklover's shop? It is a place of fragrant memory. There the schoolboy bought his first textbooks, while on the serried shelves and well-stocked counters he got his earliest and deeply awed idea of how much there is to know in the world. The studious youth ransacked its treasures, casting oblique glances, perchance, at the radiant young thing buying a novel, whose very presence filled him with delight and consternation. There the village lawyer, doctor, and minister came at the noon hour to get the morning paper, fresh from the city, and lingered to exchange professional experiences or to discuss the latest books, of which they had read in a quarterly review. The proprietor was a host in the true sense of the word, welcoming each and all with the personal glance, the intimate word, and assisting in the most thrilling of all adventures—which is to dip into a tempting volume, weigh it, resist it prudently for days perhaps, and then buy it triumphantly, to be forever one's own. Very few of us were aware that the booklover's shop had almost vanished until WILLIAM HARRIS ARNOLD placed the fact beyond question in the current Atlantic Monthly.

It is a prosaic thing that has spelled its doom, at least in Mr. ARNOLD'S professional judgment. The publishers refused to allow the return of unsold books; and, as the loss on a single volume ate up the profit of many volumes sold, it was no longer possible for the shopkeeper to maintain the range and variety of his stock. Mr. ARNOLD thinks that the publishers might well revive the old custom as to "returns"; but it does not seem likely that he will carry his point. Even with the utmost intelligence and care, advance estimates of sales go wrong, and the publisher suffers. Besides, with book-shop proprietors what they have come to be, there is less likelihood than ever of intelligent and conservative buying. The public has also changed. Nowadays when a book is published, and especially in the case of a novel, the demand is immediate, often fevered. In rare cases the demand persists; but generally it ceases as suddenly as it began, and for no discernible reason, except the unfathomable psychology of the crowd. Dozens, even hundreds, of volumes would be returned. And when a modern book is dead, it is dead forever.

Even Mr. ARNOLD seems to feel, though unconsciously, that there is something of Fate in it all. For decades there has been a diminution everywhere of the local spirit, the personal touch. The theatre has the selfsame story to tell. Once there were Wallack's, Palmer's, Daly's, the old Lyceum—each with its well-loved players, its individual type of plays and productions, its highly personal management. They are all gone. Good plays are still produced, and well produced; but, when they are, it seems to happen by chance. The Broadway play mill grinds, and out pop the plays, good, bad, and indifferent, with no hall mark, no individual atmospheres of time or place or people. BARRIE and SHAW themselves are put on the market as commodities. Villages, even cities, are losing their identity; the very State is defaulting its rights to the nation. Everywhere the genius loci seems to have fallen upon evil days.

Let us not be deceived, however, by mere seeming. The human instincts for which the old book shop stood, even the old resident stock company, may still be alive as ever. In the publishing world no less, the love of excellence survives, the spirit of distinction. More really good books are published than ever before, and find a larger circle of readers. In some strange manner the office of the booklover's shop is still performed. Authors and publishers themselves are often amazed by the fact. When HENRY ADAMS wrote his "Education" it seemed of interest to only a few personal friends or to the chance historian of his time. He printed it for private circulation. This was in 1906. Twelve years passed and the fame of the book steadily grew. Then it was made generally accessible, at the price of five dollars, which seemed prohibitive of a general sale. Yet, crotchety and eccentric as the book was, and vague and mystical in its concluding chapters, there was a spirit in it, a spirit of vivacity and distinction, that proved irresistible. In the eight months since it was made accessible, it has run through almost as many new printings, and it has pervaded the land as far as the Golden Gate. The instance is striking, but by no means solitary. In quite recent years a dozen similar cases could be cited.

But in all these the booklover's shop had no part. That is a thing of the past, or is rapidly becoming so. Before many decades it will be ranged with the mellow ritual of wines and the fashion of the sedan chair, so resolutely gay, among beautiful things that have perished.

THE WAR AND THE ARTIST.

Two types of war novel that were popular while the conflict was going on —the interpretative study such as "Mr. Britling" or "The Four Horsemen," and the spy story in which the German villain came as a godsend to the writer of thrillers hard pressed for new material—have already passed and are not likely to come back. The story of the American soldier in France was used by half the novelists in the country for a few months, but even that is passing. Just now it is said to be almost impossible to sell a war story; but it will not always be impossible. It is to be expected—and hoped—that the war was the most profound experience which our generation is to see; and it will be impossible to keep it out of serious literature that is written by this generation.

Different men will be affected by it in different ways; but it is to be hoped that some will be affected more happily than a certain British novelist, well known among the younger writers before the war, who may hereinafter be referred to as Mr. X., to save the feelings of his publishers. This gentleman had written, before the war, a succession of novels dealing with the same characters—virtually a single story of many volumes—and had been careless enough to date the progress of his story so that the penultimate volume had brought it down to the Spring of 1914. The last volume, then, must collide with the war, and since the author happened to serve with the British Army in the Balkans, it followed that the war experiences of his characters must happen in the Balkans. To be sure, in this last war almost anybody might go almost anywhere; still, it required some elaborate expedients to get everybody concentrated in Nish when the plot required it. For the sake of Mr. X., who will probably be unable to let his interminable novel stop where it is, we may hope that there is no truth in the predictions that the next war will be in the Far East.

But this difficulty is of minor importance. More serious was the effect of the war on his characters. The heroine, who in the previous volumes had been addicted to entertaining if often scandalous repartee, now finds herself reduced to interminable soliloquies on the meaning of the war, the destiny of the universe, and the state of her soul; and the other characters do their best to keep up with her. Mr. MASEFIELD and others have told us that after the war the reading public would demand light, fanciful, and cheerful literature—something as far removed from the realities of life as possible. There is much to be said against professional optimism, and it is to be doubted if the reading world will be altogether satisfied with fairy stories; but even this prospect is less depressing than that suggested by the metamorphosis of Mr. X. The philosophical dialogue was put to good use by PLATO, but if it is to take the place of the realistic novel the war has cost us more even than we had feared.

THE REMEDY IS WORK.

Only Production Will Alleviate Present Economic Troubles.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It seems puerile to expect the cost of living to be reduced overnight by means of Government investigation alone. We must face facts as they are, and realize that present conditions have come to last for quite some time. During the five-year war period there were about 20,000,000 of the most efficient workers withdrawn from production, and perhaps an equal number who diverted their energies to producing war implements of practically no value to any of us when the war ended.

The world surplus of general merchandise, which helped to maintain the equilibrium of prices, was consumed during this time, and no material change can come in the price of commodities until production again comes up close to consumption. In other words, it is a question of supply and demand, figured not only within the radius of the United States, but the world at large.

There are remedies to be applied so as to shorten the time of the abnormal conditions that exist today, and one of these, and perhaps the main one, should be a proclamation by Mr. Wilson to the whole country, but intended especially for the laboring classes, urging them to do their duty to the country and give it a full day's work. In other words, urge them to work to full capacity, as the President himself and you and I and a million others in the country are doing.

RICHARD BALZAC.

New York, Aug. 8, 1919.

THE COLOMBIAN TREATY.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

THE TIMES editorials about the Colombian treaty have been as fair as would be expected from a paper that has such a leading position in the United States. They express, I should like to say, the views of every American who loves his country and is at the same time a lover of justice.

As a Colombian I hold the view that the most important thing in the treaty was the "sincere regret expression." This was not romanticism. As editor of El Espectador of Bogota, I expressed several times the idea that what we want in regard to the United States is the removal of whatever has been standing as an obstacle for close understanding and sincere friendship between the two nations. The indemnity, to my mind, was a secondary thing. After having obtained the moral reparation we are entitled to, the $25,000,000 could go to Colombia twenty-five times through the channels of commerce and industry, the best of all.

That does not mean that in any way I considered the $25,000,000 as "the price of honor." In fact, that sum is only a slight compensation for damages in the "I took Panama" question.

The apology for the wrong that was done to Colombia in 1903 is, I am proud to repeat, the most important thing. Fortunately President Wilson, who knows what justice means, insisted upon the subject in his wonderful victory message, i. e., the one he sent to Congress and to the world when the armistice was signed. He especially urged on that occasion that the Colombian treaty be approved, so as to undo the moral and material wrong done to my country sixteen years ago. That I consider the most substantial and warm American apology.

MEETING DEAD CARDINALS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Will you kindly explain whether the interview of Scheidemann and "Parvus" with Cardinal Gasparri in the presence of Cardinals Iacobini, Franchi, Gilimberti, and Rampolla took place in the world of the dead or in that of the living?

If it occurred in the former, your correspondent from Geneva, partly at least, is right. If in the latter, then he relates a thing absolutely impossible, for the simple reason that the last four named Cardinals all died very long ago. In fact, the date of their deaths is the following: Iacobini, 1900; Franchi, 1878; Galimberti, 1896; Rampolla, 1913.

As I am sure that this fact is well known to the Munich Post, I must infer that your correspondent has been the victim of a very humorous hoax.

THE BEST FORM OF GOVERNMENT.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The Americanization campaign now going on in the form of street corner gatherings is highly admirable and certainly serves the highest purposes. However, it is not commendable that the speakers in their enthusiasm should make derogatory statements regarding all other forms of government, including those of the nations that fought with us in the common interest for the cause of democracy. A speaker recently said that our form of government is absolutely the best of all, ridiculing the others. Such a statement is open to much discussion on the part of those who have studied political science, because it is a matter of common knowledge that authorities on the subject are of the opinion that the cabinet form of government, whereby the representatives of the people can at any time overthrow the executives, gives a more elastic form of government of the people, by the people, and for the people.

BEAUTY AND THE ROSE.

"The color that bathes the Intelligible World is the beauty that blooms within its flower . . . for beauty in the Intelligible World is not a flower that blooms only on its surface."—Plotinos.

I read a page of mystic laws,
At silent noon—a garden's shade.
A rose my nearest neighbor was,
In more than rose's charm arrayed:
And there (unless a dream it were)
The soul of me had speech with her.

"Say why should friends of closest touch
Within their hearts thy symbol wear,
O rose!—Their fond esteeming such
No feast of theirs but thou art there,
Above their board—a leaf of thine
Afloat upon each cup of wine?

"And lovers, too—why 'neath thy sway
Have they a covert taken, rose?
Of all their lips or looks would say,
So sure thou nothing wilt disclose!
Why should they deem thou art so deep Unfathomed silence thou wilt keep?"

"Because so beautiful am I
That Beauty holds me as her own,
And binds me by the closest tie.
But Beauty's Self cannot be known!
And she, so secret, makes me part
Of her unsearched Eternal Heart.

"Who love more nearly can divine
Than mortals else that Earth hath bred
How unseen, inner bloom is mine,
Which through, not on, my leaves is shed;
'Tis Beauty's gaze—far in the height,
Makes that hid flower of her delight!

"Love is the Beauty lovers know—
All wistfully,—a troubled joy,
Since flaws across her image blow,
That half its perfect lines destroy;
But if her mirrored face shone clear,
Not Love itself could hold them here!"

A petal fell—Oh, did I see,
Or did I only feel it fall?—
A petal,—one—and two—and three,
The rose had heard a sovran Call:
Its soul was gone, to be a part
Of an unsearched Eternal Heart.

ARMENIA'S FUTURE

With Temporary American Assistance, Nation Can Hold Its Own Against Turks

By ARSHAG MAHDESIAN.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The sympathetic reference in your editorial article, "Have We Won the War?" to the plight of the Armenians now exposed to the vengeance of Turk and Tartar, and the suggestion that the Allies and the associated powers extend every possible material aid to, assist the Armenians in their own defense, deserve universal appreciation and commendation.

The monstrous notion entertained and inculcated by certain philo-Turks that the establishment of an Armenian State is dependent on the majority or minority of the Armenian population in their native land appears to encourage the Turkish authorities to kill as many Armenians as possible before the final settlement.

The Turkish authorities must be given to understand that no burglar, having killed the household, can claim ownership to the house, and that, as during the Armenian deportation it was expressed in an exalted sentiment by M. Paul Doumer, formerly the President of the French Senate, "When the question of Armenian population comes to be considered at the end of the war the dead must be counted with the living."

In 1905 the European Powers delivered an ultimatum to Turkey that unless their demands for international control of the finances of Macedonia was accepted immediately they would resort to a naval demonstration. The Sultan attempted to hoodwink the powers, intimating that such action on their part would precipitate an internal uprising of the Mussulmans against the Christian population. But having become convinced that the powers had sincerely agreed to coerce Turkey into acceptance of their demands, he complied with them.

All the Turks are human machines, they do only what their Sultan or leaders will. There is no individuality or public opinion among the Turks, because there is no liberty for them. Let the Allies and the associated powers warn the Sultan and his acolytes in no uncertain words that the instigators of Armenian massacres will be held personally responsible, then the Armenians in the new Armenian Republic of the Caucasus and elsewhere will be safe.

Meanwhile the Allies and the associated powers must not procrastinate in freeing and safeguarding the Armenians, Syrians, and Greeks of the former Ottoman Empire. Foreseeing the danger from Turkish and Tartar elements, Dr. Charles W. Eliot, President Emeritus of Harvard University; James W. Gerard, formerly American Ambassador to Germany; the Hon. Charles Evans Hughes, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Frederic Courtland Penfield, Elihu Root, Governor Alfred E. Smith, and Senator John Sharp Williams cabled, on June 22, to President Wilson, while he was in Paris, that it was the sacred and imperative duty of the Allies and America to "send at once to Caucasus Armenia requisite food, munitions, and supplies for 50,000 men and such other help as they may require to enable the Armenians to occupy the non-occupied parts of Armenia, within the boundaries defined in the memorandum of the delegation of Integral Armenia."

Unfortunately, the American Peace Commission, to which this request was referred by President Wilson before his departure from Paris, did not consider immediate steps possible. They reached this conclusion after studying a memorandum which was prepared, at their request, by Mr. Herbert Hoover and Mr. Henry Morgenthau. The gist of this memorandum was that it would be impossible to send food in sufficient quantity to Armenia unless the American Government voted an appropriation for that purpose, as donations from charitable individuals and philanthropic organizations were not equal to the immensity of the need; that the Armenians being very much depleted, must have the assistance of an army of 600,000, composed of American and English soldiers, mainly American, as at present Great Britain would not wish to raise another expeditionary force; that a sum of more than $300,000,000 would be immediately necessary for military preparations; that it would be very difficult to establish order in Armenia, as the Armenian State would contain 5,000,000 souls, of whom the majority are Turks, Kurds, and other Mohammedan tribes; that it would not be an easy task to make the Turks disgorge the lands and the property they have seized from the Armenians; that it would require a great amount of labor and money to rehabilitate Armenia, because Armenia, being a mountainous country, is not adapted for cultivation and for railroad communication; and, therefore, it would be better to consign Armenia to the protection of the power which will be mandatary for Mesopotamia, as the productiveness of Mesopotamia would counterbalance the deficiency of Armenia.

It appears that Mr. Morgenthau and Mr. Hoover have overlooked the fact that the money contributed by charitable individuals and philanthropic organizations for Armenian relief was not sufficient because the food, as cabled from Constantinople to James Cardinal Gibbons, is distributed "without distinction of race, creed, or religion," that is, relief is given to Turks, Kurds, and other Moslem elements as well as to the Armenians. The Armenians will not need any relief when security is established. The wonderful recuperative power of the Armenian Nation is already at work. Reports which have been received by the Armenian National Delegation in Paris from various centres in Armenia tend to show that wherever Armenian refugees have returned to their homes they have begun to till their fields, have reorganised their affairs, opened schools, and even established newspapers.

Mr. Morgenthau and Mr. Hoover ignore also the fact that during the war more than 2,500,000 Turks perished in Armenia, according to German estimates. This, therefore, cannot give a majority to Turks, Kurds, and other Mohammedan tribes in the Armenian State. It can be stated, without any fear of contradiction, that the Turkish Government in killing one Armenian dug the grave for ten Turks, because the Armenians were the sustainers of the Turks. During the massacres of 1896, when the Turks and Kurds of Hizol were upbraided by the Turkish commandant for not massacring the rayahs (Armenians) of their town, they replied: "How can we live without the Armenians? They are our milch cows." The same fact is attested in the following paragraph taken from a letter which a Turk had sent to his son in this country after the Armenian deportation: "I am returning the check you sent, for we cannot cash it, there being no rayah here any more. Times are bad, my son, the rayah was everything for us. I tell you when Winter comes we ourselves will have to starve, for, as you know, we all live on the rayah's crops."

It is true that Armenia is mountainous, but the rich pastures of the hills and the many valleys, intersected by the Araxes, the Halys, the Euphrates, and the Tigris Rivers, make Armenia a fertile country. For Armenia it has been said: "In Winter the hills are white with snow; in Summer the hills are white with sheep." And whoever is familiar with the topography of Armenia knows that travel and commerce are rendered easy, in Summer or Winter, through the vast depressions of many intersecting plains. Armenia does not need an expenditure of millions for transportation facilities. She can build her own railroads, in her own good time, just as the American railroads were built as the country grew.

No large force of American or foreign troops is necessary to help the Armenians in defending themselves against predatory hordes of Turks and Kurds. Five or ten thousand American soldiers, co-operating with the army of the Armenian Republic of the Caucasus, will easily pacify the country. As soon as the Turks find out that the Armenian Government is established they will gladly submit to its authority. The Moslems in the Armenian Republic of the Caucasus have already pledged their allegiance to the Armenian Government.

Armenians very much desire to have an American mandatary, for perhaps five years. In case America does not consent to accept the mandate for Armenia, the Armenians would be content if America and the Allies would send troops to curb the Turks and other Moslem elements.

AN AUTOMATIC TRAIN STOP

As an item of news interest the rear-end collision at Port Chetster, N. Y., last Thursday was not an important one because it occurred between freight trains and only two people were killed. Nevertheless it emphasizes once more a vital need in railway operation which the press of the country should not permit the present session of Congress to overlook.

It appears from the published report of the investigation that the engine driver, as in so many fatal wrecks, ran by the visual danger signal at the entrance to the block. It was also stated that the wrecked engine was found with the power lever still turned on, which supports the theory that the engineer was asleep even when the crash came. But whether he was asleep or unconscious from illness, the discouraging fact to the traveling public is that there was no automatic train stop device provided to prevent the engineer from running by the stop signal. If there were no such devices in existence there would be some excuse for these accidents, but the testimony before the New York Public Service Commission of the Second District on June 18 indicated very clearly that there are such devices now in use on one or two short lines and others which have undergone successful service tests.

When these calamities happen they are as a rule honored with a front-page position in the newspapers; harrowing details are given and the public is duly shocked for a few moments. A demand is made for the punishment of the guilty and investigations follow, but without result so far as remedial measures are concerned. Then the public's interest subsides and a period of indifference and forgetfulness follows until another holocaust suddenly appears in the news columns. Again public interest and indignation are aroused, and again they subside until the next horror is staged, and so on through the years.

We are now passing through one of these regular periods of forgetfulness between railroad calamities which the fatal accident at Port Chester has but slightly disturbed.

If recent dreadful disasters have inspired any railroad or any lawmaker to effective action for their prevention, news of the fact has not yet reached the traveling public, which is riding along day after day waiting further details of the next deadly rear-end collision, which in the natural order of things will soon be due. Few people realize the magnitude of the life waste and of the extraordinary number of people injured and maimed every year on our railways, many of them through neglect to provide safety devices. The latest complete official accident bulletins available show a total of 709 persons killed and 9,298 seriously injured in the year 1917.

In ninety-two accidents which were investigated by the Interstate Commerce Commission Safety Department it was found that sixty-nine of them, causing 253 deaths and 1,068 injuries, were in the class known as "preventable by an automatic train stop," designed to halt the train if by any chance the engine driver should run by a stop signal.

This preventable waste of human life can only be characterized as barbarous in a country with the wealth and safety engineering ability possessed by America. The fact that the Government and some of the railroads are examining various devices designed by inventors to put a stop to the possibility of enginemen running by block stop signals is very good as far as it goes, but this has been going on for years and it will continue for years unless Congress compels the roads to apply those devices that show a practical degree of efficiency.

It is reported that in some of the automatic train stop devices tested by the Interstate Commerce Commission such a high degree of perfection has been attained as to clearly justify the Government and the railroads in making an extensive and thorough trial of them, and it is understood that the commission has reported these inventions to Congress for action. Hundreds of thousands of dollars have already been spent by private enterprise in perfecting and demonstrating these automatic train stop devices, and it would seem that wisdom and economy, to say nothing of the humanities, would justify Congress and the railroads in making a serious effort to sort out the best inventions and to apply them in the solution of this life-saving problem.

It neither solves the problem nor justifies indifference to it to call attention to the vast number of passengers safely carried per one killed, nor to the bewildering number of miles a passenger may ride on the average before sacrificing his life, to save the cost of automatic stops or other safety devices.

Since Congress forced the use of the airbrake and the automatic coupling it has done virtually nothing to promote traveling safety. The railroads have applied at great cost the automatic block signal system, which has proved to be absolutely imperfect without an automatic train stop. While the authorities have been trifling with this important subject for many years thousands of passengers and employes have been killed and many thousands injured by preventable rear-end collisions. How much longer is Congress going to remain asleep at the danger signal?

RATIFY THE TREATY.

National Unity Essential in Present Situation of World Affairs.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The question of the ratification of the League of Nations is now before the Senate of the United States, which has been termed the greatest deliberative body in the world. This League is much the most important document ever prepared at any time in the history of mankind and it should be dealt with in a broad spirit of patriotism and entirely without relation to party politics or personalities.

I am a Republican and I appreciate the serious responsibilities which will rest upon any man who endeavors to prevent ratification. It is not a matter of whether we approve of President Wilson or of his conduct of affairs prior to, or during, or since the war; it is a question of securing the results of our victory, and of not allowing our boys to have died in vain, and of giving a final and necessary knock-out blow to German schemes for domination.

The Allies have fought and won the greatest and most dangerous war in history, to secure freedom for the present and coming generations, and they have stamped out the German menace, which was a very present and actual danger, not only to Europe, but to the United States.

And now, after this great accomplishment, an agreement or League has been arrived at after several months of strenuous work by some of the ablest and most experienced statesmen in the world, representing the various allied nations. There can be no doubt as to the integrity and intense loyalty of the leaders at the Peace Conference. It is not a binding agreement for a long period, as any party to it may, under Article I. of the League, withdraw on giving two years' notice, but it is absolutely necessary to use it now for the preservation of the peace of the world. We have the opportunity to adopt it now; but, if it has to come up again before the Peace Conference for amendment, dangerous delays would ensue, and it might fall through altogether, and possibly Japan, Italy, or Germany might refuse to sign. This would be a serious disaster to the whole world and lead to confusion, danger, and chaos.

Under the League it is believed by many that future wars will be prevented. It doubtless has imperfections, but it can be amended hereafter as provided in Article XXVI. The Constitution of the United States, adopted twelve years after the Declaration of Independence, has been amended eighteen times. I have read the League carefully, and must confess I think it is a wonderful achievement and worthy of the master minds who conceived this plan of preventing future wars.

It is necessary at this moment to have it as a weapon to carry out the terms of peace and to control the world's affairs. If we do not have this organization and this weapon we will have anarchy in many of the nations, and our foreign trade relations will be retarded and seriously injured.

We want a lasting peace, and this is a step in the right direction. Without organized force, both military and economic, it looks now as if we might encounter chaos in a large part of Europe and play directly into the hands of Germany. The situation is so critical and grave at this moment in the struggle everywhere between labor and capital and the reconstruction and feeding of Europe and the adjustment of the vast war debts, that it is an urgent and imminent necessity that we should have law and order and stability of Governments as quickly as possible. This can only be accomplished through the League of Nations.

Neither party politics, nor the question of whether President Wilson ignored the Senate or did not, has anything to do with this question. It is far above any such plane, and any political party which contributes to non-ratification will, I feel, not only injure itself in the eyes of the people but will go down in history as not appreciating its duty at a most critical period in the annals of our Republic.

It appears to me that after consideration of the gravity of the situation, both at home and abroad, and the worldwide and disastrous affect of non-ratification, many men who have heretofore opposed the League will conclude that they dare not take the responsibility of defeating it.

Wages of Domestic Servants.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

No protest against conditions is complete that does not include an emphatic one against the exorbitant wages of house servants. Domestic service is the one form of labor that is supplied with board, lodging, heat, light, and laundry facilities. The cook who demands $50 is in reality earning nearly twice that amount, the equivalent of what the average shop girl or stenographer has to pay out for the above-named commodities. The domestic servant has little or no wear and tear on her clothes, as her working dresses are inexpensive and few.

During the war the reason given was lack of immigration and increase of munition factories. Now what is it, if not merely the taste for "big money" and less work?

THE SOLID RAILROAD VOTE

Those Interested in Government Ownership Could Easily Be Held Together

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In an editorial on the demand for Government ownership of the railroads, THE TIMES declares that if the Federal woman suffrage amendment is ratified in time, there will be 30,000,000 voters in 1920, of which the railroads will have no more than six million.

To the casual reader these figures would convey the impression that the electorate would be doubled with women voting, and also that the proportionate number of railroad votes would be less, but this impression would be wrong.

From the available figures on the increase in the electorate in suffrage States, especially Illinois, the only State where the ballots have been kept separate, we find that from 150 to 175 men vote to every 100 women where both have the suffrage. In New York State last Fall the total vote increased only 33 per cent. with women voting, so that it would be more than generous to the women voters to figure that they will increase the number of votes cast by 50 per cent.

In that case we would have about 24,000,000 votes cast in 1920, instead of the 30,000,000 estimated by THE TIMES, and the estimated railroad vote, instead of representing one-fifth of the electorate, would represent one-fourth.

But there is another element to be taken into account. The city woman finds it more convenient to vote than the farmer's wife, and the women who can be "organized" vote more readily than the average city women. Thus at the last election in New York, the city vote increased 44 per cent. while the up-State vote increased only 23 per cent. The Tammany vote, however, increased 74 per cent. with women voting, and the Socialist vote 220 per cent. Therefore the ratification of the Federal suffrage amendment cannot be expected to bring about a general proportionate increase among all elements of the electorate. The organized vote, the controlled vote, the radical vote, may be doubled, but we cannot expect the women on the farms and in the homes to increase the vote by more than 30 per cent.

If then, the amendment is ratified, it will give a great advantage to the industrial centres and the radical elements over the average family, and if our industries are put under "Government ownership," which is the camouflage title for political control, the wives, sisters, aunts, and cousins of the millions of Government employes will have a far more direct interest in voting than the average taxpayer's wife. We have already learned through the suffrage movement itself that a small, well-organized minority can dictate to Congress and the State Legislatures, regardless of the will of the people as expressed at the polls, and when the "One Big Union" under "Government ownership" has its lobbyists in every capital, and its members on the Federal payroll, it will be hard indeed to find a politician with enough courage to defy an element that may well represent one-third of the entire electorate.

With one-third, or even one-fourth, of the electorate "in office" or directly interested in keeping husbands, fathers, or sons "in office," the burden on the two-thirds of the people who merely pay the taxes will increase by amounts that will make the present high cost of living seem absurd.

Another evil of political control of industry is its waste and inefficiency—for the man selected will never be the one who best serves the public, but the person who can "deliver" the most votes to the party in power.

The party in power, of course, will pack all the "Government-owned" industries with its party "workers" who will do as little as they can to serve the people and as much as they can to increase their own salaries and the tax burden.

Under this system—which is socialism, no matter what name we prefer to call it—the greatest form of organized tyranny in the history of the world would be upon us. The "soft jobs" would all go to the politicians and other office holders. It would be impossible to dislodge an administration except by revolution, and "overhead" charges on supporting swarms of political "administrators," "inspectors," "commissions," &c., in high-salaried idleness would reduce the average citizen taxpayer to virtual slavery to a political oligarchy such as the world has never known.

The only way for a man to advance himself under such a system would be to curry favor with his political boss. As an economic slave to the party in power, "political freedom" would be impossible, and a man's vote would represent not his judgment but his bid for a Government job—and his wife's vote would represent part of the price.

This is the situation we are facing today, with our political leaders already proved cowards and slackers in representing the people and both parties ready to bid the whole future of America for any advantage they may imagine available at the next election. Meanwhile, in destroying the right of each State to say who shall vote for its own officers, we are virtually destroying the sovereign units that have hitherto safeguarded the United States.

Federalism and socialism, under beautiful banners and words that conceal conditions from the casual reader, are encroaching on the independence of every citizen.

The danger should not be minimized, but exhibited as the greatest menace America faces, for the only force that can prevent its advent is an aroused public opinion.

THE BURNED AIRPLANES

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Colonel Patrick's letter, published in your issue of today and sent to the Democratic member of the House Sub-Committee on Aviation, admitting the destruction by fire of battle planes in France—which has been so vigorously denied by the war chiefs—was an unfortunate, confused, and contradictory communication and should, as it no doubt will, receive its proper analysis by Congress in due time.

Colonel Patrick says: "I gave orders to return to the United States all DH-4 planes and all Liberty engines which were serviceable. I cabled to the United States, telling the number of other types available, and asking what I should ship, and answer was received conveying the desired information." The Colonel should have stated to whom he cabled, also the answer as to the disposition he should make of this precious public property. It could not have been to the War Department, for they denied any and all destruction of planes by fire. To whom was it? Colonel Patrick says the "desired" information was received. Did he receive orders to burn? Why does the Colonel in this letter, addressed to Mr. Flood, but clearly framed for the public, not tell us frankly to whom he cabled and what the reply was?

The planes were burned. Guards were put around that no one be permitted to photograph. (See sworn statement by men who did the work.) The engines were not saved. They were wrecked. They were not left in the planes—as the tanks were, with gas in them, exploding as the fire caught them—they appear to have been dropped out, because the aluminium and brass parts would melt under the heat and even the pound value would be lost in the junk the engines became through the manner of their removal from the fuslages. Airplane engines are of such fine mechanism that their 600 or 800 pounds of weight cannot drop four or five feet without crushing their delicate parts. Colonel Patrick knows this—and he knows these engines were not salved. (See sworn testimony of men who did the work.) And I am one of the many American citizens who believe the sworn statement of soldiers who regretfully were obliged to execute such orders.

Colonel Patrick admits, in extenuation of this wanton destruction: "There were some planes which, though usable, were virtually obsolete. For example, our own DH-4, which would soon have to give way to the DH-9." Has he forgotten that the DH-9 had already given way to the DH-4 in the Fall of 1917 at Dayton? He continues: "The Spad 13, the best pursuit plane we had," (many of which he ordered burned,) "would have been replaced by the English Snipe, the Martyneide, the Sopwith Dolphin, or the Beachreau Spad. The Handley-Page night bomber might have been displaced by the Vimy, or even the American Martin bomber."

This unfortunate medley and mental confusion, or irrelevant might-have-beens, have nothing to do with the facts. There were a great number of usable chasse or battle planes of foreign make. General Menoher and General Mitchell have both testified that we are absolutely without one single battle plane of American make. And General Mitchell admits that should we get into difficulty with Mexico we are today as helpless in this respect as when Pershing went after Villa. Query: Did General Mitchell know when he testified that we had now burned even our foreign-made battle planes and that we had none left?

The photographs were surreptitiously taken and the identity of the men who took them is a well-guarded secret. I did not say, as THE TIMES stated yesterday, that it was impossible to tell from the photographs whether a plane or its parts were serviceable or not. I did state the contrary—that the photographs are remarkable documents—that they are the best evidence in the world of the kind and character and somewhat the quantity of the planes that were burned. They also clearly exhibit the condition, not only of the wings, but the fuslages. They indicate no wear, but the new injuries clearly produced at the time. They indicate the location of the fire. The sunlight on them makes it possible to determine the time of day, and they give a great deal of other valuable information.

They show in the completest manner that the important denials and qualifications that Colonel Patrick makes in his letter, while they may have been in his mind and his intent, were not carried out. There was also a big pile of DH-4s burned, and the log book of one of these shows that the engine had run less than an hour. It might have been ordered to be burned because it was unsafe and unfit to go again into the air, which I can believe. But if one of our American-made DH's, with its Liberty motor, was withdrawn from service for this reason, why not state so, rather than that it was an antique, worn in a war it arrived too late even to serve?

GUTZON BORGLUM.

NO MASSACRES BY PERSIANS

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your issue of June 29, 1919, a letter is published bearing the signature of Paul Shimmon, containing unwarranted attacks upon the Persian Government for what is alleged to be Persia's responsibility for Urumiah troubles. The charges made are so obviously false and the misrepresentations contained in the article so glaring that they contradict themselves even to the most superficial reader, and the Department of State at Washington has on file formal notices from the Assyrian associations in America disclaiming Paul Shimmon as their spokesman.

The article charges the Government with having "encouraged" the Persians in the Province of Asarbaidjan to take steps against the Assyrians of Salmas and Urumiah. This is absolutely false. The Assyrians of Urumiah will themselves testify to the spirit of toleration and benevolence always shown them by the Government as long as the Government of Asarbaidjan was free to act. But the public should remember that for a number of years previous to the world war, and in the teeth of repeated protests of the Persian Government, the armies of the Czar unjustly occupied most of the districts of Asarbaidjan and supported and held in office notorious reactionaries whose misdeeds were calculated to justify the Russian occupation. This act not only paralyzed, but practically annihilated, the authority of the Persian Government in those parts. Then, when the war broke out, and, at the request of the Allies, Persia declared her neutrality and insisted upon the evacuation of her territory by Russian troops, her just demand was utterly rejected and ignored by Russia. This furnished Turkey the excuse to follow suit and invade Persia with her armed forces to fight the Russians. This state of things provoked a general confusion which not only eliminated every remaining vestige of Persian authority in Asarbaidjan, but subjected the country to the dire consequences of famine, massacre, and ruin entailed by the violation of Persian neutrality by the neighboring belligerents.

Among the acts of foreign aggression was the arming of the Christian population in the northwest and the attacks made upon the Moslem inhabitants—formerly in perfect peace with their Christian neighbors—for which foreign intrigue had paved the way. Persia lodged energetic protests against all these acts of aggression with all the allied powers, but no step was taken by the powers to effect the withdrawal of foreign troops from Persian territory and respect that country's neutrality and thus enable the Persian Government to check the terrible conflagration which cost the lives of a vast section of the population and the loss of hundreds of millions in property.

Now to attach any responsibility to the Persian Government for wrongs done in the occupied zones would be too ridiculous even to deserve notice were it not too cruel to be ignored.

The wrongs suffered by Persia are recognized even by Russia, which was at the time the greatest author of Persia's ruin. In fact, at the outset of the war, when Persia protested against the Russian occupation of the country and disclaimed responsibility for all ensuing wrongs, Russia officially shouldered the responsibility and promised to indemnify all those suffering losses from her invasion of Persia. This places the unfounded charges made by a so-called sympathiser of Persian Assyrians in their true light.

As to the death of Mar Shimoon, the facts filed with the Foreign Offices of the allied Governments prove that Mar Shimoon was killed while making an attack upon the town of Salmas, on which occasion many thousands of unarmed Moslems lost their lives. He would have been spared had he not put himself at the head of an armed force on the neutral soil of Persia.

As regards the troubles in Urumiah, again there is a tendency to forget that the hardships endured by Christians and Moslems alike were due to the abnormal conditions created by the world conflagration, which spread into Persia against her will, and by reason of the violation of her neutrality; moreover, much of the harm done was brought about by the Christians themselves. Djelou tribesmen, who are Christians, followed the Russian troops out of Turkey into Persia, were armed by the Russians and, in spite of the Persian Government's protests, remained on in the Urumiah district after the Russian retreat, with an increased equipment of cannon and ammunition. These wild and unbridled tribes abandoned themselves to all kinds of cruelty and depredation toward the Moslems, whom they massacred by thousands; the town of Urumiah was destroyed by them and much property was looted. The murder of Mgr. Sontag was much deplored by the Persian Government, but it is absolutely unfair to throw the onus of responsibility for this dastardly act on them and quite untrue to say that any officer of the Persian Gendarmerie was implicated in the assassination of the Apostolic Delegate.

As regards the "additional territory" Persia is alleged to have claimed before the Peace Conference: To begin with, the chief claims of Persia consist in the indemnification of her people for the damages suffered from the belligerents who converted the country into a theatre of war. She further claims guarantees for her judicial, economic, and political independence, which has suffered from unjust foreign attacks for over a century. The so-called "additional territory" constitutes but a part of the patrimony of Persia which has been, on various occasions, wrested from her by foreign aggressors.

The claims for indemnity referred to in the article are true except in the amount, which is far below the estimate which has hitherto been made of the enormous losses sustained by the country and people. Persia courts a commission to be appointed by the Peace Conference to go to Persia, to inquire into the charges made concerning the Urumiah matters, and invites an estimate to be made of the devastation wrought by the war, which made the country the Belgium of Asia. It will then be found that the indemnity asked is not only a minimum of losses suffered, but is essential for the reparation of regions where hundreds of thousands are homeless and reduced to dire indigence.

Letter Carriers' Pay.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I served nine months with the famous 77th Division in France, and on returning from there, I went back to my old position as letter carrier. On going away I had already served three years as substitute carrier and I often had to work sixteen hours a day to make $8. On returning I thought that as I had fought in France for democracy things would improve in the Post Office Department, but I was sadly disappointed, as conditions have grown worse.

While I was away I was appointed a regular carrier, starting at a salary of $1,000 a year, which is at the rate of $2.99 a day. Now, this is starvation wages to offer a man who has served his country in France and who had a wife and child to support. Just a few days ago I was notified that, although I had been a regular carrier for nine months, I was again reduced to a substitute and that I should pay back to the Government two weeks' pay—my vacation allowance, as I was not entitled to receive a vacation—although all carriers are allowed two weeks' vacation.

Quite recently Congress increased the salary of the higher paid carriers $100, but did not increase the first-year men. Now, this is unjust to us first-year men, as our salary was, indeed, too small considering the fact that conductors on the street cars of New York at present receive $4 a day. As I fought on the fields of France for liberty, I believe that I should receive better treatment at the hands of the United States Government than be reduced to work sixteen hours a day for, perhaps, another year, and then start on a salary of $1,000 a year.

NAVAL RADIO SERVICE

Advocated as Essential to Safety Where Commercial Service Would Not Pay

By C. B. COOPER.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The writer has read with interest your editorial of July 25, in which you question the advisability of empowering the navy to open all of their radio stations to commercial use.

It is a fact that all of us are pretty well fed up on Government control and operation, but we must not be "agin" everything simply because of this fact. Radio is one thing which should not be confused with any other business, nor should the same reasoning relative to its operation be applied.

You would not, I am sure, advocate turning our lighthouses over to commercial organizations. It is perfectly feasible to do this, and it would be a good money maker, because one could assess steamship companies so much per ship, but under this plan only lighthouses in busy harbors would be profitable, and out-of-the-way places would be without protective lights.

The same identical situation pertains to wireless stations, and they are just as essentially a necessary life-saving means as the lighthouses. They are only commercially profitable in thickly populated centres and under strictly commercial control—the out-of-the-way places where they are most needed will not be given stations. This is true because each wireless station must be a self-supporting unit, and only thickly populated parts will produce business enough to support a station.

If you build a wire line or cable you can run connections or feeders to take in small sources of business and the line does not depend on earnings from a single or double source, but is fed by earnings all along the line.

The present radio law of 1912 recognized that non-lucrative places would not be given stations by commercial companies, because it authorized the navy to open for commercial use stations at Key West, Fla.; San Juan, Porto Rico; North Head, Wash.; Tatoosh Island, Wash.; San Diego, Cal.; Alaska, the Canal Zone, and Arlington, Va. Since that law went into effect the navy has found it necessary to build many stations for communication with our fleet, and in building they have not considered commercial earnings, but have located them where they could give adequate service to their ships.

During the war the Government took over all wireless stations. They positively had to, because radio messages cannot be controlled like wire or cable messages. Wireless signals know no set path or direction, therefore absolutely bona-fide messages from apparently reliable firms or individuals to like addresses on seemingly necessary business would travel not only to the destination of the message, but would be picked up by enemy vessels or submarines out at sea, and to them the message would be a very clear coded message of information.

Many of the stations taken over were poorly constructed and equipped, and in order to make of all stations a system to properly protect our transports, navy, and shipping, the navy had to rebuild and re-equip them. Therefore it was found better to buy them outright than to rent, and thus we now find that the navy owns practically all of the radio stations in existence, and practically no hardship will be worked on any one by authorizing that they be opened for commercial use.

There is nothing in the bill now before Congress that will prevent commercial interests from building stations, and the only ones who may fear the navy handling commercial messages are the cable companies, and possibly one or two wireless companies who have picked out a few nice spots where they think wireless would pay. They will not represent 1 per cent. of the interested public, and 99 per cent., including steamship companies, commercial organizations, and the thousands who travel the sea, together with the thousands who wait for them at home, will be benefited by being given the use of the navy stations.

However, there is really no reason why cable or any other interests should object to the navy doing commercial business from their stations, because radio is not able to supplant the present cables. Interference from other stations and atmospheric conditions will not permit it. If in the future such conditions are overcome and wireless stations can be controlled so as not to cause interference, then commercial interests will be able to build any stations desired, and there will be room for all and business for all. There never was, and never will be, a time when we have sufficient communication to warrant closing any of it to the public, and especially do we need such service as the navy system can produce in wireless.

I am in favor of this bill, not from theory, but from actual experience. I have been associated in various phases of radio work for a good many years and know what naval communication service means. The Atlantic Coast commercial interests know naval communication only in a small way, and that mainly during the recent abnormal war conditions, because the present law only permitted the navy to open for commercial business stations at Arlington, Va.; Key West, Fla.; San Juan, Porto Rico, and the Canal Zone—simply scattered stations. But on the Pacific they were permitted to do commercial business at San Diego, Cal.; North Head, Wash.; Tatoosh Island, Wash., and Alaska. This line-up of stations, you will readily see, permitted them to give a systematic ship service up and down the coast, and also allowed them to establish an inter-communicating system for point-to-point service in Alaska, and from Alaska to wire terminals in the South.

I think every one was perfectly willing to let the navy spend public money to maintain an Alaskan circuit because no commercial interest wanted to cover the territory any more than they ever wanted to build or support a telegraph line there.

The navy opened up a number of Alaska stations; around these have sprung up privately owned cannery or mining company stations, and today Alaska has excellent radio communication with the outside. Commercial interests hitherto absolutely shut off from communication have their own stations, and their savings and earnings, through being given the use of navy stations, have been very large. But aside from earnings, the point is that the system has been operated in perfect accord with public requirements, and the Naval Communication Service has been not an official body but a public servant. There has been little, if any, bungling—certainly no more than in commercial organizations; and I, for one, will expect them to promote the same efficient public service on the Atlantic and everywhere if given an opportunity.

Logically, it is the organization to handle the wireless—no commercial company or companies will cover all points. Every commercial company will think and act for its own interests, regardless of wireless interference, and radio should not be overcommercialized. Its big duty is to provide communication to ships at sea, to save lives, and then, if it can be utilized for long-distance or other message work, all well and good. A Government organization, and only such, can work wireless without thought of profit, but with a primary object of saving lives.

THE TIMES should not condemn this Radio bill, but should work for it; so should every steamship organization and every commercial organization in the country.

COMPENSATION FROM GERMANY

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your editorial of this date, entitled "Our Indemnity," you say:

A few covetous patriots are protesting against the President's policy of demanding no share of the German indemnity for America. There are Americans who have suffered loss at the hands of Germans, and the aggregate of their claims will run into hundreds of millions. But it has been supposed that the German property seized here will be sufficient to settle them all.

It seems to me that there would be no just complaint against the President's policy if we were sure that the German property so seized can properly be applied to the "just claims of American victims." But, if that be the intention of our Government, why should that not be specifically stated in the treaty of peace, and all possible ambiguity and ground for dispute advoided?

Certainly this contention is not aided by the terms of the "Trading with the Enemy Act." The only paragraph in that act in which the disposition of the seized German property is referred to provides as follows:

After the end of the war, any claim of any enemy or of an ally of enemy, to any money or other property received and held by the Alien Property Custodian or deposited in the United States Treasury, shall be settled as Congress shall direct.

There can be no question that Congress would have legal authority to direct the application of this property to the settlement of the claims of American citizens against the German Government. But to do so, except in the case of property which belonged to the German Government, or any political or municipal sub-division thereof, or any officer, official, agent or agency thereof, would constitute a confiscation of private property.

This question arose during the war of 1812 and subsequent to the civil war, and the Supreme Court of the United States has held again and again that the more enlightened view, and that which has been advocated by this Government for years, is that private property of an enemy found in this country should not be confiscated. (Brown vs. U. S., 12 Cranch 123, C. J. Marshall, 1814. See Mrs. Alexander's Cotton, 2 Wallace's Reports, 419; U. S. vs. Klein, 13 Wallace, 137.)

Assuming that Congress will direct the appropriation of these funds to the satisfaction of the American claims, despite our former policy, will the citizens of Germany, whose property has been so appropriated, not have a legal claim against their own Government for reimbursement?

If they have, it is apparent that the German Government will ultimately be obliged to reimburse its citizens up to the amount so appropriated, in addition to paying to the allied and associated Governments the full amount of indemnity agreed to by the Treaty of Peace, and fixed by the Reparations Commission. And yet, as I understand it, the Government has advised, or intends to advise, the allied and associated Governments that they do not intend to claim a share in the indemnity provided for by the treaty.

Could it not be justly claimed by the German Government that it will be entitled to be credited with the full value of the German property seized by our Government, on the total indemnity to be paid under the Treaty of Peace, thus forcing us to turn over this property to the allied and associated Governments? Of course, if an outside agreement has been arrived at at the Peace Conference to the effect that the United States may retain the German property seized here as its share of the indemnity, the question is unimportant, but why should that not be clearly stated in the Peace Treaty, so that no possible dispute may arise?

How can the Government consistently say, on the one hand, that it demands no share of the German indemnity, and, on the other hand, that this is because the losses of American citizens will be fully satisfied out of the German private property seized in the United States? We have no claim against these individual German owners.

Should we agree not to claim any share of the German indemnity, and should it then be found that we could not legally, and under the terms of the treaty, appropriate the proceeds of the German property seized in this country "to the just claims of American victims," would they not be wholly without remedy? And during the settlement of such an international controversy these claimants could in any event receive nothing.

I am not discussing the question of getting a profit out of the war, but of a just compensation, so far as compensation can be made, to the relatives and dependents of the women and children murdered on the high seas before our entry into the war by the illegal actions of the armed forces of the German Government.

WILLIAM C. ARMSTRONG.

FIRST CALL FOR ABYSSINIA!

Ambassadors Congratulate America on Part in War and Bespeak Attention to Trade Opportunities

OUT of Abyssinia they came bearing gifts, "ivory, apes and peacocks," tusks of ivory, and boxes of beaten gold. If the ambassadors in jeweled turbans from the land of Rasselas, the ancient Ethiopia, brought no apes and no peacocks, it must have been because of the red tape which strangles importation. Both apes and peacocks abound in their country.

Out of a land wreathed in the mists of antiquity, a plateau encompassed with mountain barriers, came Dedjazmatch Nado, Duke of the royal family and Commander in Chief of the army; Kantiba Gabrou, his amiable interpreter, and Ate Hirouy, Secretary of the municipality of Addis Abeba. Also there came, with a modesty befitting his station, Ato Snikae, Secretary to the Duke.

Ostensibly they were here to congratulate this lusty young republic on its part in the great war, and they did, amid proper ceremonials, tender their good wishes, felicitations, and gifts to Mr. Wilson; but in reality they came on a mission strangely out of keeping with the traditions of their land and the crimson Oriental robes they wore. They came to bespeak the attention of this hustling Yankee business race to its opportunities in Abyssinia. And once they got here they were so overwhelmed with the bustle and hurry about them that they almost forgot their mission.

It was Kantiba Gabrou who awoke, on the very eve of departure, to the importance of saying something about business.

"It is marvelous and wonderful," he said, "the respect you people have for work. It means to you what beauty means to others."

And that brought up the topic of industrial conditions in Abyssinia. The gray-bearded ambassador laughed at an inquiry as to whether his people showed any signs of adopting Bolshevism. He was glad, however, the question was asked. It was modern and American.

"The people at home are contented," he began. "They don't earn much, compared to what your workmen earn, but they do not need much. The country is rich and fertile, every man has his plot of ground, his corn, his animals. He doesn't have to work for others unless he wants to. He is not driven to it by need or hunger. With very little exertion he can manage to live in comfort.

"Abyssinia is an agricultural country, not industrial. So long as that is true there is very little danger of labor unrest. The country, you see, is made up of property-owners, small though they be.

"That does not mean that Abyssinia is free of unrest of any kind. Where there is no labor agitation there is agitation of a different sort. During the war there was bitter dissension of the question of our neutrality. I do not know whether you know that we had a civil war or a revolution in our country due to the pro-Ally and pro-German feeling, which constantly clashed and which finally came to a point.

"We had started out as neutrals. We wanted to maintain that neutrality. German propaganda soon had its effect on the nation; or, rather, let me say, on part of the nation. Unfortunately the King, who was the grandson of the past Emperor, leaned toward the cause of the Central Powers. His advisers were intensely pro-Ally, but he would not be moved from the path that the Germans had paved for him. Things kept on smoldering under cover of neutrality for a long time, but when the King finally came out definitely in his support of the program of the Teutonic powers, there was a general uprising and a definite avowal of causes. The revolution was in full play in 1916, at a time when it seemed that the Germans were going to conquer everything. Nevertheless, the pro-Ally side came out victorious in the struggle.

"The King was deposed and the daughter of the Emperor placed on the throne. No, it was not a matter of creating a precedent. Abyssinia has had women on her throne before. The present Queen is the third woman to sit on the throne in 4,000 years.

"Since the revolution things have been in comparative quiet. They have gone back to their old order. Our people are contented and happy. They have great faith in their rulers. It is no unusual thing for an Abyssinian monarch to travel about incognito for the purpose of seeing that justice is maintained for the rich and poor alike. The slave has as much right to be heard as his master.

"You ask me what is our relationship with Turkey. We have no relationship with Turkey. Turkey is Mohammedan; we are Christian; that is enough. Abyssinia, with Armenia, has been Orthodox Christian longer than any other country. Next to our Generals our priests are the strongest factors in the running of the Government. Although the Bishop is not a regular member of the staff of advisers of the King or Queen, he is called into conference on almost all important matters of State.

"There are many things that have impressed us greatly during our stay here. Your work, of course. You are always busy. All of you. Men and women alike. The trains are always busy; the lights are always busy. There is no dark here. It is always day; always light. I love your lights and illuminations. They are very wonderful and brilliant. Your bridges and your streets, too. They and the lights, I think, are the most wonderful. We need bridges and streets in Abyssinia. We need bridges and streets like yours. It would mean a good deal to us. But, you see, our people do not know about them. They know nothing about the wonders of the ordinary things that you see. Theirs is a very primitive life compared to this.

"Besides your streets and bridges and lights, we like your buildings. I have seen other modern buildings in other Western lands before, but yours are different. I think that they are your contribution to art.

"There are two other things that we have enjoyed very greatly. It may be you will think them funny. They are the police games and the body of the dinosaur in the Museum of Natural History. The first showed us what fine men your policemen were. The second was marvelous because it was something new; something of whose past existence we knew nothing.

"You ask us what it is that we would most desire to take home with us and I say it is your knowledge of things. We have visited some of your model farms; we have seen your machinery and your implements. That is what Abyssinia needs above all. Ours is a rich and fertile country. With but very little work our farmers easily make the soil yield a good product. Much of our land goes to waste. With your knowledge and your farming implements our land could be highly and richly developed. But it needs American men and American work to do it. We, when we return, shall spread the news of what is being done here with the help of machinery, but it will need your men, interested in the future of Abyssinia, to come over and demonstrate to our people that the things we speak are true. The Abyssinian is open to new reforms; he is willing to learn; the new thing interests him. It will be no hard task for you Americans to show him the way.

"We have had no Americans in Abyssinia. Not even missionaries. The American, as I can now readily understand, is not given to slow and tedious travel. He wants to get at things quickly. You can't get around Abyssinia quickly. There are mountains and tall plateaus. Most of our travel is done on pack mules. That, it seems, has kept the American man out of our country. It is too bad. There are so many opportunities for good work. We need bridges like yours, we need streets like yours, and we need men like yours to direct the building of them.

"During our entire stay here we have been impressed with your kind hospitality. Your people have made us feel very welcome. We felt all the time as though we were among friends.

"We dare not say everything that we might want to about our feelings toward your people. We do not express all that we feel within us. But some time, very soon we hope, when your people come to visit us, we will show you what your welcome here has meant to us."

Abyssinia is cut off from the Red Sea and the Gulf of Aden by French and Italian possessions varying in width from 40 to 250 miles. To the north is the Italian possession of Eritrea, to the east British, French, and Italian Somaliland territories, to the south British East Africa, and to the west the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan. The whole empire, which was formerly known as Ethiopia, lies within the tropics, although most of the interior has such a high elevation that the climate is temperate and healthful.

Addis Abeba, the capital, has an elevation of more than a mile and a quarter above sea level. Except for its royal residence and grounds, which occupy a hill commanding a view of the country in all directions, the city resembles a temporary military camp more closely than the capital of a kingdom. White tents and mean huts cover the country in a circle, whose diameter is about three miles.

No railroad connects this city of 40,000 inhabitants with the outside world, while the highways of the country are scarcely more than narrow trails traveled by pack mules and donkeys. Even Hargar, with a population of 50,000, the only other settlement in the kingdom having more than 5,000 inhabitants, has not yet been reached by the railway which is being constructed from Jibuti, the French Somaliland seaport on the Gulf of Aden. Harrar is 230 miles inland from Jibuti, and Addis Abeda is 220 miles still further west.

Menelik II., the Emperor whose death caused much internal strife over the question of succession to the throne, was a figure that might have stepped out from the pages of Arabian legends. In 1889 he had himself crowned Negus Negust, King of Kings of Ethiopia, Lion of Judah, and Emperor of Abyssinia. During his rule of twenty-five years he enjoyed unbounded honor as a national hero. There was no matter of personal welfare or happiness of the lowliest in the land that he did not think worthy of his attention.

Menelik had no heirs from his marriage with the Empress Taitu, who was his chief adviser during his rule. To cement his friendship with the people of the northern part of Abyssinia, Menelik married a daughter of his by a former marriage to Ras Michael, a Tigran Prince. It was the offspring of this marriage, Prince Lidj Eyassu, who became Emperor of Abyssinia at the death of Menelik, much against the wishes of the Empress Taitu. So fearful was Menelik that the Empress would endeavor to go against his wishes and place a member of her side of the house on the throne that, just before his death, he had the following proclamation issued to the people. It was read by the High Priest Matheas in the Hall of Audiences:

> If any one should be found so bold as to say, "We will not obey Eyassu and will allow the kingdom into disorder," may the malediction incurred by Judah, may the anathema launched against Arius fall upon him. May the land abjure him who abjures my words, and may a black dog be born to him for a son. Know all you whom I have raised to dignity, great and small, that I curse all who shall disobey me, and who, after my death, do not follow my nephew. Finally, lest Eyassu and his guardian should do evil and depart from my ways and from your will, know all of you that against them both I hurt the same anathema in case they betray their trust.

Even while Menelik was alive, Ras Michael, the guardian of Eyassu, made an attempt to surround the court with German advisers. The Empress fought strenuously against them, and before long two Germans whom Ras Michael had succeeded in introducing into the Abyssinian court were unceremoniously forced to leave. Ras Michael's influence, however, grew with the death of Menelik, and during the great war he openly espoused the cause of the Germans. It was then that the people rose in arms and deposed the Emperor Eyassu. Late in 1916, Ulzero-Zeddito, the present Empress, another daughter of Menelik, succeeded the boy Emperor on the throne.

FEDERAL NATIONAL GUARD

Former Officer Suggests That Government Control State Troops

By L. M. LAVELL,
Formerly Captain of Infantry, U. S. A.

IT is fairly evident now that the American people do not desire a large regular army. The fact remains that war is within the realm of possibility, and that one should have some real method of constructing an army of considerable size should necessity occasion it.

It is not sufficient to depend on the merit of the American civilian to defend the national honor, nor is it sufficient to point to our apparently marvelous successes in the war as an indication of America's invincibility. The American civilian is an excellent civilian, but a civilian nevertheless, and to put him in uniform and give him a military title does not make a soldier of him.

The Americans who do admit the possibility of another war seem sure that the only thing necessary will be to call for the men, and the enemy will be dispatched as quickly as they think we dispatched Germany. The people who believe this seemingly forget the length of time required to raise a body of any size. They have not seen, as I have, the men who eighteen months after her entry into war America sent to France as her defenders, men with hearts of gold and the determination to do their duty or die, but men sadly, painfully, and terribly lacking in the rudiments of military training.

Doubtless many will say that they accomplished their mission, so why bother to train men, when our recruits defeated the Kaiser's veteran divisions. That idea is erroneous. The fresh impetus given allied arms by the entry of America's young braves is not denied, but one must remember that England, France, Italy and the blockade had been weakening Germany for three years, and then only decide whether or not our troops won the war.

The requirements for commissions in the National Guard in some States are higher than in others. Also the support given the National Guard by the State administration varies with the different States. If the National Guard is dignified by the co-operation and support of the State Government, a better element is attracted and more exacting requirements result.

It appears that the solution, and the thing that will bring about uniformity, is a National Guard organized, maintained, and controlled by the Federal Government. The war showed the necessity of unity of command. Why, then, split our military establishment into as many different separate commands as there are States? It is a direct cause of weakness.

Instead of permitting each State to organize a National Guard of a certain size, why not require each thousand of population to supply a certain number of defenders? It seems quite logical that people who demand protection should supply the men. Each State or other subdivision should be required to supply by voluntary enlistment, or if that did not suffice, by selective draft, a minimum determined by population.

The requirements for commissions as well as the standards of training would then be uniform throughout the country. Promotions would be made within divisions, and the fact that an officer did not live in the immediate vicinity would not prevent his filling a position for which he might be qualified. A promotion system advancing 50 per cent. by seniority and 50 per cent. by merit alone would prove an excellent change.

With a system of this kind in which the selective service would be constantly in use expansion of the army would be simple. Each district would have a record of the number of men to be supplied, and even the name of the first draft. Regiments could, in addition to their regular organization, have a skeleton divisional organization, with officers and non-commissioned officers named to occupy each post. The companies created by this expansion could be formed on paper to include individual names. Surely, pride of organization would be as great, or even greater, than at present, for men from the same vicinity would be in the same unit.

Possibly objections to such a scheme would be raised by the various States, because control would pass from their hands. But why permit a system that is fundamentally wrong to exist? The National Guard would be available for any emergency, and could be turned out at the request of a State Governor. After all, the National Guard is for national defense, and the people of one section have a right to demand from other sections as much as they themselves give.

COCKLE BURR OIL.

ONE of the latest things that the chemists are transforming from the useless into the useful, according to The Ohio State Journal, is the cockle burr, which, to the majority of those who attempt to walk through a field where they grow, are merely an impish freak of nature to rile humanity. Now, however, oil is extracted from these burrs. It has a clear, yellow appearance, a pleasant odor, and an agreeable, nutty taste, and is likely to be used for food as well as paints and varnish, though full tests have not yet been made along these various lines.

MOVIES AS AID TO PROHIBITION

Claim Made That Picture Theatres Were Driving Rum Out of the Country Anyway

By WILLIAM FOX,
Motion-Picture Producer.

HOW will prohibition affect motion pictures?

Will the pictures be the one medium through which America will be brought to resign itself to total abstinence?

These two questions have been asked of me by persons in all walks of life before and since July 1, and the topic continues to occupy a heavy share of the day's conversations throughout the United States.

We are entitled to get straight on our facts before we answer any questions. Therefore, let us go back a little way into history.

We know definitely that rum was invented or concocted by man prior to the days of Noah and the ark, and we must reach back into the earlier periods of civilization, possibly into the days of barbarism, to find the reason for its having been called into existence as the good-little, bad-little brother of mankind.

It is my absolute opinion that rum was invented by man as a stimulant to help him over rough or depressed places in his daily life.

You could call it an invention for entertainment or diversion if you wished to, but its use through the ages has been more as a relief from sorrow or care or worry than as a means of amusement. I do not refer to wine, but to strong liquors, for it was the heavy use of strong liquors that brought the prohibition movement into prominence.

The idea of prohibition began through the abuse rather than the use of liquors. There was a time when in all walks of life, religious and secular, military and civil, in the mansion and in the cottage, liquor was just as much a part of the daily life as any article of food. In America the use of strong liquors became widespread because Americans always go in heartily for anything they do.

Then there grew up the American saloon, an institution which became a political centre. It was different from the drinking places of other parts of the world, which in most instances had food attachments or were housed in the inns and small hotels. It was in these highly polished, well-mirrored, brass-railed places that the American man began to indulge more and more in heavy drinking. They were so conveniently located that in the big cities a man rarely had to walk more than half a block in any direction before reaching a sorrow service station.

It is not my purpose to discuss in detail the long fight that resulted in the Federal prohibition amendment; the facts are pretty well known already to the American public. But I do propose to make certain observations which have to do with the future as well as with the past. They bear directly on the question of amusement on the one hand and relief from care and sorrow on the other.

I have noted that a man who sold liquor rarely drank it himself, and that the development of the drinking habit came to a man when, in time of trouble, he had need of his every faculty to overcome the obstacles that confronted him. At such time he would resort to a stimulant which stupefied his brain and got him in new trouble, instead of keeping clear-headed so that he might solve his problems and see a way out of his difficulties.

A very interesting fact is the natural decline in the popularity of liquor for general use in this country. Slowly but surely the people themselves were realizing that they had a greater and safer friend than liquor, and that this friend was the motion pictures. They were discarding liquor for the screen, and it is my fixed opinion that, even without a prohibition law, liquor would have been obsolete ten years hence.

Movie the Greatest Factor.

The greatest factor in the fight against liquor has been the motion picture. Men who had developed the habit of drinking for lack of something better to do discovered that, for less money than they would spend in one evening by themselves in the saloon, they could go to a motion-picture theatre and entertain themselves and their families at least twice a week. Ten years ago the most convenient and popular pastime for those who had nothing to do in the evening was liquor drinking, but since the establishment of motion-picture theatres in every city, town, village, and hamlet in the country, with the price of admission no greater than the price of a drink, it was only natural that the drinking public drifted away from the saloon to the newer, cleaner, more healthful entertainment, which did not deaden the brain, but, instead, amused and refreshed them. In the motion-picture theatre they forgot their troubles, they lost their worries, they were mentally comforted—and without any evil after effects.

Once the people began to go to motion pictures their thinking powers were stimulated, and when they began to think seriously and with clear heads they continued the amusements which were uplifting, educating, and tremendously entertaining.

The common man came to realize that when he drank liquor he was an enemy to himself, an enemy to his wife, an enemy and an improper guardian to his children; he was an incompetent employe, and, as his drinking became excessive, a disgrace to his family tree.

The motion picture theatre has made it possible for this man to reunite himself with his family. Proper recreation and amusement are as essential to the human body as are food and sleep. The motion picture provided for this need at a popular price of admission, and this made it possible, with the family life centring around this theatre, for the man to be a just husband, a real father, and a worthy employe—a true friend to men and a credit to his family tree.

Next-to-Theatre Bar.

As an illustration, many of the theatres which I now operate and which were formerly used for other forms of entertainment had adjoining them a store that was occupied for the sale of liquor, or a barroom in conjunction with the theatre proper.

For example, there was the old Dewey Theatre in Fourteenth Street, which sold liquor to its patrons while used for burlesque; the Gotham Theatre, which had a barroom in its theatre; the Star Theatre, which had a ginmill on the nearest corner, and, in addition, two ginmills on opposite corners of the thoroughfare. Just as soon as these places were converted into moving picture theatres and the clientele was established, these barrooms were forced to close, for they were unable to take in sufficient money to pay for their licenses.

No man has much opportunity to think of his future during his hours of actual toil. His brain reverts to himself after his working hours, to work out his personal problems and his own future. If it is well to stay sober while you are under the eyes of your employer—if that is to your employer's benefit—it must be an advantage to remain sober when, on your own time, you proceed to figure out your individual problems; for you can surely do that better in your sober senses than you could in your drunken senses.

One tremendous advantage to the public which has been demonstrated in the motion picture is that it really entertains and that this entertainment satisfies without the theatre management having to supply the added attraction of liquor. The so-called legitimate theatre or the burlesque theatre which had a barroom in its building or adjoining its building admitted publicly, by this fact, that its entertainment was not sufficient, and that it could please better a drunken audience than a sober one.

In the early history of this country, in the dealings of the white man with the Indian, it was possible for the white man to make a better business deal if he first filled the red man with fire-water. Applied to modern life, the same condition exists. A man with a clear brain can protect his family, his employer and himself far better if his amusements do not cloud his faculties.

What will prohibition do to motion pictures?

It will crowd the picture houses.

It will call for the building of better and finer theatres.

It will increase the number of theatres because amusement and recreation, relief from sorrow, worry, and care are essential. With the exhilaration of liquor gone—and, I believe, gone forever—the general public must be provided for.

It is evident that the motion picture now has reached a point in development where it is fully able to satisfy this demand for entertainment. No man can accurately foresee the extent of its growth, but what I believe to be a conservative estimate is that motion-picture houses will be trebled in the United States, and that their numbers will be increased in every country in the world—because, whether there be prohibition or not, liquor as an amusement cannot hope to cope with the motion picture.

NOTES ON CURRENT ART

THE fine exhibition in French art as applied to industry now being held in the Hotel Pennsylvania is used in an appeal sent out by the Art Alliance of America to point a moral and encourage a demand for better opportunities in industrial education for the masses in this country. This appeal contains quotations from a pamphlet issued by the Bureau of Education at Washington—a pamphlet entitled "Industrial Art a National Asset." A series of graphic charts with descriptive text by H. M. Kurtzworth, Director of the Grand Rapids School of Art and Industry, shows that art education can no longer be considered a luxury, but has become a necessity if the United States is to compete in industries with the markets of the world.

France has thirty-two schools of industrial art; there are thirty-seven centres affiliated with the Victoria and Albert Museum in England, in addition to important County Council craft schools in London. Equally well supplied are Italy, Denmark, Switzerland, and other European countries, including Germany, which before the war had fifty-nine industrial art schools, while the United States has but four which are really well equipped. Foreign industrial art schools, it is said, are almost without exception subsidised by the State, and this country needs industrial art institutions based upon local industries in every community. The pamphlet may be had free by applying to the Department of the Interior, Bureau of Education, Washington, D. C. The exhibition at the Pennsylvania is open for the present only to buyers, the public being invited from the middle of August.

Staten Island's museum is giving an exhibition which is free to the public and is attracting many visitors—a loan collection of war relics, trophies, posters, &c. There are some 1,000 souvenirs included in the exhibition loaned by some 100 men who have just returned from overseas. The collection is of much diversity. The museum, which is at the corner of Wall Street and Stuyvesant Place, St. George, S. I., is open from 9 to 5 on all week days and in the evening until 10 o'clock on Tuesdays. The closing date is Sept. 30.

All sorts of art books, as well as others from France, are going up 100 per cent. in price after the middle of this month, so the word comes from the other side. "Books must necessarily go up in France," says a Fifth Avenue art dealer who has just returned from Europe. "France had its own troubles with a scarcity of paper like our own, only more serious, and now there is a 75 per cent. duty on it. A great increase in the cost of the workmanship must also be counted in. French workers are not used to speeding up as we do over here, and changing from a twelve-hour day to one of eight hours is going to make a great difference in the output and in the manufacturing cost."

At the Academy Art Shop, 153 West Fifty-seventh Street, is a collection of twelve quaint painted panels, originals of the illustrations of Mary E. McAuley's book, "Behind the German Lines." The panels are amusingly interesting from the crudeness of the drawing (the author of the book, who is its illustrator, being self-taught) and the vivacity and action with which they tell their story. Most of the pictures represent the different "lines" into which the people formed to get food of different kinds during the war. The figures are small, and there are long, large open spaces in the pictures, but they are entirely free from monotony and each one is individual. Each line has its characteristics. There are more soldiers in the beer line, and children in gay-colored coats are to be seen in the candy line. One of the most characteristic little figures is a housemaid hurrying to get some household commodity, crossing the street. She wears a cap, but aside from that everything about her figura and her hurried gait show her to belong to the servant class. She is followed by a dachshund, only a little daub of paint, but unmistakably a dachshund. One picture shows moving day, a soldier and a dog pulling a little cart while two women push behind, another the line to the Opera House.

Many well-known people of this country and England appear in an exhibition of portraits on ivory by Lady Edgerly-Korsybska, (formerly Miss Edgerly, married recently to a Polish patriot of the late war,) opened at Belcourt, the home of Captain and Mrs. Perry Belmont at Newport, on Wednesday of last week. The artist has followed the example of some of the older English painters, and a number of her portraits show the subjects in character. Shiela Burden is shown as "The Four Seasons"; Mrs. Francis Carolan, "The Golden West"; Diana, daughter of Mrs. Joseph Widener, Jr., "The Huntress"; Hope Iselin, "Wind, Rain, Sunshine and Shadow"; Miss Helen Moran, "Dawn," and Miss Joseph Osborne, "Egyptian Night." Mrs. George Winthrop Sands is "Tanagra," and Mrs. Vanderbilt Webb is shown as a modern Madonna, with Maxime Elliott as "The Chase" and also as "Dawn," and Benjamin Kimball as "Collector of Amber." Mrs. James A. Burden, Miss Elsie de Wolfe, Mrs. Lydig Hoyt, and Mrs. Willard Straight are others represented. Washington society is well represented with potraits of Breckenridge Long, Third Assistant Secretary of State; Mrs. George and Mrs. Joseph Leiter, Lady Reading, wife of the last British Ambassador, completed a short time before she left for England; Mme. Zaldevar, a leader in the Latin-American colony in the capital. Mrs. Edward B. McLean and two children have the title of "Tree of Heaven."

The sixth annual exhibition of oil paintings will be held by the Mystic Art Association from Aug. 13 to Aug. 27 at Mystic, Conn. The exhibitors are George Bellows, Lester D. Boronda, Eliot Clark, Charles H. Davis, Frederick Detwiller, Paul Dougherty, J. Eliot Enneking, Frederick C. Frieseke, Maurice Fromkes, George V. Grinnell, Charles W. Hawthorne, Robert F. Logan, Leon Kroll, George Luks, Peter Marcus, Frank M. Moore, Parker Perkins, Henry W. Ranger, Harry L. Raul, Henry R. Selden, G. Albert Thompson. The exhibition is thus not merely a local affair. Exhibitions in regions popular with Summer pilgrims do a great deal of good. Not only are the surroundings almost invariably favorable to the holiday mood in which picture exhibitions ought always to be visited, whatever they may be, but the impression made is deeper when visitors have leisure to enjoy the work shown and let its special character sink into their consciousness. The mental picture of the artist's personality, as expressed in his painting, is much clearer and more enduring than is possible when the exhibition is traversed during the hurried months of the Winter, with innumerable other visual experiences chasing one another through the mind of the observer.

An interesting recent addition to the Cleveland Museum, acquired through the generosity of Mrs. John Huntington, is a large mosaic pavement of the first century A. D., supposed to have been excavated from the villa of Livia, wife of the Emperor Augustus. It is in red, buff, black, and white in conventional designs, and is representative of the best work of this kind of the ancient Romans. The pavement has been laid in the east end of the Garden Court of the museum, a setting for an important group of Roman garden furniture of the same period. The furniture was presented by Mrs. Huntington in 1917, and the search for an appropriate pavement for a setting has been in progress since.

Steady Work for Women

The 3,000 workers with the American Optical Company have not been disturbed by dull times. The industry is growing. It employs unskilled and all types of skilled factory and office workers, including 1,000 women. It is considerate of living accommodations and conducts a club for women. The plant is one of New England's finest.

The Treaty

Complete—Word for Word

WITH MAPS

Just as it was signed at Versailles and just as it was deposited in the archives of the French Republic.

The first publication in America of the official text with maps. It is more complete even than the official document which appeared in the U. S. Congressional Record, for the Government publication was without maps.

FOR AUGUST

THE MONTHLY PERIODICAL PUBLISHED BY THE NEW YORK TIMES COMPANY

Also in August Issue:

The Treaty Creating the New Polish State (with its important clauses relating to the protection of religious and racial minorities), also

The Franco-American-British Alliance in textual form.

In the August issue of Current History there is also printed a complete, consecutive, thrilling account of how the agreement was finally reached, the signing of the document, its ratification by Germany, and the declarations regarding it by President Wilson, Secretary Lansing, Premiers Clemenceau and Lloyd George.

The August Current History Magazine contains also a survey of important happenings during July in the chief nations of the world, with special accounts of the month's phases in Russia, Poland, Germany, Czechoslovakia, and the United States.

The illustrations in the August number are in rotogravure, and portray the historic signing of the treaty and other events of permanent historical interest.

There are 18 cartoons by artists of reputation on international events.

Current History Magazine differs from other review periodicals in that it omits Editorial Comment. It gives the authentic facts based on official records—the reader is permitted to put his own interpretation on these facts and reach his own conclusions without having any opinions of the magazine thrust upon him.

CHRONOLOGICAL REVIEW OF THE WAR'S FIFTH YEAR

World Peace as Revealed by Interallied Conference Contrasted with Academic Criticism and Armed Revolts Against New Order of Governments and Peoples

A YEAR ago when the fifth year of the great conflict dawned twenty-two nations, not including Russia and Rumania, were fighting Germany. Four years before Germany had begun her great effort to control the world. From the beginning of August, 1914, until in 1918 the surrender of Bulgaria in September, the capitulation of Turkey in October, and the armistice with Austria-Hungary and Germany in November, the results which have now deprived Germany of 7,000 square miles of European territory, 1,027,820 square miles of foreign possessions, cost her $80,000,000,000, including indemnities, demanded trial of her guilty leaders, caused the disruption of the Hapsburg Empire, the partition of Turkey, and the freedom of at least four formerly subject peoples, but with the still chaotic situation in Russia, appear in retrospect to have been shaped as follows:

Belgium's opposition to the march of the German armies on France, the isolation of the German fleet by the British, the battles of the Marne and Somme, the sea engagement off Jutland, the Teutonic drive through Galicia neutralized by the entry of Italy into the war, while among partly military and partly moral influences have been the German atrocities in France and Belgium, the sinking of the Lusitania, the German U-boat campaign, the attitude of the United States leading her to war, and the supreme command of the western armies under Marshal Foch by which Germany was ultimately driven to seek an armistice.

Until the time of the meeting of the Peace Congress in Paris on Jan. 18 those events which, from Aug. 1, 1918, had brought it into being may be emphasized here by diplomatic and military events and a combination of both, for by them the administration of the various armistices and capitulations, although essentially military, were shaped. A record of the purely military events will be found on the opposite page.

On Sept. 27, 1918, the President of the United States, in an address delivered in New York City, put into concrete form his twenty-two articles as a working formula for the negotiation of peace. There followed, Oct. 5, Germany's, Austria-Hungary's, and Turkey's acceptance of this formula; Oct. 8, the President's request for Germany's bona fide; Oct. 12, Germany's reply, in the name of the German people and the Reichstag leaders; Oct. 14, President Wilson's questioning of Germany's bona fide; Oct. 19, the President's new formula for Austria-Hungary, based on the Allies' recognition of belligerency of subject peoples; Oct. 21, Germany's full description of her bona fide; Oct. 23, the President's definition of acceptable armistice and his submission of current correspondence to the Allies; Oct. 29, Austria-Hungary's appeal to the President for an immediate armistice; and, Oct. 31, the Foch armistice, formulated by the Interallied War Council at Versailles.

On Nov. 11 the Foch armistice was signed for thirty-six days; on Dec. 14 it was renewed until Jan. 17, 1919, five days after the Supreme War Council met in Paris and began the actual consideration of the peace settlement, which thenceforth developed as follows:

At the Peace Conference.

Jan. 18.—Paris Peace Conference meets with twenty-one nations and autonomous dependencies represented and is addressed by President Poincaré. Premier Clemenceau made permanent Chairman.

Jan. 19.—Regulations adopted; United States, British Empire, France, Italy, and Japan to constitute Supreme Council.

Jan. 25.—Conference declares for the creation of a League of Nations.

Jan. 26.—Premier Clemenceau constitutes Committees on Responsibility for the War; Reparation; International Labor Legislation, and Regulation of Ports, Waterways, and Railroads.

Feb. 7.—The United States having recognised the monarchy of the Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes, (Jugoslavia,) the Serbian delegation takes this more comprehensive mandate.

Feb. 11.—Jugoslav delegates ask President Wilson to arbitrate between them and the Italian delegates in regard to the Adriatic problem. The proposition is rejected by Italy on Feb. 18.

Feb. 14.—President Wilson explains the Constitution of the League of Nations to the full conference.

Feb. 16.—Foch armistice is again renewed with Germany accepting new conditions under protest.

March 1.—Foch presents military terms for Peace Treaty to conference, which is agreed to on March 10 by Supreme War Council—the German Army to be limited to volunteer force of 100,000.

March 18.—Rhine and Heligoland questions settled by committees.

March 24.—From Supreme Council of Ten executive heads for the conference it becomes a Council of Four—President Wilson and Premiers Lloyd George, Clemenceau and Orlando.

April 10.—League of Nations Commission adopts stipulation that covenant shall not affect the Monroe Doctrine and "similar regional understandings."

April 11.—Commission on International Labor Legislation presents report before full conference.

April 12.—The Sarre Valley coal question settled by Reparation Committee.

April 18.—First report of Franco-American and Franco-English defensive treaties circulated.

April 23.—President Wilson issues statement announcing that the Treaty of London, April 26, 1915, by the terms of which Italy entered the war, has become inoperative at the conference, and that Fiume, in spite of the pro-Italian plebiscitum of its people, Oct. 25, 1918, shall go to Croatia, as designated in the treaty. This statement had been preceded by a similar document addressed to the conference on April 14.

April 25.—Polish problem for sea outlet reported settled.

April 26.—Withdrawal of Premier Orlando reduces council to three, which approves reports of Commissions on Ports, Highways, and Railways, and on Finance.

April 27.—Report of Commission on International Labor Legislation made public.

April 28.—Revised covenant of League of Nations is presented to full conference, with President Wilson explaining changes.

April 30.—Council of Three concedes Japan's claim to German lease (1898) of Kiao-Chau with industrial rights to the Chinese Province of Shantung, subsequently negotiated with China.

May 1.—German peace delegates present their credentials at Versailles.

May 5.—Sir Eric Drummond, Secretary General of the League of Nations, convenes first meeting of Organizing Committee.

May 6.—Council of Three decides mandates for former German colonies—Japan becomes mandatary for those on Pacific islands north of the equator; Great Britain and her dependencies for all the others.

May 7.—Representatives of the twenty-seven allied and associated nations composing the full conference hand German delegates the peace terms, with an allowance of fifteen days in which to submit observations in writing.

May 12.—Conference receives Korean petition asking for repudiation of Japan's annexation of the Hermit Kingdom.

May 14.—Austrian peace delegates arrive in Paris, and present their credentials at St. Germain five days later.

May 21.—Council of Four, Premier Orlando having returned to the conference, extends Germany's time for criticism of peace terms for one week.

May 29.—German delegation submits observations on peace terms, characterizing the treaty as "victorious violence" and as impossible of execution.

June 2.—Austrian delegates receive the terms for Austria, save those dealing with frontiers of new nations made out of the old Hapsburg Empire.

June 7.—President Seitz condemns peace terms in Austrian National Assembly.

June 12.—Council of Four recognizes the belligerency of the Omsk Government of the Russian anti-Bolshevist leader, Admiral Kolchak, expresses sympathy for his policy, and promises material aid.

June 16.—Revised terms with Germany handed to the German delegation, headed by Count Brockdorff-Rantzau.

June 22.—German National Assembly, by a vote of 237 to 138, authorizes signing of the treaty.

June 25.—Dr. von Bethmann Hollweg, who was German Imperial Chancellor at the opening of the war, addresses a note to the conference, accepting sole responsibility for the acts of the Kaiser, whose trial by an international court is required in the treaty of peace.

June 29.—Turkish delegation, which had arrived in Paris and presented the Turkish case on June 17, is dismissed by the Allied Council, as the case is not ready for discussion.

June 28.—Germany signs treaty at Versailles, being represented by Dr. Hermann Müller and Dr. Johannes Bell. Chinese delegation declines to sign, owing to the Shantung settlement. Interallied treaty with Poland also signed.

July 2.—Text of Polish treaty with allied and associated powers made public in America.

July 25.—Bulgar delegation arrives in Paris.

July 20.—Austrian delegates receive full text of Peace Treaty—army cut to volunteer force of 30,000, to repair invaded areas and aid Italy and Serbia, and indemnities to run 30 years.

July 21-22.—While American delegates are said to uphold Bulgaria's claims to Thrace, there is criticism of this attitude on the ground that the United States and Bulgaria were not at war.

July 22.—Report of pressure being brought on Japanese delegates to renounce political, territorial, and industrial control over Shantung.

July 25.—Report that by the Bulgar treaty of peace Bulgaria will be obliged to pay between two and three billion dollars.

July 30.—Peace Conference, through its chairman, Premier Clemenceau, protests against selling of German State property in Schleswig, whose status, according to the Peace Treaty, is to be adjusted by plebiscitum.

July 31.—Report that Poland will receive Galicia, but with a limited autonomy.

Aug. 1.—Interallied Military Commission in a report on recent disturbances in Fiume blames Italian authorities.

Aug. 4.—Belgium opens her case before the Commission of Fourteen for revision of neutrality treaty of 1839.

Aug. 8.—Conference reaches a solution in regard to Thrace, the Balkans evidently depriving Bulgaria of Aegean littoral.

America and the Treaty.

Dec. 18.—Senator Knox criticises President's proposal for League of Nations.

Dec. 21.—Senator Lodge criticises the President's Fourteen Points as basis for Peace Treaty.

Feb. 14.—Johnson resolution demanding withdrawal of United States troops from Russia turned down by majority of one in Senate.

Feb. 28.—Mr. Lodge opens campaign against the League of Nations covenant in Senate.

March 1.—Senator Knox also criticises covenant, and on March 3 recommends its rejection by the next Congress, thirty-seven Republican Senators of that Congress having signed his resolution.

March 4.—Sixty-fifth Congress ends.

March 26.—Former Supreme Court Justice Charles E. Hughes proposes amendments to covenant.

May 19.—Sixty-sixth Congress meets with Republicans in control in Senate and House.

May 20.—Message of President received by cable from Paris read in both branches.

May 23.—Senate debates extent of President's rights "to make" treaties under the Constitution.

June 2.—Senator Johnson condemns covenant as likely to embroil the United States in quarrels.

June 3.—Senator Lodge charges scandal in regard to the text of the Treaty of Peace being in the hands of unauthorized persons, while the Senate has not officially received it. Senator Borah supplements his remarks.

June 6.—Senate votes to investigate Lodge-Borah charges, and on June 9 Senator Borah produces a copy of the treaty and succeeds in having it read into the Congressional Record; on June 11 Elihu Root appears as witness before Treaty Investigating Committee and asserts the right of private ownership to copies of treaty.

June 21.—Elihu Root advises Senate Republicans how to register their objections to the covenant in a letter to Senator Lodge.

June 30.—Senator Borah asserts that "the big interests" are back of propaganda to force the covenant upon the Senate.

July 10.—President Wilson expounds the Peace Treaty to the Senate.

July 14.—Senator Swanson urges support of Peace Treaty with League of Nations incorporated—a Senate address supposed to represent the President's views.

July 15.—Senator Lodge declares the Shantung provision to have been a bribe to Japan, and Senator Norris awaits the "outrage perpetuated on China."

July 22—Senate Foreign Relations Committee, headed by Mr. Lodge, declared by a vote of 8 to 7 that it would be illegal to approve a temporary commissioner for execution of treaty before the instrument itself had been ratified by Senate, thus rejecting the President's request.

July 24—Heated debate begun by Republican Senators for reservations as to treaty, Article X. of Franco-American Treaty particularly assailed.

July 26-Aug. 7.—In the Senate the Kiau-Chau and Shantung concessions are debated with conflicting reports from Secretary Lansing, and the diplomats of China and Japan, in Washington, Peking, Tokio, and Paris, Article X. of Franco-American Treaty vs. Republican Senators' suggestions for reservations.

Mortality Estimated at 20,000,000, With Over 7,000,000 Soldiers.

ACCORDING to the most authoritative or official statistics, the deaths directly due to the war or indirectly inflicted by it number between 16,000,000 and 20,000,000, over 7,000,000 of which were military and over 10,000,000 civilian. Of the civilian deaths, over 100,000 were directly caused and nearly 10,000,000 indirectly caused by it.

In the first category of civilian deaths there were the 292 Americans and the 20,620 British subjects killed at sea, 1,270 British victims of air raids, 30,000 Belgian and 40,000 French victims of German atrocities, and 7,500 neutral victims of the U-boat. The second category includes 1,085,441 Serbs dead through starvation or disease, 4,000,000 deaths from influenza and pneumonia, beyond the normal figure, and the 4,000,000 Armenian, Syrian, Greek, and Jewish victims of the Turks. The following table, based on the official reports, has been brought up to date as far as possible:

Reconstruction and Demobilization

DATA published since the armistice have proved that while the man power and material resources of the United States had scarcely been tapped since the country entered the war, Great Britain, France, and Italy were summoning their last reserves of strength, Austria-Hungary was completely exhausted, Turkey was living from hand to mouth, while Germany and Bulgaria could have continued the struggle much longer had it not been for the fear of internal revolution, and that a longer war would have exacted a conqueror's peace on the part of the allied and associated nations. Germany, however, did not escape revolution while a pro-entente coupe d'état in Bulgaria effected a similar status there. Of all the nations engaged in the war Germany and Bulgaria were the least vitally affected.

Bolshevist and Race Wars

THE principles of universal dominance by the workers with the hands, the elimination of capital, and the middle class becoming the employes of the workers instead of the capitalists which were forced on revolutionary Russia in November, 1917, played a conspicuous part in the last year of the war and was not without influence in shaping peace and the carrying out of peace, expressing itself from pure anarchy to more or less legal attempts to secure a better equilibrium between workers, capital, and Government disrupted by the exigencies of war.

Added to the struggles thus brought about have been others dealing with races and those nationals whom the war had freed from their old, artificial allegiance. So that on the eve of the signing of peace with Germany Andrew Bonar Law, British Chancellor of the Exchequer, noted twenty-three wars then operating as the outgrowth of the great conflict. In these wars, revolts, and disturbances, the most conspicuous events have been as follows:

Aug. 3.—United States announces its plan to aid the apparently responsible Government in Siberia with a small body of troops and a large amount of material in co-operation with Japan, France, and England.

Aug. 15.—American troops from Philippines land at Vladivostok. British force, marching 700 miles from Mesopotamia, reaches Baku, in Caspian region.

July 23.—United States Navy report says that 316,554 enlisted men have been discharged since the armistice.

July 30.—According to a British Admiralty statement of the German fleet scuttled at Scapa Flow, one battleship, three light cruisers, and fifteen destroyers are ready to be salved.

Aug. 6.—A new edition of Lloyd's Register gives the world's gross steam tonnage between June, 1914, and June, 1919, as follows:

	1914.	1919.
United Kingdom	18,892,000	16,345,000
British dominions	1,632,000	1,863,000
United States, (seagoing)	2,027,000	9,773,000
United States, (Great Lakes)	2,260,000	2,160,000
France	1,922,000	1,962,000
Holland	1,472,000	1,574,000
Italy	1,430,000	1,238,000
Japan	1,708,000	2,325,000
Norway	1,957,000	1,591,000
Sweden	1,015,000	917,000
World's total	45,404,000	47,897,000

By means of an intricate calculation Lloyd's has summarized the net results of the war on the world's merchant steam tonnage as follows:

LOSS OF WORLD SHIP TONNAGE.

British	5,202,000
Foreign, except United States	9,000,000
Total	14,202,000
Net gains United States tonnage	6,729,000
Net world loss	7,473,000

FINAL OFFICIAL DATA COLLATED FOR THE FIRST TIME

Last Hundred Days' Fighting Condensed from Reports of Pershing and Haig, Diaz and Cavan, Esperey and Milne, Allenby and Marshall, and Sir J. L. Van Deventer

A YEAR ago the general military situation which in a few weeks was to bring about the surrender of Bulgaria and Turkey and the capitulation of Austria-Hungary and Germany was as follows:

The enemy effectives were officially estimated at over 7,000,000 men; those of the Allies at over 19,000,000. The former were diminishing, the latter were increasing. Over 1,250,000 United States troops had been sent overseas, of whom 700,000 had already been engaged. Nearly 13,000,000 men of military age were about to be registered here. The extent of the emplacements for equipment and transportation of the United States armies in France were the greatest the world had ever seen and in keeping with the enormous amount of material and the number of men constantly received there.

In France and Belgium the German line of attack of 195 miles, on which an average of 8,886 men to the mile had been used, had by July 18 been expanded to a line of defense of 250 miles, on which the enemy average was 7,180. By Aug. 1, 1918, it had been reduced by the Allies to nearly 220, with its defenders averaging less than 7,000 to the mile and with no effective army of manoeuvre available. Thanks to the United States, Foch at that time had what might be called an army of manoeuvre of between 500,000 and 700,000 rifles. From March to the 1st of June he had had none. The alternative presented to Ludendorff was decisive: He must either order a general retreat to the fortifications of the Rhine, Meuse, and the Moselle or consult the Government as to the advisability of capitulation. The former meant an enormous loss in men and material, the latter a revolution.

On the Italian front an Austrian offensive which had been begun on June 15-16 had been met with a counter-offensive which had placed the Montello, Zenson, and Capo Sile sectors in Italian hands. In the mountains of the Trentino and down the Piave over 2,000,000 Italians, including British and French divisions, one American regiment and a Czechoslovak detachment were facing less than 1,000,000 Austrian, Hungarian, Croatian, and Slovene troops.

In Macedonia the allied armies were marking time, waiting on political events. There General Franchet d'Esperey had just succeeded General Guillaumat. He had under him, from Lake Ochrida to the Aegean Sea twenty-nine divisions, or 725,000 men, facing nearly 500,000 Bulgarians, including the famous German Eleventh Army. On his left, to the Adriatic, was an Italian army of 300,000 facing an Austrian army of about half as many.

In Asiatic Turkey: In Palestine the Anglo-Egyptian line, with the Hedjaz auxiliaries in its right, all under General Allenby, extended beyond Jerusalem, from the River Jordan to the Sea; here he was opposed by the Seventh, Eighth, and Fourth Turkish Armies consisting of over 100,000 men, while his own forces reached nearly 100,000, with about 100,000 Arab auxiliaries, hardly effective in the European sense. In Mesopotamia General Marshall had an effective Anglo-Indian army of 420,000, then, slowly advancing up the Tigris and Euphrates and with difficulty keeping open lines of communication with Northern Persia, was opposed by Turkish mobile forces numbering not over 15,000, whose greatest force, 9,000 rifles and 59 guns, was concentrated on the Tigris, south of Moselle.

In German East Africa General von Lettow-Vorbeck, with his depleted army of Germans and blacks, had been turned north from Portuguese East Africa and was being pursued by energetic columns of the Allies.

Neither in men nor material had Austria-Hungary, Bulgaria, Turkey, or East Africa anything further to hope for from Germany on account of the military situation on the Western front already described.

On the seas American troops were being safely convoyed to Europe, the destruction of submarines was greater than the output, and, although the world's net loss by them had been over 7,000,000 gross tons, monthly replacements were forging ahead of the monthly losses. The great German fleet, which had survived the battle of Jutland, had greatly fallen off in efficiency of material and in morale of personnel, large quantities of armament being used on land and many men being drafted for land service or impressed into U-boat work.

On every front the Allies held the supremacy of the air, crippling the enemy's lines of communication, detonating his ammunition dumps, and bombing his concentration camps almost at will. The British Admiralty was constructing two huge dirigibles for the bombardment of Berlin.

Operations on the Western Front

THE series of assaults on the western front which drove Germany out of the war had begun on July 18, when an attack was made on the western side of the enemy's Marne salient, made possible through his simultaneous failure three days before to break the line east of Rheims and to extend his positions south of the Marne. Between July 18 and Aug. 1, the enemy was in full retreat between the Marne and Vesle but still clinging to the plateau south of Soissons on the west flank of the salient and to the emplacements around Rheims on the east.

It will be recalled that the enemy had established five great salients between March 21 and July 15, without, however, securing their connecting sectors, and from June 26 till the launching of the first Foch offensive on July 18 the Germans had been obliged to surrender strategic positions on the perimeters of these sectors, which were from north to south: the Lys begun on April 9, the great Picardy which opened the general enemy offensive on March 21, the Aisne, on a forty-mile front between Noyon and Rheims, the Oise-Aisne, June 9, on a twenty-mile front between Noyon and Montdidier stopped short by the French near Hautebraye, and finally, on July 15, the drive across the Marne.

After the enemy had been forced well to the northern bank of the Vesle, thus reducing the Marne salient and part of the Aisne and the Oise, attacks were made on the Lys (Aug. 5) and on the Picardy, (Aug. 8,) which were carried successfully to their base lines. These were succeeded by the wiping out by the First American Army on Sept. 12 of the St. Mihiel salient, which had been established to the Meuse early in the war; the advance of the American Second Army through the Argonne, begun on Oct. 12, at first in accord with the French army in Champagne on its left, and finally the general advance from Flanders to Metz, begun on Sept. 28 by naval bombardments from Nieuport to Zeebrugge, accelerated by the advance of the Belgian Army in a second offensive begun Oct. 14 through Flanders and continued by the expansion of attacks already begun and those of subsequent dates throughout the front as far east as Metz.

According to a report prepared by General Pershing's Staff the opposing armies in terms of rifle strength was thus represented on Aug. 1: Allies, 1,672,000; Germans, 1,395,000. On April 1 the ratio had been 1,245,000 to 1,569,000. On Nov. 1 it was to be 1,485,000 to 866,000.

There were to be employed from Aug. 1 till Nov. 11, 102 French divisions and 60 British with an average of 15,000 men each, together with 29 American divisions, 3 Belgian divisions, 2 Italian divisions, and Polish and Czechoslovac detachments. The American divisions averaged 30,000 men each.

By armies the distribution, from Flanders to south of Metz, was as follows: The Belgian; Sixth French, under Degoutte; Second British, under Plumer; Fifth British, under Birdwood; First British, under Horne; Third British, under Byng with the Second American Army Corps. (All north of the horizontal line Amiens-St. Quentin:) Fourth British, under Rawlinson; First French, under Debeney; Tenth French, under Mangin with Italians under Morrono and other auxiliaries under Berthelot; and from Rheims to before Metz, the Fourth French under Gouraud, and the Second and First American Armies.

Aside from the Second American Corps, (27th and 30th Divisions,) with the British third, the 2d Division was, for a time, with the Fourth French Army, the 33d with the seventeenth French Army Corps, and the 37th with the Thirty-fourth French Army Corps, on the Scheldt.

(From Field Marshal Haig's Report.)

By the end of July the reconstruction of the British armies had been completed; the 9th Corps under command of Lieut. Gen. Sir A. Hamilton-Gordon consisting of four divisions subsequently joined by the Nineteenth was bracketed with the Sixth French Army. The First French Army, General Debeney, had been placed under the command of Haig.

At a conference held on July 23, when the success of the attack on July 18 was well assured, the methods by which the advantage already gained could be extended were discussed in detail. The allied Commander in Chief asked that the British, French, and American Armies should each prepare plans for local offensives, to be taken in hand as soon as possible, with certain definite objectives of a limited nature. These objectives on the British front were the disengagement of Amiens and the freeing of the Paris-Amiens railway by an attack on the Albert-Montdidier front. The role of the French and American Armies was to free other strategic railways by operations further south and east.

Aug. 8.—Rawlinson, with the Fourth British on an eleven mile front attacked, with the First French, under Debeney following, completely surprising the enemy, and the British reaching their first objective—Demuin, Marcelcave, Cerisy, south of Morlancourt—and reoccupying all the defenses of Amiens save Le Quesnel. Over 13,000 prisoners and between 300 and 400 guns are captured. The French gain the line Pierrepont-Plessier-Fresnoy, with a capture of 3,350 prisoners and many guns.

Aug. 9-12.—Le Quesnel taken and the old line Roye-Chaulnes reoccupied.

Aug. 13.—Battle broken off and attack diverted from the Fourth Army's front to that of the Third to operate in the direction of Bapaume.

Aug. 21-22.—The 4th and 6th Corps of the Third Army advance in a fog between Miraumont and Moyenneville, and reach the railway line and beyond at Courcelles and Moyenneville. On Aug. 22 the 3d Corps forces the River Ancre and captures Albert.

Aug. 23.—Main attack opens on a thirty-five-mile front from the junction with the French to the old Arras-Vimy defense line of 1916.

Aug. 24.—Third Army reattacks in conjunction with the 4th, carrying the high ground between Bray and La Boisselle and the positions on the Thiepval Ridge.

Aug. 27-30.—The line north of the Somme from Clery-sur-Somme to Hendecourt reached. Bapaume taken. The French take Noyon.

Aug. 30-31.—British hold line Sailly-Reincourt-les-Bapaume, the ridge east of Baucourt, Longatte, and have taken Bullecourt, Hendecourt, and Rebicourt-les-Cagnicourt.

Sept. 1 marks the close of the second stage in the British offensive. Having in the first stage freed Amiens by our brilliant success east of that town, in the second stage the troops of the Third and Fourth Armies, comprising 23 British divisions, by skillful leading, hard fighting, and relentless and unremitting pursuit, in 10 days had driven 35 German divisions from one side of the old Somme battlefield to the other, thereby turning the line of the River Somme. In so doing they had inflicted upon the enemy the heaviest losses in killed and wounded, and had taken from him over 34,000 prisoners and 270 guns.

Sept. 2.—Canadian Corps of the First Army breaks through the Drocourt-Quéant line of the Hindenburg defense system. The British line reaches as far south as Péronne.

Sept. 3-8.—Ten British divisions overthrow thirteen German on the Scarpe and the French reach the east bank of the Croz at Canal, following a German retreat to east bank of the Canal du Nord.

Sept. 12-17.—Fourth and Sixth Corps of Third Army attack on five-mile front in Havrincourt sector, capturing Holnon village and wood and approaching Le Verguier.

Sept. 18.—Third and Fourth Armies with French co-operating south of Holnon attack on seventeen-mile front from Holnon to Gouzeaucourt and advance three miles. Prisoners taken, Sept. 12-18, 12,000, and 100 guns.

Sept. 27-Oct. 5.—Fourth, Third and First Armies attack from near St. Quentin north to the Scheldt, reaching by the end of the first day the line Beaucamp-Ribecourt-Fontaine-Notre Dame east of Haynecourt-Epinoy-Oisy-le-Verger and taking 10,000 prisoners and 200 guns. On Sept. 29, with the French on their right, the Fourth Army with the 2d American Corps attacks on a twelve-mile front between Holnon and Vendhuille, breaking through the Hindenburg line, forcing the enemy to withdraw from Lens and Armentières.

Sept. 28-Oct. 1.—The Second Army, with the Belgians and divisions of the Sixth French Army, open the Flanders campaign, directed by the King of the Belgians, clearing left bank of the Lys from Comines southward, the Belgians passing to the general line of Moorslede-Staden-Dixmude.

Oct. 6-12.—Fourth and Third Armies and the right wing of the First move forward, with their left covered by the canal line Cambrai-Mons and their right by the First French Army, capturing Maubeuge and forcing the enemy to retreat to the line of the Meuse by disrupting his lateral lines of communication. These operations bring the Allies to the line Selle-Scheldt Rivers, having, with 20 British infantry, 2 British cavalry, and 1 American infantry divisions, routed 24 German divisions, taken 12,000 prisoners and 50 guns, and gaining the important double-track railway St. Quentin-Cambrai, via Busigny.

Oct. 14-22.—British, Belgian, and French forces resume the Battle of Flanders, clearing the Lys and forcing the evacuation of Ostend on the north and Lille on the south, the British reaching the general line of the Scheldt on the whole front from Valenciennes to the neighborhood of Avelghem.

Oct. 17-25.—British Fourth Army and French First launch attack from Le Cateau southward along the line of the Sambre et Oise Canal, going beyond the Le Quesnoy-Valenciennes Railway. In these operations covering the River Selle 24 British and 2 American divisions defeated 31 German and captured 20,000 prisoners and 475 guns.

Nov. 1-11.—Battle of the Sambre: Part of Third and First Armies advance over the Le Quesnoy-Valenciennes front, then with the Fourth Army force the enemy to retreat to the Sambre, in which operations 20 British divisions utterly rout 32 German, capturing 19,000 prisoners and more than 450 guns. Nov. 5, Fourth Army goes beyond Prisches and Maroilles, the Third through Mormal Forest. Nov. 8, First and Third Armies cross Honnelle River and enter Ancre and Hautmont. Nov. 9, general retreat of the enemy along the whole British front, with Maubeuge occupied by the Fourth.

In the decisive contests of this period, (Aug. 8-Nov. 11,) the strongest and most vital parts of the enemy's front were attacked by the British, his lateral communications were cut and his best divisions fought to a standstill. On the different battlefronts 187,000 prisoners and 2,850 guns were captured by us, bringing the total of our prisoners for the present year to over 201,000. Immense numbers of machine guns and trench mortars were taken also, the figures of those actually counted exceeding 29,000 machine guns and some 3,000 trench mortars. These results were achieved by 59 fighting British divisions, which in the course of three months of battle engaged and defeated 99 separate German divisions.

The First American Army was organised on Aug. 10, 1918, under General Pershing's personal command. The American sector, first extending from Port sur Seille, east of the Moselle to a point opposite Verdun, afterward to be extended west to the Argonne Forest, included the 2d Colonial French, which held the point of the St. Mihiel salient, and the 17th French Corps, which occupied the heights above Verdun. Major General Hunter Liggett, with the 1st Corps, commanded the right. Approximately 600,000 troops were involved and the greatest number of air forces ever concentrated, including the French Independent Air Force and British bombing squadrons. It was forty miles around the nose of the salient, from the Moselle to opposite Verdun. The tanks were manned partly by Americans and partly by Frenchmen. Prior to the attack on the St. Mihiel salient, Sept. 12, the operations of American divisions had been, since Aug. 3, principally with the Mangin and Berthelot armies, as follows:

Aug. 3.—Soissons was occupied. Acting with the 4th Division, the 32d Division reached a line from Ville Savoye to a point just north of St. Gilles.

Aug. 4.—A large enemy patrol attacked in the vicinity of Coulées, but was driven off by a combat group of the 5th Division. The 32d Division took Fismes.

Aug. 8.—Eleven companies of infantry and some machine-gun detachments of the 28th Division reached the north bank of the Vesle.

Aug. 10.—The 28th Division launched an attack in Fismette.

Aug. 17.—After strong artillery preparation the infantry of the 5th Division captured the village of Frapelle and consolidated the lines north of the road.

Aug. 21.—The 32d Division, acting with the 10th French Army, advanced to and held Juvigny.

The 77th Division cleared the small wood between the Vesle and the railroad west of Château du Diable.

Sept. 3.—During the five days prior to Sept. 3 the 32d Division captured 11 officers and 920 enlisted men. A patrol of the 77th Division penetrated to Bazoches.

Sept. 5.—French and American units advanced in the Oise-Rheims area as far as Condé. Strong patrols of the 77th Division were pushed forward north of the Vesle and were encountered by machine-gun resistance. The 28th Division crossed the Vesle in force and pursued the enemy to the north.

Sept. 7.—The 77th Division drove the enemy out of La Cendière Farm and passed the Aisne Canal.

Sept. 12.—After four hours' bombardment our troops advanced on the south and west flanks of the St. Mihiel salient at 5 A. M. By 7:30 A. M. the forces operating on the south had reached the southern edge of the Bois Juli, the Quart de Réserve, and the northern edge of the Bois de Mort Mare. By noon they had reached Essey and Vieville and the army operating in the difficult ground in the west had captured Les Eparges. At 6 P. M. the troops had reached a point one kilometer east of Senzey and had taken St. Remy and Combres. During the night the troops on the western flank of the salient advanced five miles in five hours, reaching Vigneulles by 3 A. M.

Sept. 14.—There was a general advance along the entire line, and the American Army established itself on the following front: Manheulles, Fresnes, Pintheville, St. Hilaire, Doncourt, northeast of Woel, south end of the Etang de Lachaussée, Vandières, and across the Moselle at Champey.

Sept. 17.—American troops advanced along the Moselle within 300 yards of Paguy.

Sept. 19.—The 92d Division repulsed an attempted enemy raid in the St. Die sector.

Sept. 20.—The 92d Division repulsed two enemy raids in the region of Lesseux.

At the cost of only 7,000 casualties, mostly light, we had taken 16,000 prisoners and 443 guns, a great quantity of material, released the inhabitants of many villages from enemy domination, and established our lines in a position to threaten Metz. This signal success of the American First Army in its first offensive was of prime importance.

On the night of Sept. 25 our troops quietly took the place of the French, who thinly held the line in this sector, which had long been inactive.

Sept. 26.—The First Army attacked northwest of Verdun on a front of twenty miles and penetrated to an average depth of seven miles.

Sept. 27.—The 107th Regiment of the 27th Division attacked east of Bellicourt and attained its objectives.

Sept. 29.—In the Argonne the Americans met with furious resistance. Their losses were heavy, and they were unable to do more than hold their own.

Sept. 30.—The 27th and 30th Divisions took prisoners north of St. Quentin totaling 210 officers and more than 1,200 men.

Oct. 3.—The 2d Division, operating with the Fourth French Army, made an advance of two kilometers, reaching Medéah Farm. In the evening, advanced five kilometers, and their line ran from Medéah Farm southwest along the road to Blanc Mont; 1,000 prisoners.

Oct. 4.—The 1st Division attacked on both sides of Exermont, and made progress in spite of strong opposition from the enemy, who resisted with machine guns in organized opposition. Approximately 300 prisoners were taken, and our casualties were 1,500.

Oct. 5.—The 1st Division captured Arietal Farm, and the line was advanced 400 yards beyond. The 6th Division repulsed a large enemy raid on Sondernach.

Oct. 7.—A brigade of the 82d Division advanced seven kilometers, occupying Hill 223, north of Chatel Chéhéry; 46 prisoners were captured, including 1 officer. Later the enemy counterattacked and occupied Hill 223, north of Chatel Chéhéry.

Oct. 8.—The 69th Brigade of the 30th Division attacked at 5 A. M. over a front of 5,000 yards, gained all first objectives by 9 A. M., and second objectives by noon. Fifty officers, 1,500 men, and 4 101-millimeter guns were taken.

Oct. 8-9.—The 2d Corps advanced about seven miles on a front of 4,000 yards and captured about 2,000 prisoners and 30 guns.

Oct. 9.—In spite of strong resistance the 1st Division advanced in the sector east of Fléville and captured 230 prisoners.

The 33d Division, operating with the 17th French Army Corps, attacked early in the morning north of Consenvoye and reached its final objective about 9 A. M. About 650 prisoners were taken.

It was now necessary to constitute a second army, and on Oct. 9 the immediate command of the First Army was turned over to Lieut. Gen. Hunter Liggett. The command of the Second Army, whose divisions occupied a sector in the Woevre, was given to Lieut. Gen. Robert L. Bullard, who had been commander of the 1st Division and then of the 3d Corps. Major Gen. Dickman was transferred to the command of the 1st Corps, while the 5th Corps was placed under Major Gen. Charles P. Summerall, who had recently commanded the 1st Division. Major Gen. John L. Hines, who had gone rapidly up from regimental to division commander, was assigned to the 3d Corps.

Oct. 10.—The 1st Corps reached Cornay-La Besogne Ridge and passed Malassise Farm, east of Grand Ham. The 60th Brigade of the 30th Division advanced six kilometers, reaching the Selle River, and held the St. Benin-St. Souplet-La Haie-Menneresse line. Up to the evening of the 9th, 50 officers, 1,800 men, and 32 guns were captured.

Oct. 12.—The 4th Division repulsed two counterattacks by machine-gun fire; severe loss to the enemy.

Oct. 13.—An attack on Grandpré this morning met very heavy machine gun fire, and troops of the 2d Corps were finally forced to retire south of the Aire. A hostile counterattack at 8 P. M. south of Landres-et-St. Georges was repulsed. The 81st Division repulsed an enemy raid in St. Dié sector. The 77th Division took Grandpré.

Oct. 17.—The 29th Division advanced to the summit of Bois de la Grand Montagne, east of the Meuse. The 42d Division took Côte de Châtillon. The 2d Battalion of the 78th Division reached the northern edge of Bois des Loges, west of Champigneulle. In an attack on a 4,000-yard front from St. Souplet to Molain our troops advanced 3,000 yards against very stiff resistance. All counterattacks repulsed. Prisoners taken were estimated at 2,500.

Oct. 19.—The 30th Division attacked with the British at dawn and advanced 2,000 yards. Prisoners captured since the morning of the 17th totaled forty-four officers and 1,500 men. The 78th Division pushed its lines forward to Bellejoyeuse Farm and began to mop up the Bois des Loges.

Oct. 21.—In attacks on the Bois des Rappes the 5th Division met with stubborn resistance by machine guns, supported by artillery and infantry fire. It captured the entire position, with 170 prisoners, including five officers. The 5th and 3d Divisions took Hill 297 and Bois des Rappes. Attacking in the evening, the 89th Division occupied the northern and eastern edge of the Bois de Banthéville.

Oct. 23.—Troops of the 3d Corps reached the north ridge of the village of Banthéville, taking 171 prisoners. The 29th Division captured the ridge of the Bois d'Etrayes and Hill 361.

Oct. 27.—The 78th Division entered Bellejoyeuse Farm, northeast of Grandpré, gained the right of way north and northwest of Grandpré.

Oct. 30.—The 33d Division, in the face of heavy artillery and machine gun fire, north of Grandpré advanced its lines and occupied the Bellejoyeuse Farm.

Nov. 1.—The troops of the First Army captured Clery-le-Grand. North of Aincreville they took 53 additional prisoners and continued their advance into the Bois de Banthéville. During the night the 37th Division consolidated their positions and effected a crossing of the River Scheldt, confronted by enemy machine-gun and rifle fire. The 91st Division, supported by artillery and machine-gun fire, rapidly advanced over six kilometers in spite of enemy artillery and machine-gun fire. The enemy was driven from the west bank of the Scheldt and at noon the heights northwest of Audenarde were taken.

Nov. 2.—The 78th Division drove the enemy from the Bois des Loges and closely followed his retreat. The 92d Division, in spite of machine-gun resistance, pushed forward and advanced the line three kilometers.

Nov. 3.—The 91st Division, in spite of active machine-gun resistance, forced its way toward the bank of the Scheldt in the vicinity of Eyne.

Nov. 4.—A brigade of the 79th Division attacked an enemy sector, taking eighty-one prisoners and eight machine guns, encountering strong resistance and repulsing several counterattacks.

In all forty enemy divisions had been used against us in the Meuse-Argonne battle. Between Sept. 26 and Nov. 6 we took 26,059 prisoners and 468 guns on this front. Our divisions engaged were the 1st, 2d, 3d, 4th, 5th, 26th, 28th, 29th, 32d, 33d, 35th, 37th, 42d, 77th, 78th, 79th, 80th, 82d, 89th, 90th, and 91st.

Nov. 6.—First Corps continued successful advance, forcing the enemy to retire. The towns of Flabas, Raucourt, Haraucourt and Autrecourt were taken, and patrols pushed on as far as the Meuse. Large quantities of material captured. Fifth Division attacked, rapidly overcoming the enemy's resistance, capturing Lion-devant-Dun, Murvaux, Fontaine and Vilosnes-sur-Meuse, taking more than 250 prisoners.

Nov. 7.—The troops of the 2d Division cleared the west bank of the Meuse of the remaining machine guns and snipers in the vicinity of Mouzon. The 5th Division, supported by artillery fire, continued its advance despite the enemy's continued resistance, principally with machine guns. Most of the artillery crossed to the east bank of the Meuse, following in support of the infantry. Additional prisoners were taken, including 2 officers and 132 men.

Nov. 8.—The patrols of the 2d Division crossed the Meuse south of Mouzon.

Nov. 9.—Fifth Division drove back the enemy from Bois du Canol and La Sentinelle and captured Brandeville; 47 prisoners, 125 machine guns, and other matériel were captured. Seventy-ninth Division advanced in a generally northeasterly direction, with the right flank in Bois de Damvillers. The 42d and units of the 1st seized the heights south of Sedan.

Nov. 10.—The 33d Division carried out a successful raid on Marcheville, occupying the town and taking eighty prisoners, including three officers. The 37th Division, operating with the 34th French Army Corps, attacked in order to force a crossing of the Scheldt. The 90th Division advanced toward Sudlon, encountering no resistance. The 92d Division reached Bois Trehaut and captured 710 prisoners.

Nov. 11.—The 3d Division advanced three kilometers east of Bréhéville; 5th Division continued to advance, capturing eighteen prisoners, three large-calibre guns, six minewerfers, and considerable materiel.

On the three days preceding Nov. 10, the 3d, the 2d Colonial, and the 17th French Corps fought a difficult struggle through the Meuse hills south of Stenay and forced the enemy into the plain. Meanwhile, my plans for further use of the American forces contemplated an advance between the Meuse and the Moselle in the direction of Longwy by the First Army, while, at the same time, the Second Army should assure the offensive toward the rich coal fields of Briey. These operations were to be followed by an offensive toward Chateau-Salins, east of the Moselle, thus isolating Metz. Accordingly, attacks on the American front had been ordered, and that of the Second Army was in progress on the morning of Nov. 11 when instructions were received that hostilities should cease at 11 o'clock A. M.

(From Lieut. François Maury's Critique.)

The "campagne de libération" of the French armies, begun on a line stretching from St. Quentin to the Argonne Forest, and ending on a line from Mézières, east of Sedan, covered the period from Sept. 10 to Nov. 11. It had been made possible by the great counter-attack of July 18, the taking of Fismes-sur-Vesle, Aug. 4; the Franco-British offensive of Aug. 8; the taking of Montdidier, Aug. 10; of Bapaume, Aug. 27; Noyon, Aug. 31, and Péronne, Sept. 1. It was to be accelerated on the left by the British advance over the Hindenburg line, with the occupation of St. Quentin by Debeney on Oct. 2, and on the right by the operations of the American armies. It concerned principally the Tenth Army, under Mangin, and the Fourth, under Gouraud, with the preliminary advances made by the army of Debeney and Humbert below St. Quentin and that of Berthelot from Soissons to Rheims.

Sept. 10-26.—Mangin having pressed the enemy back between Vieil Arcy and Villers-en-Prayères, thrusts against St. Gobain Forest and the Chemin des Dames.

Sept. 26.—With the First American Army on his right, Gouraud begins an offensive on a twenty-mile front from the Argonne west to the Suippe River, advancing from three to four miles and taking Servon, Butte de Mesnil, and Navarin Farm and 10,000 prisoners.

Sept. 28-Oct. 13.—Gouraud advances to within five miles of Mouziers and then covering three miles down the Suippe. Mangin reoccupies the entire length of the Chemin des Dames and takes the enemy strongholds at La Fère and Laon.

Nov. 1-11.—Gouraud sweeps across the Aisne, meeting with resistance on the Alleux Plateau and at the Croix-aux-Bois defile; Debeney reaches the railway between La Capelle and Hirson and invests Mézières. In the Champagne, Sept. 10-Nov. 11, the French armies captured over 25,000 German prisoners and over 300 guns.

Advance to the Rhine.

Nov. 17.—The allied armies, totaling 1,670,000, move forward.

Nov. 19.—Metz is occupied by a French Army under Marshal Pétain.

Nov. 20.—The Third American Army under General Dickman enters Luxemburg.

Nov. 25.—French troops occupy Strasbourg.

Dec. 6.—British Second Army under Plumer occupied the Cologne bridgehead.

Dec. 8.—The American Army reaches Coblenz.

Dec. 10.—The French enter Mayence.

July 26.—Official Paris report that, for the present, 150,000 allied troops would be kept on the Rhine to enforce the peace terms applying to that section. By Aug. 20 only 5,000 Americans will be there.

Victory on the Italian Front

BETWEEN June 15 and July 6, which marked the high-water line of the Italian counter-offensive on the Piave, the Austro-Hungarian armies had lost 270,000 men, of whom over 20,000 were prisoners. Up to June 20 the enemy had claimed 35,000 prisoners. There then ensued a series of local attacks to secure strategic positions on the enemy's line, similar to those indulged in at the same time on the western front, and on Oct. 19 Foch sent Diaz, the Italian Chief of the General Staff, a suggestion to strike the enemy when ready. From Oct. 19 till Oct. 23 the Italian General Staff co-ordinated the information it had received from various sources as to the material and moral strength of the enemy.

(From General Diaz's Official Report.)

Nine armies, including the 14th British Army Corps with three divisions, the 12th Army Corps with two divisions, the 6th Czechoslovak Division, and the 332d Regiment of United States Infantry. The armies and their designations were as follows:

Third Army, under the Duke of Aosta, on the lower Piave; Tenth Army, under Lord Cavan, made up of the Fourteenth British Army Corps and the Eleventh Italian Army Corps on the middle Piave; Eighth Army, under General Caviglia, in the Montello region of the Piave; the new Twelfth Army, under the French General (with an Italian name) Graziani, composed of the First Italian Army Corps, the 32d Italian Division, and the 23d French Division, in the mountains of the Upper Piave; Fourth Army, under General Giardino, in the Monte Grappa region; Sixth Army, including the British 48th Division, under General Montouri, on the Asiago Plateau; First Army, under General Pecori-Giraldi, from the Lago di Garda east to the left wing of the Sixth; Seventh Army, under General Tassoni, from the Lago di Garda northwest to the Swiss frontier; Ninth Army, under General Morrone, held in reserve. Fifty-one complete Italian divisions were in action.

The Austro-Hungarian Army was seventy-three divisions strong and extended from the Stelvio to the sea in the following order: The Tenth Army, under Marshal Krobatin, from the Stelvio to the Val Lagarina; Eleventh, General Schenchenstuel, from the Val Lagarina to the zone of Grappa; Sixth, General Schoenberg, half way down the Piave; the "Isonzo Army," General Wurm, on the lower Piave. The commanding General was the Archduke Joseph, and Marshal Boroevic was in supreme command of the armies of Schoenberg and Wurm.

The battle began Oct. 23 and ended with the armistice of Nov. 4—ended with the complete destruction of the enemy's forces. "For the first time in the world war a most powerful army was beaten by a strategic movement, and the victory resulted in the capture of over 6,000 guns, 450,000 prisoners, 75,000 horses, 100 locomotives, 3,000 railway cars, enormous quantities of munitions and food, aviation camps, bridge material, autocars, &c."

Oct. 23.—At dawn the Italian artillery opened a vigorous fire on the sectors Grappa, Altipiano, and Sette Comuni, (Asiago,) supplemented by infantry feints.

Oct. 24.—The Fourth Army takes strategic positions north of the Ornic torrent and in the Alano basin, while on the Piave the Italians occupied the islands from Grave to Papadopoli. Here the enemy brought up his reserves.

Oct. 25.—The Fourth Army, in a series of engagements, occupies position northwest of Grappa. Here Schoenburg used reinforcements without avail.

Oct. 26.—The enemy hurls several attacks upon his positions lost on Grappa, but the Fourth Army quite outgenerals Schoenburg. Archduke Joseph and Boroevic decide in council to make a diversion in force on the plain of the Piave and the basin of Feltre. Learning this, the Italians consolidated their positions on Grave and Papadopoli.

Oct. 27.—Assault troops of the Twelfth and Eighth Armies having passed the night on the Piave under a terrific gunfire from the slopes of Valdobbiade and the pass of the Soligo torrent, advanced just before dawn and took the first line, preparing itself to advance. On their right the Tenth, to which Schoenburg had prepared to pay most attention, also advanced, breaking the enemy's line.

Oct. 28.—At dawn the Eighth Army crosses the Piave and throws itself on the hills of Colfosso, occupying Susegana. On its left the Twelfth attacks the heights of Valdobbiadene and deploys on the plain of Sermaglia. The Tenth reaches its designated position at Montecano.

Oct. 29.—Broken in the middle Piave, threatened at vital points of communication, Schoenburg desperately resists on the Grappa, while on the lower Piave, Wurm hurls the entire strength of the "Isonzo Army" against the army of the Duke of Aosta, but the latter, ready for just such a movement, turns his flank east to Zenson, and, attacking its centre, defeats it with heavy loss. On the Grappa the enemy also gives way.

Oct. 30.—The enemy are leaving Asiago and Grappa. The Twelfth forces the defile of Quero and ascends the Piave Valley. The Eighth advances from San Boldo to the plain of Consiglio toward Belluno and Pordenone. The Tenth crosses the Livenza and with the left wing of the Third deploys on the plain. In the north, in the afternoon, the Sixth advanced up the Brenta and reoccupied positions in the Val Sugana.

Oct. 31.—The Sixth lunges at Schenchenstuel's army between Asiago and the Brenta. He retreats and is flanked by the Fourth.

Nov. 1.—The advance becomes general from Asiago to the sea. The Sixth captures the defenses of the Valdi Nos and deploys beyond. The Fourth, in contact with the Sixth, follows up Schenchenstuel through the Val Sugana. The Twelfth, having crossed the Piave, deploys between Feltre and San Giustina. The Eighth advances from Cordevole on Longarone. The cavalry, under his Royal Highness the Count of Turin, goes beyond Celina and Meduna. The Tenth and Third reach the Tagliamento River from the Livenza. The "Isonzo Army," rushing north and south, leaves everything.

Nov. 2.—The Seventh Army goes into action, engaging that of Krobatin. The First advances on Rovereto and Trent. The Seventh descends through the Tonale pass toward Bolzano, cutting all the enemy's lines of communication in the Trentino. The First opens the way to Trent by occupying Rovereto and Mattarello in the Val Lagarina. The Seventh continues its way from the Stelia del Tonale to the Val Vermiglio.

Nov. 3.—The First and Seventh, commanded by Generals Pecori-Geraldi and Tassoni force Krobatin to the Adige. The Seventh sends troops to Bolzano, cutting all communications north of Trent. The First advances on Trent. Krobatin is caught between the First and Seventh and is forced to surrender.

Nov. 4.—At 4 P. M. the end. "The survivors of what had been one of the most powerful armies in the world dragged themselves in disorder and without hope up the valleys which they had descended with secure pride."

(From Lord Cavan's Report.)

On Oct. 6 Lord Cavan went to the Comando Supremo at General Diaz's request and the command of the mixed Tenth Army on the middle Piave was offered him. So that the enemy might not notice the change the 48th British Division was for a time to be left under the Italian General, Pennella, commanding the 12th Italian Corps on the Asiago Plateau, and was then quietly to rejoin the Tenth Army. The 18th Division, however, remained in the plateau until the end.

On Oct. 13 General Diaz held a conference of army commanders at Comando Supremo, at which he explained his plans for the forthcoming offensive. The general plan for the main attack was to advance across the Piave with the Tenth, Eighth, and Twelfth Italian Armies to drive a wedge between the Fifth and Sixth Austrian Armies—forcing the Fifth Army eastward and threatening the communications of the Sixth Army running through the Valmarino Valley. The Fourth Army was simultaneously to take the offensive in the Grappa sector.

The task allotted to the Tenth Army was to reach the Livenza between Portobuffole and Sacile, and thus protect the flank of the Eighth and Twelfth Armies in their move northward. The co-ordination of the attacks of the Tenth, Eighth, and Twelfth Armies was intrusted to General Caviglia, the commander of the Eighth Italian Army.

Oct. 27.—The attack of the Tenth Army across the Piave opens, led by the 22d Battalion Manchester Regiment and the 11th Battalion Northumberland Fusiliers, and by night a large bridgehead, together with Stabiuzzo, San Polo di Piave, Borgo Zanetti, Tezze, Borgo Malanotte, and Col Tonon were all in their hands.

Oct. 28.—The Tenth Army reaches the line Roncadelle-Ormelle-Templo-Rai-Col Bonotto-Col Milanese-Santa Lucia di Piave-Ponte Priula, and patrols reach the River Monticano.

Oct. 29.—Led by the 14th Corps mounted troops, under Lieut. Col. C. B. Lowther, the Tenth Army secures the River Monticano from near Fontanelle to Ramiera.

Oct. 30-31.—The Livenza is reached and crossed at Francenigo and Sacile.

Nov. 1-3.—Tenth Army reaches the line Villotto-Praturlone-River Meduna; then the Tagliamento from San Vito to the north of Spilimbergo.

Nov. 4.—The 332d American Regiment has its baptism of fire by forcing a passage of the Tagliamento and taking over 100 prisoners. At 3 P. M., when the armistice goes into effect, the line of the Tenth Army was Basagliapenta-Meretto di Tomba-Coseano-San Daniele-Pinzano, having captured since the opening of the campaign over 30,000 prisoners and over 300 guns.

Last Days in the Balkans

ON Sept. 15 the allied army of the East took the offensive in Macedonia. On Sept. 25 the Bulgars were asking for an armistice. On Sept. 29 Bulgaria signed a military surrender at Saloniki in which she accepted all the conditions imposed by the Allies.

On Sept. 1 the enemy front was held almost entirely by Bulgar troops, 276 battalions strong, extending along 350 kilometers from the Devoli to the Aegean Sea embracing Kavala on the east. On the west of the Devoli as far as the Adriatic, there was the 19th Austrian Army Corps, under General Pflanzer-Baltin, consisting of three divisions, or 100 battalions. As to the Germans, they had almost entirely been withdrawn to the western front; there remained, however, three battalions of cavalry and thirty-five detachments of mountain machine guns and the heavy German artillery, served by Bulgars.

From west to east the distribution of the enemy was as follows:

The Eleventh German Army—"German" simply because it was commanded by a German, von Stuben—extending across the Dzena Mountain; with the German Staff of the Sixty-second and Sixty-first Army Corps he had eight Bulgar divisions, or 132 battalions of which two battalions were German. This army blocked the route from Monastir to Prilep and the communications through the Vardar Valley.

The First Bulgar Army—from Dzena to Lake Doiran—with two cavalry divisions on the Vardar, under the command of General Nerezoff.

The Second Bulgar Army, between Lake Doiran and Lake Tahinos, with two divisions, or forty-two battalions, under General Lukoff.

The Fourth Bulgar Army, under General Petroff, with three divisions, or forty-five battalions, protecting the Greek hinterland.

All these forces, without counting the three Austrian divisions on the west wing, (the Adriatic side,) numbered 445,000 men, with 1,270 guns, and were under the supreme command of General Todoroff, who had recently replaced General Jekoff.

Under General Franchet d'Esperey were 29 divisions—8 French, 4 British, 6 Serbian, 10 Greek, and 1 Italian—a total of 725,000 men. At the opening of the offensive the Italians occupied both sides of Lake Ochrida and faced the Eleventh German Army, with General Henry's French army on its right, also facing the same enemy; on the right of General Henry, facing General von Stuben, were Serb, Greek, French, and Jugoslav detachments, facing Nerezoff; French and Greek divisions faced Lukoff, while an Anglo-Greek army covered the ground before Petroff to the coast.

(From War Bulletins of General Franchet d'Esperey.)

Sept. 15.—The French 121st and the 32d Colonial Divisions, with the Serbian division from the Choumadia leave their trenches, followed by another Serbian division and the Jugoslav division. They drive the enemy from his first line and attack the second.

Sept. 17.—The movements of the two preceding days produce the following results: The two narrow roads leading to the fortifications of the Sokol are carried by scaling ladders and the summit is reached in the evening.

Sept. 18.—While the two wings advance on the Tcherna and the Vardar, the centre is broken by cavalrymen and aviators.

Sept. 19.—The French Army, under General Henrys, on the left, and the Anglo-Greek Army, under General Milne, on the right, advance over the region of Doiran. The centre, consisting of a Franco-Greek detachment under General d'Anselme, is held amid the granite cliffs of the Dzena.

Sept. 22-23.—The Vardar is skirted from Gradsko to Demir-Kapou and then crossed, cutting the Bulgarian Army into two segments.

Sept. 28.—In a bold cavalry raid the horsemen of General Jouinot-Gambetta enter Uskub.

Sept. 29.—The First, Third, and Fourth Bulgar Armies in full retreat; the Eleventh German Army retreating on Uskub by a single road is beaten to its goal by General Henrys.

Sept. 30.—Entire 11th German Army trapped in a blind cañon surrenders to General Henrys: 86,000 Bulgars, including five Generals and 1,287 officers; 476 Germans, including fourteen officers, defile before him at Uskub.

(From General Milne's Report.)

Sept. 14.—General attack opens along eighty-mile front from Lake Doiran west to Monastir. Franco-Serbian troops under General Voivode Mischitch storm Bulgar trenches from Sokol to Vetrenik, making a gap of twenty-five kilometers and opening the way to the heights of Koziak.

Sept. 18.—A composite force made up of British, Hellenic, and French troops under the command of Lieut. Gen. Sir H. F. M. Wilson advance in an attempt to turn the Doiran-Vardar front on the left. Two Greek regiments on the right storm the enemy's positions near Doiran Hill with large captures of prisoners and material. The British 66th Infantry Brigade, on the left capture three lines of defense at the mouth of the valley, losing 65 per cent. of their effectives.

Sept. 19-20.—Owing to the rapid advance of the Serbian troops the left flank of the 65th Infantry Brigade is badly exposed and the right is threatened.

Sept. 21.—The Franco-Serbian Army reaches the line Gradista-Basava-Dragosil and the heights of Porce, dominating the Vardar, thus turning the flank of the enemy on General Milne's front. The depots in the valley are fired and abandoned. Observers of the Royal Air Force report the enemy to be fleeing through the Kosturino Pass on the Strimitsa road.

Sept. 25.—The Derbyshire Yeomanry enter Bulgarian territory. The 22d Division from the west and the Cretan Division from the east of Lake Doiran climb the slopes of the Belasica Range north of the lake, and with the French capture it in the night.

Sept. 29.—Bulgaria capitulates. British troops fifteen miles from the Rupel Pass and the enemy's line of communication up the Struma.

Sept. 30.—British Army prepared to move by Petric and Radomir through Bulgaria to the Danube, in the vicinity of Vidin, in order to co-operate with the French and Serbian armies in their operations against Austria-Hungary.

Oct. 10.—Advance to the Danube begun, when General Milne receives orders to move with his army on Constantinople.

Oct. 30-31.—News of Turkey's surrender. Two British divisions and one French ready on the Maritza to occupy Adrianople. In the rear, the 1st Hellenic Corps is en eschelon between Kavala and Drama, ready to take part in the general advance on Constantinople.

In the Balkans the war was continued against the Austro-Hungarian troops there until Nov. 4 and against the Germans until Nov. 11, with the following closing events:

Oct. 13.—Italians occupy Durazzo and Berat. Serbians cut the Orient Railway between Belgrade and Constantinople at Nish.

Oct. 14.—Italians enter Elbasan and invest Tirana in Albania.

Oct. 17.—A French column reaches Ipek, Montenegro, sixty-five miles east of Cettinje. Serbians advance up the Morava, with Serajevo as their objective.

Oct. 27.—Alessio, in Albania, falls to the Italians.

Palestine and Mesopotamia

IN Palestine General E. E. H. Allenby with the Anglo-Egyptian force and Arab auxiliaries, shortly to be reinforced by some French detachments, had done little fighting since he had captured Es Salt and thirty-three German and 317 Turkish prisoners, twenty miles north of Jerusalem, on May 1.

In Mesopotamia, on May 7, Lieut. Gen. Sir W. R. Marshall, who had succeeded to the command of the Anglo-Indian force on the death of Sir Stanley Maude, Nov. 18, 1917, had come within eighty miles of Mosul on the Tigris, and in June the detachments on his right wing on the Persian frontier had been driven back by the Turks; later he evacuated Baku on the Caspian Sea.

(From General Allenby's Report.)

At the beginning of September I estimated the strength of the 4th, 7th, and 8th Turkish Armies to be 23,000 rifles, 3,000 sabres, and 340 guns. The 4th Army, 6,000 rifles, 2,000 sabres, and 74 guns, faced my forces in the Jordan Valley. The 7th Army held a front of some twenty miles astride the Jerusalem-Nablus road with 7,000 rifles and 111 guns, while the 8th Army front extended from Furkhah to the sea and was held by 10,000 rifles and 157 guns. In addition the garrison of Maan and the posts of the Hedjaz Railway north of it consisted of some 6,000 rifles and 30 guns.

The enemy's general reserve, only 3,000 rifles in strength, with 30 guns, was distributed between Tiberias, Nazareth, and Haifa. Thus his total strength amounted to some 4,000 sabres, 32,000 rifles, and 400 guns—representing a ration strength south of the line Rayak-Beirut of 104,000.

I had at my disposal two cavalry divisions, two mounted divisions, seven infantry divisions, an Indian infantry brigade, four unallotted battalions, and the French detachment, the equivalent of an infantry brigade, with other arms attached, a total in the fighting line of 12,000 sabres, 57,000 rifles, and 540 guns. I had thus a considerable superiority in numbers over the enemy, especially in mounted troops.

The plan of attack of General Allenby was as follows: The principal enemy defenses were the fortified villages of Jiljulich and Kalkilieh and the foothills around Kefr Kasim. By reducing his strength in the Jordan Valley and withdrawing his reserves from the hills north of Jerusalem he could concentrate five divisions and the French detachment for attack on these defenses—a concentration of 25,000 rifles, against 8,000 rifles, and 383 guns against 130. He also had available two cavalry and one Australian mounted divisions. The attack was entrusted to Lieut. Gen. Sir Edward Bulfin, commanding the 21st Corps.

Sept. 19.—Headquarters of the Seventh and Eighth Turkish armies at Nablus and Tul Keram bombed by Royal Air Force and signal communications disorganised thereby.

Sept. 19-20.—Greater part of the Eighth Army overwhelmed and the Seventh in full retreat through the hills of Samaria, whose exits were already in the hands of our cavalry.

Sept. 20-25.—Eighth Army surrendering in groups; Seventh Army ditto. Cavalry captures Haifa and Acre, occupies Tiberias, and overruns the country to the south and west of the Sea of Galilee. The Fourth Army begins to retreat, evacuating Maan, whose garrison surrenders. The Desert Mounted Corps starts for Damascus, picking up the remnants of the Fourth Army on the way. The Twenty-first Corps advances along the coast from Haifa to Beirut. Homs and Tripoli are reached without opposition.

Sept. 19-22.—On the coast the French Tirailleurs and the Armenians of the Légion d'Orient take the Kh. Deir El Kussis ridge. On their left the Fifty-fourth Division Kfr Kassim and the railway from Ras El Ain to Jiljulieh. The Third Labor Division attacks enemy defenses between Bird Adas and the Hadrah road. On its left the Seventy-fifth Division attacks Tabsor; the Seventh Meerut the works west of Tabsor; the Sixtieth along the coast. In every instance the enemy is sooner or later overwhelmed. All organized resistance ceases. At Nazareth, 2,000 prisoners are taken in street fighting and the papers of General Liman von Sanders seized. On one stretch of road less than five miles long eighty-seven guns, fifty-five motor trucks, and 842 other vehicles are found. Garrison of Haifa cut off near Tiberias by the Thirteenth Cavalry Brigade of the First Cavalry Division.

Sept. 22-28.—The fate of the Fourth Turkish Army east of the Jordan is thus decided: Thirty-eighth Battalion Royal Fusiliers capture bridgehead at Umm Es Shert and New Zealand Mounted Rifles clear the west bank of the Jordan, making the position of the enemy on the east bank untenable, so it retreats on Es Salt and Amman, pursued by the Australians and New Zealanders and bombed by the Royal Air Force. Large numbers of the Fourth are captured along the Hejas Railway and the Pilgrim Route.

Sept. 16-30.—The principal work of the Arab Army was as follows: After raids on the railways around Deraa it moved into Hauran and attacked the Fourth Turkish Army on its flank; moving rapidly northward it captured the stations of Ezra and Ghazale, between Damascus and Deraa. It cuts the Turkish line of retreat by intrenching itself at Sheikh Saad, and links up with the 4th Cavalry Division near Er Remte, and with it closes the enemy's retreat to Damascus.

Oct. 1-31.—Desert Mounted Corps and Arab Army enter Damascus, while the 3d Australian Light Horse Brigade rushes northward in pursuit of the garrison, which numbered 45,000 Turks and Germans. The 7th Meerut Division leaves Haifa, occupies Tyre and Sidon, and reaches Beirut. Desert Mounted Corps, leaving one division at Damascus, occupies Homs; 21st Corps and 5th Cavalry Division reach Baalbek on Oct. 11 and Homs on Oct. 15. On Oct. 22 armored cars reach Khan Sebil, half way between Homs and Aleppo, where there are supposed to be 20,000 Turks and Germans, 8,000 of whom are combatants. On Oct. 25 the armored cars, the 15th Cavalry Brigade, and a detachment of the Arab Army reach eastern outskirts of Aleppo and force their way into the city during the night. On the night of Oct. 26-27 the Turkish rearguard withdraws to positions near Deir el Jemel, twenty miles northwest of Aleppo, where they remain when the armistice goes into effect on Oct. 31.

Aleppo is over 300 miles from our former front line. The 5th Cavalry Division covered 500 miles between Sept. 19 and Oct. 26, and captured over 11,000 prisoners and fifty-two guns. During this period the 5th Cavalry Division lost only 21 per cent. of its horses. Between Sept. 19 and Oct. 26 75,000 prisoners had been captured. Of these over 200 officers and 3,500 other ranks were Germans and Austrians. In addition 360 guns have fallen into the hands and the transport and equipment of three Turkish armies. * * * In the first three phases of the operations material and equipment were hastily abandoned by the enemy in a mountainous area extending over 2,500 square miles, while in the remaining phases a further advance of over 300 miles has been made. The captures, however, include over 800 machine guns, 210 motor lorries, 44 motor cars, some 3,500 animals, 89 railway engines, and 468 carriages and trucks.

(From Lieut. Gen. Marshall's report.)

General Marshall states that prompt advantage was taken of the overwhelming victories of General Allenby in Palestine to strike at the Turkish Sixth Army in Mesopotamia, covering Mosul. The main operations were intrusted to Lieut. Gen. Sir A. S. Cobb's 1st Corps, consisting of the 17th and 18th Divisions and the 7th and 11th Cavalry Brigades—principally new and seriously weakened by the influenza epidemic.

Oct. 23-24.—Army advances to attack.

Oct. 26.—Attack of 17th Division continues with more success against positions of great natural strength. Eleventh Cavalry Brigade seizes the ford opposite Hadraniyi, some fourteen miles up-stream of Shergat. One regiment crosses and seizes Huwaish gorge, five miles down-stream.

Oct. 27.—Bulk of 11th Cavalry occupies Huwaish gorge, thereby blocking road to Mosul. Light armored cars move from base at El Hadr to rear of enemy, thus isolating the Tigris force from the Sixth Turkish Army Headquarters at Mosul.

Oct. 28.—Turkish army is surrounded and the 17th Division closes in on enemy rearguard holding position three miles south of Shergat, driving it from the trenches. This attack is led by the 2d Royal West Kent Regiment. Turkish reinforcements try in vain to break the hold of the 11th Cavalry, which had been in continuous action for seventy-two hours, on the Mosul road.

Oct. 29.—Turkish 5th Division moves down from Mosul and attacks Marshall's right flank from the bluffs near Hadraniyi, but is dispersed by the 7th Cavalry Brigade. The 13th Hussars dismount and take the positions by bayonet assault.

Oct. 30.—Packed in ravines, exposed to fire from every direction, with lines of communication to Mosul cut, Ismail Hakki, the Turkish commander, raises the white flag and then surrenders, thus ending the last battle fought by a Turkish army in the war. Total captures since Oct. 23: 11,322 prisoners, including 643 officers; 51 guns, 130 machine guns, over 2,000 animals, 3 paddle steamers, and large quantities of munitions and equipment.

Hostilities cease on Nov. 1 just as General Marshall reaches Mosul. On Nov. 17 a flying British column reoccupies Baku on the Caspian Sea, where future operations are concerned with the Russian Bolsheviki.

In German East Africa

IN December, 1917, the British Government had officially announced that German East Africa was clear of enemy forces—the German Commander von Lettow-Vorbeck had been driven into Portuguese East Africa. Early in September, 1918, he returned, and then, on Nov. 8, German East Africa was again free from him. Meanwhile he had entered the Songea region, doubled westward into Rhodesia, and on Nov. 2 attacked Fife in force. The British Commander in Chief, Lieut. Gen. J. L. van Deventer, got in touch with him in regard to the armistice on Nov. 12, and on Nov. 14 presented terms of surrender, which were accepted on Nov. 25, being received by General Edwards at Abercorn. The force surrendered numbered 155 Europeans and 1,168 native Askari, about half the force the Germans had possessed the year before. At the opening of the 1916 campaign they had numbered 2,700 Europeans and 12,000 Africans.

(From General van Deventer's Report.)

Nov. 1.—Enemy retiring toward Kayambi Mission, pursued by the Northern Rhodesian Police, who move on Abercorn to cut him off.

Nov. 6.—Stiff engagement with half the enemy's force at Kayambi, in which two machine guns are captured.

Nov. 11.—Colonel Olsen's brigade was moving south when news came of armistice.

Thus ended a remarkable, and in some ways unique, campaign. Never before had operations on a large scale, with modern weapons, taken place within a few degrees of the equator. Seldom, perhaps, has one consecutive series of operations been conducted over such a vast area, extending from the Uganda Railway to the Zambesi, and from Lakes Kivu, Tanganyika, and Nyassa to the Indian Ocean. Unique in civilised warfare was the fact that the East African campaign was perforce one of virtual extermination.

PLUMB PLAN A RISKY EXPERIMENT

Expert in Railway Economics, Admitting Evils It Aims to Correct, Points Out Its Fallacies

THE so-called Plumb plan is analyzed below by Professor J. Maurice Clark, who attracted wide attention ten years ago by his investigations of railway problems, who has written extensively and is now Professor of Political Economy in the University of Chicago. Professor Clark is this month lecturing on his specialty in the Summer School of Columbia University. He is independent in politics and, though he has no leaning toward socialism, is in sympathy with many of the aims of the labor unions. He considers the Plum plan as having virtues and faults well worth studying, although he believes that its application on the scale proposed would be unwarranted.

Like most who had studied the railroad situation, Professor Clark confesses that he was surprised at the sudden way in which the plan of Glenn E. Plumb, the legal counsel of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, was thrust before the public. The radical utterances of Warren E. Stone, Chief of the Brotherhood, and of representatives of the American Federation of Labor, are part of a widespread propaganda, which was begun in the Spring in the various labor papers, but the force of that propaganda had not been felt by the general public until very recently. The Plumb plan is the concrete proposal toward which this propaganda was aimed. The Plumb Plan League has already been started, labor is pledging vast sums to carry out the ideas proposed, and the author of the bill declares that his followers think that revolution is the alternative to the adoption of the measure.

What is proposed is that the Government buy up all the railroads, issuing securities to meet the cost. The roads are then to be operated by a holding corporation with a limited capital and controlled by a board consisting of one-third each of representatives of the Federal authorities, of the managing or executive heads of the transportation companies to be appointed, and of the organized employes. This triplex commission would conduct the affairs of a great national railroad system, which would be financed by the Government as far as any extensions were concerned. The profits are to be divided between the Government and the labor interests, each employe receiving a dividend.

Mr. Plumb also proposes, in order to keep either labor or capital from getting any ascendency, that when the net profits exceed 5 per cent. of the valuation of the roads, freight and passenger rates shall be reduced accordingly. Elaborate provisions are included in the bill, all aimed toward the development of an industrial democracy intended to do away with what the author of the measure is pleased to call "an aristocracy of capital."

"There are many hopeful things about the Plumb plan," said Professor Clark yesterday. "It involves, at least, recognition of the fact that it is futile to raise wages, since this merely starts a cycle of raising costs and raising prices and ultimately leaves labor no better off.

"It directs attention to reorganising industry, with a view of giving joint representation of the various interests concerned. It aims to solve the problem of recurring periods of stagnation, which is the greatest waste in our economic system, and contemplates increased efficiency of operation.

"In all these respects the existing system is seriously defective. One can hardly deny, therefore, that the Plumb plan is directed at real and fundamental evils, whether or not he agrees with the particular remedies proposed. It is worth pointing out, however, that the brotherhoods do not in fact forego wage increases. They demand increased wages plus the profit-sharing plan.

"Personally, I believe that both labor and the Government, which have an interest in the management of industries like the railroads, should have some degree of direct representation in that management. Such representation is needed in order to eliminate suspicion and distrust, and the sort of irresponsible action on the part of the management which tends to justify the suspicions of other parties. This combined attitude of suspicion and irresponsibility is one of the greatest obstacles at the present time.

"Laborers do not fully realize their responsibility for promoting the interest of the industry that pays them their income, because that income goes through the hands of the employer. Employers may now have two remedies instead of one when things go wrong. Suppose, for instance, that financing becomes difficult. It used to be the case that the only thing to do was to tackle the problem and solve it. Now, there is another thing to do—to go to Washington and plead for more liberal rates. In such circumstances there is a genuine temptation to let the showing of the roads' condition remain a bad one.

"Thus, on all sides there is gain to be had by joint representation of all parties concerned. In particular, it would probably lessen the liability of such lootings of railroad properties as those to which Mr. Plumb calls attention.

"The proposal to transfer control to a tripartite board representing Government, labor, and appointive officers is, however, so unprecedented that it is impossible to visualize how it would work in practice. If the representatives of the appointive officers held the balance of power, whom would they represent? If labor were convinced that the elements were leagued against it would it start striking again?

"If labor held the balance of power, would the properties be plundered by labor's representatives, just as some of them have in the past been plundered by capital's chosen representatives at the expense of the mass of investors?

"Will the laborers find that if they continue to raise wages they can thus absorb 100 per cent. of any profits that may accrue, and prefer this to any smaller share for which the plan may provide?

"If we wish to go slowly in this matter we might try first the experiment of minority representation for labor and Government, and restrict experimentation in guild socialism to single properties, where its effect may be observed with some degree of safety, rather than stake the fortunes of the entire railroad system on a venture of this sort.

"Financially, the success of this scheme seems to depend upon the assurance that there will be profits to divide. If this expectation is disappointed, it is to be feared that the plan will fail to enlist the support of labor. That is to say, it will fail of its crucial purpose. The expectation of profits depends on several factors, including a rate of interest lower than the market would probably afford, a valuation of the properties lower than the Interstate Commerce Commission and the courts would probably permit, and economies whose amount is problematical and which might easily be balanced by losses. The valuation of the physical properties of railroads at this time is a complicated problem. Are they worth what it cost to build them years ago, or what it would cost to reproduce them at the prices of present-day labor and material?

"The plan would increase the fixed charges, which must be met before profits are declared by converting all the bonds, so that if earnings were to fluctuate as they have in the past between good and bad years, the bad years would probably show losses.

"It might be found reasonable and necessary to pay 5 per cent. on the amount equal to the present book value of the tangible properties. This would increase the fixed charges, so that in an ordinary depression year there would be no profits, but a deficit.

"Broadly speaking, the program of commission regulation aims to keep the total earnings down to the least amount necessary to induce adequate capital to enter the business. The Plumb plan proposes to capitalize as a fixed charge the least amount necessary to induce capital to enter the business, to lower rates and to make enough profits above the fixed charges to solve the discontent of labor. There is something peculiar about this arithmetic.

"The power of labor at the present juncture makes it prudent to weigh its proposals carefully and to give attention to any sound principles which they may contain. At the same time, the permanent interests of labor are not served by adopting a plan which cannot give them what they desire. The principle of joint participation in the management is sound, but to carry it into effect to the extent here proposed would be a risky experiment. The plan will not cure the high cost of living. Labor would do well not to pin too high hopes on the possibility of conjuring out of the same hat lower rates, profits beyond all necessary compensation to capital, and the benefits of a more democratic management."

PORTS OF NEW YORK AND LONDON

By F. A. McKENZIE.

LONDON is London because of the Thames, and because of the trade connections of the British Empire. New York is New York because of her great harbor, and because this spot forms the natural outlet for the produce of the people of the rich country behind.

It is easier to send goods for Southern Ontario through New York than it is by Canada's own waterway, the St. Lawrence. Railroads and canals, all centring on this one spot, have increased New York's natural advantage manyfold. The future growth of both London and New York depends to a large degree on the extent to which they can maintain their world trade. That, in turn, depends upon the facilities afforded for shipping.

As a world shipping centre, all the advantages would at first sight seem to be on the side of New York. Its harbor is one of the safest, the most commodious and the most accessible in the world. One hundred and twenty-two warships have anchored in the Hudson, above Seventy-second Street, without disturbing ordinary traffic. All the warships of all the nations could lie in comfort here. The total water front of New York harbor is 771 miles, of which less than half has been developed. The main entrance way, Ambrose Channel, has a depth of 40 feet in mean low tide, ample for the Leviathan, or for France's coming giant, the City of Paris. Any vessel afloat can make her way right up to the line of the Chelsea piers, within walking distance of the heart of the city.

London can make no such claim for the Thames. Its channel must be coursed with care. Big ships can only go a little way up, far from London. No ocean steamer of first class can land her passengers in London. She drops them at Plymouth, Southampton, Dover, or Tilbury, and they go the rest of the way by train. The offices of London importers are often a score of miles from their warehouses at the dock side.

And yet London today is a more convenient, less expensive and better world shipping point than New York. Even the New York merchant often makes it his assembling point for world cargoes.

Why is this?

There are many reasons. They can all be summed up in one. London port is controlled by public authority for the public good. New York is controlled for the profit of individuals. This is a hard saying. Let me prove it.

For some years London has been, so far as its shipping affairs are concerned, under the control of the Port of London Authority, a public trust, having entire control of the port. At its head are some of the most eminent business men in the United Kingdom. There can be no favoritism in its administration. A system has been established; every one has to abide by it; rates are fixed which all have to pay. I have never yet heard a whisper of the authority favoring one shipper over another. This body has built fresh docks, modernized old ones, and has reduced the handling of cargoes to the lowest points. The most modern cranes have been introduced in wholesale fashion, each adapted to its special type of cargo. Freight trains run on the wharf side, the cargoes are transshipped into them, and are taken to their destination without further handling.

There is nothing like this in New York. There is no central authority. There is no exact definition of what constitutes the Port of New York. No man can say for certain where it begins, or where it ends. There has been up to recently no full information available about what comes here or what is done.

We may assume that the Port of New York includes the lower Hudson River, the East River, Newark Bay, North River, the New York Bay, the Kill van Kull, the Arthur Kill, the Hackensack and Passaic Rivers, the Bronx River, Westchester Creek, East Chester Creek, Flushing Creek, Newtown Creek, Wallabout Creek, Gowanus Bay, Gowanus Canal, Jamaica Bay, and Raritan Bay.

There are two port authorities, the Commissioner of Docks of New York City and the New Jersey Harbor Commission. The Commissioner of Docks is a political nominee, appointed by the Mayor, at a salary of $7,500 a year. His office is temporary, which means that there is no continuous policy. New York City itself takes large supplies for its own use, and sends ont large exports, for this city is the most important industrial centre in the United States, the value of its manufactures exceeding any State, except Pennsylvania. But apart from its own goods, it is the funnel for most of the export trade of America. At one time as much as 52 per cent. in bulk and 75 per cent. in value of America's exports has gone through here, and nearly half still goes. Practically all of this, apart from what is wanted for Manhattan, is dispatched from the New Jersey side.

There are no facilities for handling this enormous traffic, such as are available in London, or in almost any third-rate American port. The dock accommodation is inadequate, despite the fact that New York City alone has built wharves and piers to the value of about $150,000,000. It is almost impossible to obtain wharf room, except after long delay, and the price is fixed by the ordinary laws of supply and demand. Rates have gone up enormously. A ship that paid from $70 to $80 a day before the war now pays from $250 to $800.

"Why not?" I hear some one ask. "Why shouldn't the traffic be scaled for all it can pay?" The answer is that a city with water frontage is in a sense a trustee for the interests of the whole country behind, which looks to it for its outlet to the sea.

In the Port of New York there is almost no direct unloading from the ships to freight cars. The goods are nearly all transferred from shipboard to lighter, from lighter to truck and from truck to railroad car, being handled and rehandled time after time. The streets around the dock sides are congested with trucks. It costs far more to land goods in New York today than in London, despite New York's superior natural facilities. And the delays are even more serious than the direct expense.

Some time ago, it was proposed that New York and New Jersey should form a united port authority on the lines of the London trust. A measure was drawn up and submitted early this year to both Legislatures. The Governors approved of the scheme, but all that could be done was to induce the Legislatures to finance a united Port and Harbor Commission, which is to draw up a definite program for further consideration.

The New York City authorities are not over-sympathetic. They own much of the wharves and piers and find them a great source of revenue and authority. One pier alone, which probably cost about a million dollars to build, let recently for $320,000 a year. While most New York importers wish for the united authority, I find a fear in some quarters lest it should mean increased opportunity for political favoritism and corruption.

New York and New Jersey do not trust each other. New York does not see why New Jersey, which has done very little in providing proper wharf accommodation, should have any power over New York's investments. New Jersey fears that New York will swamp it and "put one over on it" in any united scheme.

The outlook may be changed by the work of the commission with B. F. Cresson at its head. Large numbers of leading merchants and shippers are acting on sub-committees and arranging a program which, if agreed to, will revolutionize New York.

WARNING AGAINST PLUMB PLAN

Banker Says It Is Worst Menace to Our Prosperity Since Free Silver Fallacy

By FRANCIS H. SISSON,
Vice President Guaranty Trust Company of New York.

THE United States today faces a new issue and begins a new chapter in its history. In the proposal of the railroad brotherhoods and their affiliations in the American Federation of Labor to nationalize the railroads, socialism, for the first time in our history, throws down the gage of battle nationally and demands a trial at arms. This challenge, in itself of far-reaching importance in the attempt it makes to control the great service of transportation, is of much greater significance in the definite threat that success in this field will be followed by efforts to secure the nationalization of all industry, or, in other words, a complete socialistic state.

The time has come for the citizens of this country, its business men and its laborers, its owners and its workers, to seriously face the issue presented, if they are not to see their interests ruined and their property confiscated by economic experiments and social hysteria which seem to fill the air. Not since the free silver fallacy arose to threaten American business and progress has so dangerous a menace risen to threaten our prosperity. This bold effort to seize possession of the nation's basic industry for the benefit of a single class, and to the assured detriment of all others, frankly discloses the wide spread of socialistic thought in this country, and the danger to American institutions which it implies.

Appeal to Common Sense.

It is inconceivable that, if the American people as a whole really understood the elements in the problem presented, there could be no doubt of their solving it. The most ordinary common sense, awakened self-interest, and knowledge of human nature and human experience would quickly repudiate the fallacies inherent in the proposed Plumb plan. The danger is that public thought will not be quickened to the situation, and, through lack of understanding and organization, legislation may be forced through Congress by means of organized political pressure, backed by abundant funds for propaganda and lobbying, which will work the mischief before the public is aroused to it.

Every element in the body politic has a stake in this situation, if they but knew it. The man with money and the man without it are equally concerned, and the great middle class, which, after all, constitutes the majority, has its all involved. Even the railroad worker himself, while he would undoubtedly profit temporarily by control of these properties, would in the long run be injured because of the assured failure of the plan and the economic chaos which would follow the working out of this program.

It is impossible within the scope of a brief article to cover the many fallacies involved in the present proposal, but some may be mentioned by way of illustration.

Perhaps no fallacy is more glaring than that which proposes that the Government purchase the railroads through the issuance of 4 per cent. bonds to the public, when it should be perfectly obvious to any student of finance that this would be both legally and physically impossible. In the first place, the Government could not float a bond issue which would cover the purchase of the railroads at 4 per cent., or near that rate. Only under the tremendous pressure of war necessity were we able to float our last loan at 4½ per cent. For such a purpose as this a higher rate would be demanded, and even at higher rates it is doubtful if the general public would buy a security based upon such an experiment in such volume.

Wall Street as Middleman.

The brotherhood leaders seem to rest under the general false impression that Wall Street owns the railroads and furnishes the money for them. That is true only to the extent that Wall Street acts as the middleman in this situation. The railroads are owned, not by Wall Street, but by the millions of stockholders, bondholders, savings bank depositors, life insurance policyholders, &c., to whom millions of securities have been distributed. Wall Street does not fix the rate for money; it is fixed by economic conditions, and security offerings are based upon the price at which the public will absorb them. That law would operate if the Government were undertaking a financial burden, just as surely as it does upon Wall Street.

By what process could the holders of railroad securities based upon mortgages today be compelled to exchange these holdings or suffer their confiscation? Indeed, what right would the trustees of fiduciary institutions have to permit such sacrifices? It is absolutely certain that the Government would not have either the power or the right to work out any such financial program.

Again, we are assured that great economies in operation, which would accrue to the public benefit, would be secured by this plan. To sustain this bold assertion there is no proof whatever; in fact, the whole record of socialistic enterprise and of Government direction of industry is that expense and inefficiency both increase in marked degree. Nowhere has this been more pointedly illustrated than in the record of our railroads themselves under Government direction. The whole record of public ownership in this country and throughout the world has proved clearly that it does not promote either economy or efficiency, and, further, that it carries with it political dangers of serious importance, which have bred far-reaching troubles. That the disastrous experiences of other countries in this field would be emphasized in our own somewhat loose-jointed democracy is absolutely certain.

Such a venture on our part into the field of radical socialism could bring only industrial and financial disaster, which would set this country back many years, and if, on a basis of their success in securing control of transportation, the Socialists then proceed further in their program of nationalizing industry, business chaos is assured and another Russian cataclysm would impend.

Lethargy of the Public.

The amazing fact is that, in spite of the obviousness of this situation and its menace, human ignorance and lethargy lie dormant under it and even lend an ear to its alluring utopian promises. With the tragic collapse of Russia looming before us, with the total failure of the communistic scheme in Hungary and the admission by the new President of its provisional Government, himself a labor leader and minister of social welfare, that the socialistic venture has been a failure, and that henceforth his party would stand "for full democracy, with rights of private property and full political liberty," it seems impossible that any sane man would give credence to the plea of socialism. Yet we are informed that 2,200,000 railroad workers and all the other millions in the ranks of the American Federation of Labor, perhaps 10,000,000 in all, support this unsound plan, which would certainly work the undoing of labor as completely as that of capital, and ruin the business of the country, in which the prosperity of all is involved.

The alternative which is presented to the public, unless the demands of the railroad brotherhoods are approved, is, in the words of the acting President of the railway department of the American Federation of Labor, that they will "tie the railroads up so tight that they will never run again." The definite threat is made to "paralyze the nation" unless labor can work its will. We are further assured by Mr. Plumb, the spokesman of the brotherhoods, that this "is going to be a fight to the finish," and, further, that "we will not stand for any modification of the principles and proposals set forth in our plan." Before such high-handed declarations there would seem to be but one position for men with courage and an intelligent regard for their own interests to take, namely, that of definite, organized opposition, and determination to join issues on this question in the court of public sentiment.

I am just as certain on my part as the brotherhood leaders are on theirs that if public sentiment could ever really be informed on this question there could be no doubt as to its decision and its protection of its own interests against any class appeal of socialistic experiments.

The railroad situation today presents many real problems, but these problems cannot be solved properly in the interests of any class or under threat and force. Only patient and fair-minded study, from the viewpoint solely of the general interest, can bring a proper solution. The securing of that solution is just as vital to the railroad brotherhoods and to labor generally as to any other interest involved, for after all they are all citizens of the United States, and only as the United States prospers as a whole can they long prosper. Continued prosperity can be based only upon sound economic and political principles, and any venture into other fields must bring disaster to all concerned.

The struggle is on between democracy and socialism. In spite of its shortcomings, we have developed in this country a system under which its people have enjoyed the greatest prosperity of any people in the world's history. Today all the world turns to us for help, and if we are to jeopardize not only our own powers of service but our own national future by departing so radically from the system which has made us great we will be recreant to both our duty and opportunity. Individual freedom and the incentive to success, which have built this country, cannot be forsaken without pulling down over our own heads the structure we have so proudly reared. It seems unthinkable that such a possibility could even be discussed, and yet here it faces us, not only a possibility, but a probability, unless the intelligence of the country is aroused to meet it.

On this question of Government ownership of railroads we stand today in the first line trenches for the protection of the private ownership of all property. If this position is lost the whole line will be seriously threatened. Men who believe in American institutions, in property rights, in orderly Government, must line up in opposition to this attack, or live to regret the day of their unpreparedness.

There's real money in this business

And it may be exactly the kind of proposition you've been looking for.

Many men have thought about going into business for themselves. They've simply been waiting for the right opportunity to come along.

We're in business to start the right kind of men in a very clean and profitable business for themselves; and it doesn't require a very large amount of capital either.

We supply the complete equipment for Innovation Daytime Bakeries. We sell you everything you need to start a baking establishment which will make fresh bread every hour.

Everybody who eats is your customer. Most people like fresh bread. Your first sale will usually make a permanent customer; and before you know it, you have developed a business which pays you a very handsome profit.

The bread is perfectly baked in a special oven which we have designed. The loaves are placed on slowly revolving drums, and baked in about 40 minutes. The machinery itself is interesting, and you usually have a crowd at your window. You can bake all kinds of bread or rolls.

All you supply are the energy and the location. Our plan furnishes you with the complete outfit, including ovens, bread mixer, cabinets for raising the bread, counters, cash registers, and the entire equipment for a business of 1,600 loaves a day.

If you are looking for a chance to get into a clean, modern business, where you will be your own boss, and where the profits will be just as big as your own enthusiasm can make them, we would like to hear from you. You ought to get all the facts about this proposition at once; it may be exactly the thing you would want to consider.

TO THE AMERICAN NATION

Real Facts About Hungary

The Hungarian situation has reached a stage of such acuteness that the Peace Conference and the home Governments of the principal Allies as well are greatly disturbed. Ultimatums, hurriedly telegraphed to Rumania, demanding a modification of the severe terms imposed on the Hungarians have proved futile.

Because of the obdurate attitude of the Rumanians, the transportation system of Central Europe has been upset, making it impossible to forward supplies to the starving populations.

Mr. Balfour, the Foreign Secretary of England, in the strongest possible terms, condemned the Rumanian invasion of Hungary's capital and, according to cable dispatches, the Peace Conference unanimously demanded the withdrawal of the Rumanian troops from Budapest and did not recognize Rumania's ultimatum to Hungary.

And, now that it has been so fatefully demonstrated that an ally of the Allies may commit deeds that are wrong, the "American Committee for the Relief of Hungary" would like to state a few facts which will show that the demands of Hungary's neighbors for territory are wrong, as well, and while based upon racial grounds, are clearly imperialistic.

The American people had so little opportunity to hear Hungary's side of the story, that this information should be welcomed by every fair-minded citizen of this country.

To begin with, thousand-year-old Hungary has been in the course of its history a great power for good. The Constitution of Hungary is as old as its history. Next to the English, the Hungarian Constitution is the oldest in Europe. Then it must be remembered that Hungary has always been the classical land of religious liberty. As far back as 1554 the Transylvanian Diet at Torda enacted the legal equality of all denominations then known there. That Hungary for a century and a half has been fighting the Turks and preventing them from extending their rule over Western Europe is a known historical fact. Hungarian music, Hungarian literature and art, as well as Hungarian scholarship, have contributed to a large extent to the world's knowledge, enjoyment and enlightenment. Hungarian culture has an individuality all of its own. Shall it cease now? Shall Hungary be dismembered, vivisected, annihilated?

The neighboring nations want to dismember Hungary on racial grounds, but what are the facts?

Thousand-year-old Hungary does not possess any provinces conquered by the sword. Her frontiers have not changed for ten centuries. The country is inhabited by Hungarians or Magyars, who established themselves there in the Ninth Century, and by other races which immigrated there in later times. Most of the Germans immigrated as colonists. In the Eleventh Century the ancestors of the Slovaks of today were admitted from the upper valleys of the Morava, Oder and Vistula. In the Fourteenth Century Ruthenians made a habit of crossing the mountains in the northeast to pasture their cattle in those tracts of the country. In the middle of the Thirteenth Century the Hungarians permitted Rumanian shepherds from Wallachia and Bulgaria to settle in the southern parts of Hungary. The number of the Rumanians and Servians increased when many thousands of those races came to Hungary in order to find there an asylum where they would be safe from Turkish rule. The Hungarians welcomed them and made them feel at home in their country.

It is, therefore, an outstanding historical fact that those parts of Hungary which to-day are inhabited by various nationalities did not belong originally to those races, but have been populated by the ancestors of the Slovaks, Ruthenians, Rumanians, Servians and Germans through immigration.

The other outstanding fact is that not only has Hungary within her present limits been a political unit for more than a thousand years, but her territory is perhaps the finest natural geographic unity in Europe, as a glimpse at the map will show. Economically her parts are interdependent, northern Hungary having iron, wood, water power; central and western Hungary having wheat, corn, pasture grounds; southeastern Hungary (Transylvania), coal, salt, oil and natural gas. Each section apparently is—economically speaking—a cripple; together they constitute a fine, self-supporting organism. Belonging to the same river system, they communicate easily with each other. History has been the interpreter of nature when she created and preserved the political union of Hungary's present territory.

Life and time mingled the various races in Hungary incessantly. Other minglings were accentuated during the 18th century, and as one finds them now side by side, Protestant, Catholic, Jew and Orthodox, similarly there are in Hungary in the same region members of five or six nationalities. If we except Central Hungary which is wholly Magyar (85%), and Northern Hungary, which is indeed almost entirely Slovak (76%), the races are so intermingled that you cannot cut out an unbroken territory from any of them. Every such attempt creates new mixed territories with no clear racial majority in them.

A fair solution of the problem in Hungary, therefore, must be one which conciliates the laws of geography and political economy and the deep rooted result of history with the just demand of race.

Of course imperialism manufactures its own apparently just reasons to explain its unprincipled pretensions. Hungary's neighbors claim that the nationalities in Hungary have been oppressed. There is no space available to refute here this accusation. But what sort of an oppression could it have been that made it possible for all these races to increase in numbers, to keep their language and national individuality during seven or eight centuries? Does this fact not show rather that Magyar rule was not only not oppressive but, on the contrary, liberal and generous? Other countries in Europe have during the past centuries forced their population of many races to melt together and become one nation. Hungary permitted all of its inhabitants to keep their nationality, asking them only to be good Hungarian citizens.

And the majority of these nationalities—the Slovaks, the Rumanians, the Serbs—do not want to cease to be Hungarian. It is the land-hunger of the neighboring nations, their imperialism, which urges not only the dismemberment of Hungary, but demands territories where the Magyar race is in majority on the ground that some of their own nationality live there, thereby intending to subject millions of Hungarians to foreign rule.

Now, Hungary's problem, if a lasting peace is intended, can be solved only in accordance with the principle of national self-determination. It would violate this principle to permit that territories should be shifted from one state into another without the consent of the people who live upon those territories.

Indeed, the dismemberment of Hungary would be as great an injustice as that of Poland was, and would be a cause of economic troubles and never ceasing hostilities. It would create a Magyar irridentism much worse than any irridentism known heretofore, because the oppression and subjugation of the Magyar people would take place at the very time when justice to the nationalities has been recognized a fundamental principle of world politics.

We respectfully appeal, therefore, to the President of the United States, to the United States Senate, to the House of Representatives and to the American Nation for justice to Hungary.

THE FURY OF PATIENT MEN

When American Communities Have Taken the Law Into Their Own Hands

By ALFRED B. WILLIAMS.

OF all animals the American citizen, considered collectively, is the most docile, patient, and submissive, the most indifferent and good humored, and the most terrible. So deep within his psychology as to be unsuspected, normally, lurks a kind of decorous but desperate devil of resentment and determination, waiting always to be called to action by intolerable offense or grievance when ordinary means for redress fail.

In this time of upheavals the Americans of all the peoples of the world are the most optimistically and imperturbably confident of the future of their country and the stability of their Government. Probably the real reason is the unexpressed and undefined, but nevertheless distinct, understanding of this latent force. The average American feels, in a general way, that he is one of a race able to take care of themselves, who always have met emergencies and applied correction and cure before conditions became irretrievably bad. Their history proves that no resource of power or cunning has availed against their communities when thoroughly aroused.

And this confidence persists in the great body of the people notwithstanding the fact that the unrest here among us is growing and gathering power—a sense of which is expressed in the demands of the railroad workers and other labor bodies, and in spite of the fact that class demands on such a scale are subjecting our governmental machinery to strains which certainly did not enter into the calculations of our Constitution builders.

This confidence doubtless is based on the fact that always the demand of the American populace, even in its most violent moments, has been for better government and more faithful allegiance to the law. Its uprisings have differed from the wildness of mobs in that they have been answers to distinct provocations and guided by definite motives, with their general purpose conservative rather than destructive. They have developed evil and wrong and usually have collapsed from their climaxes and been misused, but they have achieved salutary results and brought renovations.

Patience and Fury.

Practically every American community, from New York to the towns of few thousand population, has had its alternating experience of inertia and fury, resigned submission to misgovernment followed by "clean sweeps" and frantic reformation, with fantastically rigid puritanism succeeding long periods of debauchery and then excessive morality wearying of its own monotony. Few of these episodes and changes have been of national importance, except as instances of the national capacity for self-determination and regulation. Some, however, have been attended by circumstances so dramatic and consequences so far-reaching that they always will be remembered.

From the first white settlements on this continent civilization outgrew its statutes and ordinary clothing, but never its strength. Where the law could not reach, substitutes for it, enforcing its spirit and working ultimate justice and public safety, protection of the peace and of the lives and property of individuals, have been improvised and applied.

Proceedings to those ends, crude and sometimes rough, but effective, are indicated in the sketchy narratives of the early days of the Pilgrim Fathers and of Captain John Smith and his fellow-adventurers at Jamestown Island. From Pennsylvania we get, perhaps, the first authentic records of American people establishing for themselves courts outside all legalized authority and enforcing the decrees. Taken in connection with subsequent events, that story suggests a field for the humorist and satirist. The first uprising in the colony was by the white newcomers against the Indian natives, about 1740. A century later the white natives were in fierce array against the new-coming Irish. The first was directed against the Quakers, considered to be too mild in punishment of Indian raiders. (The Indian side of the controversy is not available.) The wrath of the later natives was concentrated on the Catholic Church, at the opposite extremity of the theological line.

Pennsylvania "Rangers."

Unconscious, however, of the queerly contradictory attitude into which fate was to lead their descendants, the Pennsylvanians of 1740 who were not Quakers and not on Quaker terms with the aborigines, formed themselves into "Rangers," to deal in their own way with Indians guilty, or supposed to be guilty, of crime. They conducted trials and administered chastisements, using lash, rope or bullet as conditions required or allowed. Accounts are not quite clear as to whether the Indians were brought to better behavior or the Quakers to sterner measures, but responsible security became to have been established for the time.

The later demonstration of public fury in that Commonwealth looms large in our political history because it was the real beginning of the Know Nothing movement, and party, which agitated the country through twenty-odd years. The spirit of it sometimes makes itself felt, on occasions, even now. One might find further material in the fact that the anti-foreign sentiment first took organized shape in Germantown—the name of which indicates its origin—and that the three leaders of the most sensational and serious anti-foreign demonstration in Philadelphia were Craig, Kramer, and McManus.

Every frontier as it expanded beyond the reach of constituted authority developed from the people organizations for enforcement of the meaning of the law without sanction of law. In South Carolina, North Carolina, and Virginia "Regulators" were regulating in their own way in 1760, and probably before, at the outermost boundaries of white occupancy.

In New York and Massachusetts, where conditions were more settled and the more desperate habitual law breakers had disappeared, social offenses were taken under cognizance by the public, enforcement of law by local authorities apparently having been lax. At Elizabethtown, N. J., the Regulators hunted out and soundly whipped wife beaters. Their activities were chronicled, with evident approval, by the press of the time. In Massachusetts occurred the first recorded instance in this country of tarring and feathering—although the same hideous punishment had been known long in Great Britian. It was inflicted on men who lured girls to the barracks of the British soldiers and who presumably would have been protected or easily dealt with by the military authorities and by the same influence defended from the ordinary processes of law.

The "Minute Men."

As resentment against the mother country spread through the colonies "Minute Men," "Councils of Safety" and "Secret Committees" became part of each community, widening the scope of self-government from local troubles to international differences. The immortal Boston Tea Party and later incidents developed the general uprising, concentrating in one movement the same spirit and capacity for management of their own affairs by the people which they had manifested in the smaller and separated problems.

This article is intended to touch only what may be called the spontaneous regulations and rectifications of internal matters. The power of the nation as a whole to protect itself against outside aggression has been proved beyond the need of specific incident to establish it.

Before, during and after the Revolution the American people of all sections demonstrated their readiness and ability to rehabilitate the law where it failed and to make and enforce it where it did not exist and to do it in the most orderly ways possible, but relentlessly and thoroughly. One of the ironies of history is that "lynch law," justly associated now with the acts of brutal and cowardly mobs, takes its name from a man who was peaceful, merciful and just.

What is now Bedford County, Virginia, in 1775 was the western frontier of that Commonwealth. The neighboring mountains were refuges and lurking places for Tories and other outlaws, driven from the interior. The Government was powerless. The families of loyal citizens were insulted and harried and their property was injured and stolen.

Lynch Law.

The loyal Americans who were not serving with their army organized a permanent posse of their own and created for themselves a court of three of their most trusted neighbors, with Charles Lynch, a Quaker, as the head. His brother was founder of the city of Lynchburg and owner of Lynch's ferry, over James River, where the city subsequently was built. The court sat usually in Charles Lynch's front porch or yard. Accused persons were confronted with their accusers and allowed to offer evidence in defense, but there were no lawyers, arguments, postponements, technicalities or appeals. Those convicted were led to a walnut tree in view of the court, tied to it and whipped according to the gravity of the offense. Tradition, partly based on a popular song transmitted through Whig families, says very blatant and offensive Tories were kept under the lash until they squalled "Liberty!" as a signal of submission. It is said to be a fact that the man who gave the name to lynch law was opposed to capital punishment and that if the death penalty was inflicted, as probably it was in a few instances, they were the most extreme cases. The General Assembly of Virginia by formal act validated all the sentences of Judge Lynch's court and relieved him and his associates from civil or criminal penalities.

The principles and methods of this court were carried westward by the Virginians to Kentucky, Tennessee, Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois, and were applied until the machinery of orderly society could be organized and put into operation. In after years this machinery broke down sometimes. When that happened the repair work was rough if conventional methods failed, but it was efficient. In the forties the gamblers on the Mississippi boats and in the river towns made themselves the dominating political force and did as they liked, usually liking to do very badly. They cheated, robbed, killed and maimed at pleasure and went unpunished until there came a day at Vicksburg, headquarters for the fraternity and a hotbed of villainy. Several thousand citizens marched to the jail where gamblers guilty of brutal crime jovially awaited the customary acquittals and ended their joviality by taking them out and hanging them.

Reformation and decorum along the river were instantaneous results.

Mafia in New Orleans.

Many can recall the Mafia scare which spread through the country and caused more real fright and horror than the Bolshevist and bomb excitements of the present. At New Orleans the Mafia had attained political power and the secret allegiance of wealthy and influential people. A series of bold crimes culminated in the murder of the fearless Irish Chief of Police. Six members of the hidden terror put on trial were acquitted in the face of convincing evidence.

Packing and terrorizing juries was one of the special Mafia activities. In open day a great silent mass of men, with those most prominent in social and business life at the head, marched to the jail and with precision and decorum shot to death eleven Mafia awaiting trial. This ended the terror. Several of the men executed were Italian subjects, and our Government paid some indemnity for their families and took no further action. This was in 1891.

The story of the Vigilantes of California is part of the familiar history of the country. It also shows the ordinarily good and peaceful in ugly but necessary action. No question of foreigners or racial difference was involved. San Francisco was infested and ruled by the scum of America, for which it was the dumping place, hunting ground and paradise. The toughs and shoulder-hitters of the large cities of the East, and the desperadoes, gamblers, gun and knife fighters of the South and Southwest foregathered there. They were powerful in City and State Governments, and, having control of the law, with natural impudence announced themselves as the "Law and Order" party.

Work of Vigilantes.

From 1800 to 1853 there were 1,200 murders with one case of legal punishment, according to the official reports. The lesson of stern justice taught once before was forgotten. In 1856 a series of atrocious and cold-blooded murders put the compelling match to the slow-kindling public anger. The Vigilantes reorganized at the call of a few. Perhaps the majority of them were New England merchants, shipping men, bankers and agents who had gone West to make money lawfully and peacefully by working for it, carrying with them the Puritan reverence for laws and ordinances. Their plans were kept secret, but their personalities were not. They assumed full responsibility, and when the day of action arrived 8,000 of them, fully armed, summoned by prearranged signal from a fire-house bell, assembled in the afternoon; took out the most notorious killer and hanged him.

State and City Governments, the police, the United States Navy, and what was representing the army were against them, but the public sentiment, substance, and decency of the community were behind them. When at last they rose they rose to purpose, accomplished it, and went home. San Francisco was cleansed and quieted, for the time, at least, and citizens with impulse to slay or rob fellow-citizens were given pause.

While the disgraceful riots of 1844 in Philadelphia have been described as anti-foreign, really they were provoked primarily by shameless ballot box stuffing. The foreigners, chiefly Irish, new to America and its laws and ways, were used as tools, naturalized in hordes, and put to dirty political work. The trouble brewed seven years before it broke. It was said a native American meeting was fired on from houses occupied by Irish. A man was killed and eleven were hurt. From the middle of April to May 8 rioting was almost continuous. Twenty or more men were killed on the two sides and many wounded. Two Catholic churches, a building Sisters of Charity had used as a school, and fifty houses tenanted by Irish were burned.

Militia were called tardily by frightened officials and peace was restored after some fighting, with casualties, between people and troops. The evidence seems to show that the anti-Catholic and anti-foreigner movement passed out of the control of those who began it and was taken up by half-grown boys and miscellaneous roughs, who were responsible for the outrages. Local reform of election methods followed, but the bitterness spread through the country. The Irish had many and savage enemies, but many and powerful friends, also, among the natives.

The Know Nothing movement really was crushed in 1855 in a test election in Virginia, where the foreign population was but a fraction of 1 per cent. of the total. The fight against it there was led by Henry A. Wise, of pure native strain and a Protestant. He was Governor afterward and signed John Brown's death warrant.

Ku Klux in the South.

The Ku Klux of the South, during the first four years of the reconstruction period immediately following the civil war, constituted a great popular uprising. In 1870 they numbered 550,000 in nine Southern States. Political power and the making and administration of the laws had been given suddenly to the negroes, absolutely untrained and ignorant, led by carpetbaggers, some of whom were recklessly rascally and others sincere but unwise dreamers and fanatics. The white people, forbidden to organize openly, organized secretly. Country negroes were made to believe that the silent, sheeted figures that rode to their cabins at midnight were the ghosts of Confederate soldiers killed at Chickamauga. During four years "the Invisible Empire" was a safeguard of civilization.

The execution of the surviving anarchists at Chicago, Nov. 11, 1887, twenty-two years to the day before the signing of the armistice, was under sentence of regular courts and the verdict of a jury. It would have been impossible but for the irresistible tide of public sentiment that urged on the police and gave nerve to prosecutors, informers, witnesses, and jurors. The anarchists had become bolder and more violent every year since 1873 and had made their influence felt not only in Chicago but through the West and East. During those fourteen years the public had watched patiently their progress in strength, virulence, and audacity. When they threw the bomb at the Haymarket, in 1886, killing eight policemen and wounding 68 persons, long-challenged endurance snapped. The demand for vengeance and punishment burst forth the next morning. Once more it was demonstrated that the tolerance of this country has a dead line beyond which none may step safely, however strong in numbers, political influence, or desperation.

What Is Behind This Enormous Demand?

For some time, now, the production of Goodyear Tires has been sustained at a point beyond anything previously recorded in the tire industry.

Over several months, the output of the Goodyear Akron factories alone has approximated 25,000 finished Goodyear Tires a day, while the daily production of our Canadian plant has well exceeded 2,000.

It is so evident that even this unprecedented total will not meet all needs that we are now at work on a plant in Los Angeles which will afford us several thousand tires additional daily capacity.

In other words, the demand for Goodyear Tires has assumed such immense proportions as to make our present enormous production all too small.

Behind this demand on the part of the public is no other thing than the consistently fine service Goodyear Tires everywhere deliver users.

No fictitious discounts, no delusive guarantees, no expedients of any sort have been employed to stimulate artificially the steady advance in sales.

Purely on the intrinsic merit of the product, and the faultless character of its performance, rests the unexampled leadership that Goodyear Tires enjoy.

Certainly Goodyear Tires must embody a conspicuous superiority thus to win and hold the allegiance of the largest single group of tire-buyers in the world.

We are devoting our whole energies to the expansion of our production, in an endeavor to establish ample stocks of Goodyear Tires everywhere.

In the meantime we suggest that you let your Goodyear Service Station Dealer show you how to give proper care to the Goodyear Tires you now have, as a means of assuring you their maximum usefulness.

He will be glad to instruct you in the application of Goodyear Tire-Savers, which are designed especially to prevent troubles and to prolong tire life.

Your return from their use will be not only increased satisfaction, but a very material profit in added mileage.

STATE'S PROBLEM OF GOOD ROADS

Commissioner Tells What He Is Doing—Concrete the Most Enduring Material

NEW YORK'S STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER, Frederick Stuart Greene, remarks that his job is to keep open 80,000 miles of roads, in various stages of improvement and unimprovement. Some idea of the extent of this work can be got by comparing the figure with the circumference of the globe, which is 24,000 miles. The majority of miles of New York roads have not yet been improved, it is true, but that will come in time. Mr. Greene's plan is to inaugurate a program of building of new roads, "permanent roads and not tissue-paper roads," as he expressed it the other day.

"Before going into the question of work that is to be done," said he, "it is wise to get an idea of what has already been done in the matter of road building and road improvement and how it has been done.

"There are about 2,500 engineers employed in State highway work. At the head of them is the State Commissioner, myself, an engineer. Under him are three Deputies, one in charge of new construction work, one in charge of maintenance and repairs, and one in charge of the upkeep of the dust and gravel roads. In order to facilitate the work, the State is divided into nine divisions. Each division had its own divisional engineer and assisting staff. The number of counties in a division varies—some have as little as four; others as many as nine. Besides the county highway engineer, the State maintains a resident engineer for every job that happens to be going on in any one county.

"When I was appointed to office the State had 7,200 miles of improved roads. To give you a vivid image of what that means, let me say that if these 7,200 miles of road were stretched out from New York to San Francisco and back again and from Montreal to Florida, we would still have more left over than the total of improved roads in Massachusetts, New Jersey, and Rhode Island.

"These roads fall under four different headings.

"First of all, we have the State roads, which are paid for entirely by the State. These connect the larger and more important cities, their location being defined by the State Legislature.

"Secondly, we have the State and county roads, the State paying a certain proportion of the building costs and the county meeting the deficit. At this point let me say that once a road is built the State assumes all the subsequent charges of improvement and maintenance. At present about one-third of the counties are meeting the costs on a half and half basis. The poorer communities, however, sometimes pay as little as 20 per cent. toward the building of these roads.

"The third division is that known as town highways. These are improved locally by the towns and counties. We have a great many roads of this type in the counties of Nassau, Westchester, Suffolk, Monroe, Franklin, and Erie.

"The fourth type of roads is the Federal aid roads. These are all sixteen-foot roads and are paid for, half and half, by the State and the Federal Government. Where there is a special demand in any community for a road wider than sixteen feet, that community pays for the extra width.

"At present the road building program calls for an additional improved road mileage of 5,800 miles, making a total of 13,000 miles of improved highways. My policy in building the new roads is to make them permanent and not tissue paper roads that need continual patching and mending. The concrete roads best answer that need. There is, however, a good deal of opposition connected with the building of these on account of their initial cost, which is higher than that of any of the other types of highway.

"New York State was the pioneer State in the work of improving roads. The first type of road that was built was the one known as the water-bound road. This is made up of stones, stone dust, some chemical mixture, and water. This served its purpose until the automobile came into existence. After that the water-bound roads literally went to pieces. The mixture was crumpled up and the stone dust which was set free was continually in the air.

"The problem as it appeared at that time was to find a type of road mixture which would keep the dust down. The bituminous macadam road seemed to answer the description, with the result that all subsequent roads were built on that plan. They seemed to meet all the requirements until the heavy truck began rumbling over them. What happened to the water-bound roads happened and is happening to the macadam road today. They are going to pieces and need constant repair.

"The next step in the evolution of roads is the building of a highway that will stand the heaviest kind of traffic. Engineers agree that up to the present time nothing has been found as satisfactory as the concrete roads. The objection to them, as I have before stated, is their initial cost. As a matter of fact, they are, in the long run, cheaper than either of the first two types. We have laid out 13,000 miles of road. We won't stop there. By 1930, if we keep on building, we shall have laid approximately 25,000 miles. The records in the department show that it costs approximately $1,000 a year a mile to maintain and reconstruct the water-bound and the lighter types of macadamized road. If we have 25,000 miles of such roads by 1930 it means that we will have to meet a maintenance cost of some $25,000,000. That figure is an impossible one, as far as having it met by the State is concerned.

"It costs approximately $100 to maintain a concrete road a mile a year. If we had 25,000 miles of road by 1930 it would mean that our maintenance costs would amount to approximately $2,500,000, a figure certainly more within reason than the one given above.

"The cost of surveying, excavating, and grading is the same for all roads. The difference lies in the pavement alone. The approximate cost of building a mile of water-bound road is $17,000, a bituminous macadam road $19,000, a plain concrete road $25,000, and a reinforced concrete road $26,200.

"The average life of a water-bound road and a macadam road is seven years. The average life of a concrete road is thirty years. During seven years of the first types the maintenance cost is approximately $7,000. During the thirty years of the concrete road the maintenance cost is $3,000. These figures are, of course, not exact. They are the average as shown on our records. However, taking a hypothetical water-bound road that has for seven years had $1,000 worth of annual repairs, and taking a hypothetical concrete road that has for thirty years had $100 annual repairs, it would seem that the average cost a year for the water-bound road was very much above the cost of the concrete road. With a false sense of economics, however, opponents of the concrete roads refuse to see the true proportion of values between the two.

"The farmers up-State want roads. Very well. It is my duty to keep the farmer out of the mud. But, in order to give the State and taxpayers in the State any sort of a fair deal, it is necessary to build a type of road that in the long run will be the cheapest. At present the counties want a long mileage of narrow tissue paper road which the State has to maintain. I have tried to impress upon them the permanent value of the concrete road. They either can't see it or refuse to see it. However, I have found a way out of the situation by putting this proposition to them: Any county that wants a water-bound or a macadam road can have it, provided it promises to pay all maintenance costs of more than $100 a year. That usually brings them around to a more logical point of view.

"Recently the State Department of Highways got extraordinary proof of the appreciation of the condition of the roads of New York State. Bradford, Penn., is a small town of 15,000 inhabitants. Several weeks ago the citizens of Bradford deposited $90,000 with this department for the purpose of starting a reinforced concrete road in Bradford that would connect with a New York State road leading directly into Buffalo. No State has ever done this before. The manner of going about to build that road will be unique. At one point in its contemplated mileage it will be necessary to build a bridge. The Highway Department is not expected to build bridges. To get around that point the $90,000 will be used for the bridge building. The rest of the funds will be met from three sources. New York State will contribute, the Federal Government will contribute, and the railroad which will profit by the bridge improvement will contribute, with the result that New York State will have an ideal road to Buffalo.

"Another road of great importance now being built is the one known as the Storm King Road. This will be 16 feet wide and four miles long. It runs along the wall of the Hudson, and is being cut into the stone, 300 feet above the water. The building of it is a difficult and dangerous task. Men are strung down on ropes from the heights above in order to make a survey of the ground. When the road is finished it will be one of the most beautiful highways in the world. The original estimate of the cost was $365,500. Up to May 31 of this year $279,456 had been spent, but the road was not nearly half done. According to the present prices the opinion of the engineers is that $529,400 additional will be needed before the road is completed. Not a little cause for this increased cost is the danger of working on the almost perpendicular rocks and the need for slow and careful work.

"There are hundreds of miles of road in New York State in various conditions of improvement. Some of them are 20 per cent. finished, some of them are 50 per cent. finished, some are 75 per cent. finished, and so on and so on. These are open sores throughout the counties. What with the high cost of labor and the scarcity of labor, the work had to be given up and left in all sorts of undesirable stages of completion. Everything is being done to catch up with them. When I was appointed to office in April, there were 181 unfinished war contracts. Today these are getting first attention. Before any new roads are planned, the unfinished roads will be completed.

"I am trying to stop the building of narrow highways. If I succeed, New York State will have no roads less than sixteen feet wide. The ideal widths are eighteen, twenty, twenty-two, and twenty-four feet, but, as it is, the low standard of sixteen feet is causing a goodly bit of dissension. The new program of road building also provides for easier grades and curves. The initial expense is, of course, higher, but the result in increased safety and comfort warrants it.

"There is one thing in which improved roads of America are extremely lacking. You ride on a highway in France and the pleasure of the trip is increased by the beauty of the shade trees along the wayside. We build better highways, perhaps, in this State, but we make no effort to beautify them. It is my hope that the Department of Agriculture will take an interest in this work and co-operate with the Highway Department. Apart from the scenic effect, shade trees have a definite importance in prolonging the life of a road. They save it from quick changes in temperature. For instance, the temperature of a hot road in the Summer time is way above 100 degrees. Under a shade tree it is about 90 degrees. A sudden shower with a temperature of 65 degrees falling on a road of 90 degrees will have a much less injurious effect than it would if the road were 130 degrees hot. The sudden change in temperature cracks and destroys the road mixture.

"The program of the Highway Department can be summarised in the following fashion: The building of permanent roads, which at the present time seem to be the concrete roads; the taking up of unfinished war contracts; the cessation of building narrow roads, the building of easier grades and curves, and the beautification and preservation of roads already built by the planting of wayside trees."

EMPLOYMENT AGENCIES.

A WARNING has been issued by Colonel Arthur Woods, Assistant Secretary of War, to all discharged soldiers and sailors concerning excessive commissions and profiteering by certain private employment agencies throughout the United States.

Individual cases where the returning service men have been victims of unscrupulous persons have been reported. In one case a chief yeoman, about to be discharged from the navy, applied for a position calling for executive work at $175 a month. When the sailor called at the employment agency he was offered a contract in which he agreed to pay the profiteer $175, his first month's salary, as a commission.

Employment agencies, jointly managed by the Government and welfare associations, make no charge for their services. On the other hand, many of them extend aid to deserving men.

UNBUSINESSLIKE UNCLE SAM

Former Secretary of the Treasury Says National Budget System Would Guard Him Against Bankruptcy

By GEORGE B. CORTELYOU.

Mr. Cortelyou, as Secretary of the Treasury under Theodore Roosevelt, was a pioneer in the movement for a "business administration." The war has further convinced Mr. Cortelyou that the financial salvation of this country lies in the adoption of a national budgetary system.

THE Government of the United States for more than one hundred years has been conducted upon financial principles which would have bankrupted a private corporation within a few months.

No public officer has been directly responsible for the adjustment of expenditures to receipts. No public officer has direct control over the estimates of the different departments.

Prior to the war there was a growing difference in the wrong direction between the Government's net receipts and net disbursements.

From time to time a temporary balance was maintained by increasing taxes and floating bond issues. The latter expedient was purely a make-shift arrangement. As to the former, it may be said that the tax rate has increased out of all proportion to the growth of the population.

It is not difficult to fathom the underlying causes for the disparity between the increased tax rate and population growth. Discounting the steadily rising price of all commodities, the fact remains that a large proportion of Government funds has been spent extravagantly during the last three decades.

A distinguished gentleman in 1909 was credited with the statement that 30 per cent. of the Government's entire revenue—a sum totaling $300,000,000—was wasted annually.

I cannot attempt with any degree of accuracy to name the exact amount of money spent needlessly during any one fiscal year. It is no exaggeration, however, to say that the figures will run into millions of dollars. This same condition holds today.

Growth of Disbursements.

A problem which increases in importance with the growth of the country is that of an economic adjustment between disbursements and current receipts and the classification of both receipts and disbursements in such a way as to facilitate such an adjustment. The rapid growth of net receipts and net disbursements at intervals of ten years since the lowest point reached after the civil war is indicated by the following figures:

Year.	Net Receipts.	Net Disbursements.
1878	$257,446,776	$236,964,327
1888	379,266,075	259,633,937
1898	405,721,255	443,368,582
1908	601,126,118	659,196,319

If interest on the public debt is excluded, the growth in ordinary expenditures for carrying on the Government, including payments for pensions and many public works, was brought from $135,000,000 in 1878 to $638,000,000 in 1908. This is an increase of nearly 400 per cent. The figures for the following nine years prior to the war show a still further increase in the percentage column. I offer the 1908 figures, however, for the reason that they came under my personal observation.

I desire to point out that the distribution of immense sums raised mainly by taxation should be subjected to the closest scrutiny, classification, and coordination. The present method of dealing with money matters is entirely lacking in system.

Under the relations of the various branches of our Government there is practically no control by the Executive Department over the appropriations made by Congress except by the President's veto. There is no control by the Secretary of the Treasury or any other branch of the Government over the amount of the estimates submitted by the various executive departments to Congress. The Secretary of the Treasury is given the authority to transmit to Congress estimates of revenue and expense, but has no authority by existing laws to revise these estimates to conform to the national receipts.

Nor is there any single committee charged with the comparison and coordination of the appropriations for the various branches of public service in order to distribute equitably any reductions or increases which may be warranted by the total income of the United States.

The Secretary of the Treasury occupies by law a relation to Congress which in many respects is one of more direct responsibility than that of the heads of the other departments. It is declared by a statute which has not been repealed that the Secretary of the Treasury "shall report and give information to either branch of the Legislature in person or by writing, as may be required, respecting all matters referred to him by the Senate or House of Representatives, or which shall appertain to his office."

In spite of this concise statutory provision the Secretary of the Treasury is little more than a figurehead, to the extent that he cannot lower by as much as a penny any of the items in appropriation bills submitted to him by department heads. He simply acts as a forwarding medium, transmitting all estimates from the departments to the Speaker of the House.

There is no special inducement for department heads to keep down estimates for the fiscal year. Each department is anxious to make a good showing for itself and is also anxious to be allowed considerable leeway in money matters. The result is that many bureau chiefs gauge their estimates by what they think Congress will stand for. They know full well that on general principles the House Committee on Appropriations will make substantial cuts in all requests.

As a result of frequent delays, important money bills are often passed during the waning hours of the legislative term. They are rushed through without proper consideration—with little or no time to delete uncalled-for items of expense.

During my tenure of office I suggested that it might be competent for Congress to appoint a joint committee to revise departmental estimates so that they might be presented to Congress properly co-ordinated and with proper regard to the nation's income as a whole. The present outlook is toward the adoption of a national budget system under which income and outgo will be adjusted with at least some degree of exactness.

I believe that the adjusting bureau, commission or organization which regulates estimates should be responsible to, or at least work in close co-operation with, the Secretary of the Treasury, for he is the finance officer of the United States and should answer to the people for a fair and equitable distribution of departmental appropriations.

Co-ordination of the administrative departments of Government should extend to the Legislature as well. Instead of distributing money bills among fourteen separate committees in the House and fifteen in the Senate, a single committee in each body should consider all financial measures. This, of course, does not mean that sub-committees may not be appointed to report upon the various divisions of the general budget. All committees, however, should have the counsel and advice of a single Chairman or head.

There is probably no other civilized Government—certainly no Government which is truly representative—where there has been such a complete lack of supervision of the budget as in the United States.

With a war debt of $25,000,000,000 hanging over us, it is no longer practicable to meet an annual deficit by an assessment upon the nation's stockholders—its citizens.

Even the United States, with a total estimated wealth of more than two hundred billion dollars, is not so rich or so powerful that it can afford to disregard the principles of business efficiency or fail to provide itself with a carefully mapped out budgetary plan.

OUR NEW MERCHANT MARINE.

WHAT part the American merchant marine is playing in the promotion of trade is indicated by the number of ships plying the trade routes from the Atlantic ports of Boston, New York, Wilmington, and Philadelphia.

From four Atlantic ports alone 1,172,704 deadweight tons of shipping, embracing 221 ships, are now sailing. To the west coast of South America six of these ships, totaling 23,295 deadweight tonnage, now regularly sail. Nine of the ships, leaving at stated intervals for China and Japan, represent a deadweight tonnage of 74,506. With Australia, New Zealand, New Guinea, and Africa we are in direct communication from these four ports through six steamers of total deadweight tonnage of 42,590.

In the transatlantic, Mediterranean, and South Europe trade thirteen of the ships are employed, of 91,120 total deadweight tonnage.

One hundred ships are plying from these ports north of Baltimore to the West Indies and Caribbean trades, totaling 319,592 deadweight tonnage.

There are twenty-four ships sailing out of these four Atlantic ports employed in carrying on trade relations between the east coast of South America and this country. The total tonnage of these vessels is 166,082 deadweight.

Five ships of 37,439 deadweight tonnage are sailing to the Levant, Indian Ocean, Straits Settlements and the Dutch East Indies. Engaged in the trade routes of the transatlantic and Northern Europe there are fifty ships with a total deadweight tonnage of 373,148.

Sailing from ports south of Baltimore, including that port, are 181 vessels, with a total deadweight tonnage of 697,867.

EUROPE
AND THE GREAT BATTLEFIELDS
Remarkable Tours, this Fall—from five weeks to three months—including France and the Battlefields, Belgium, Switzerland, French Alps, Chateau Country, Pyrenees, Provence, Riviera and Italy.
For dates and details write at once (to assure membership and steamship reservations).
The FIRST opportunity for tourists to see Europe since 1914—the very first opportunity to visit France and the Great Battlefields—is now offered by Raymond-Whitcomb. After five years the gates are opened, the bars are down, the welcome is extended this Fall.
The LAST opportunity to see Europe as one great Battlefield, practically unchanged, is offered by our 1919 Fall Tours, which will include Chateau-Thierry, Verdun, the Argonne, St. Mihiel and the Hindenburg line, the historic ruins of Rheims and Ypres—and immortal Paris herself.
PACIFIC NORTHWEST
Summer and autumn tours to the wonderlands of the Pacific Northwest, the great National Parks and California. Many attractive routes, including the Canadian Rockies, Glacier Park, Yellowstone Park, Grand Canyon and Colorado.
Frequent departures in August, September and October.
ROUND THE WORLD
Our September, October and November tours have reached their small limit of membership, but a few vacancies are open in our remarkable December tour.

INTRODUCING THE BOOTLEGGER

New York Can Hardly Escape Making Acquaintance of This Enterprising By-Product of Prohibition

IT is said that wherever there is a genuine demand supply will be forthcoming. Upon the working out of this economic truism New York may soon expect to make the acquaintance of the bootlegger. For certainly in the dry days which are being forced upon the metropolis by wartime prohibition, soon to be succeeded by national prohibition, there is going to be a genuine demand for hard liquor. Men who have drunk all their lives do not find it easy to quit, the enactments of Congress to the contrary notwithstanding; and all of the men who have been hard drinkers have not filled their cellars with bottled and barrelled goods as against the long drought. With such a demand, it is to be expected that a serious and sustained effort will be made to supply it.

And if history repeats itself—and it has done so in every State in which there has been a serious attempt to enforce prohibition—the bootlegger will occupy many columns in the New York newspapers of the months to come and local courts will shortly be devoting much of their time to dealing with a new class of business, grouped under the general heading of whisky cases.

For the information of the uninformed, it should be said that a bootlegger is an illicit dealer in intoxicants, who, attracted by the enormous profits which can be made in the business, is willing to take a long chance with the law. Bootlegging originated in the Indian Territory, now embraced in the State of Oklahoma, and it attained its highest proficiency in that same State. A paternal Government which had set aside this territory for the domain and domicile of the civilized Indian tribes had provided a heavy penalty for the sale of intoxicating liquor to the red men. But the Indian loved his "firewater" and would pay a high price for it. From out of Texas rode the cowboys, whose high boots offered an excellent place of concealment for a few flasks of whiskey, and for years before prohibition was ever seriously thought of by the ordinary American deputy United States Marshals and Texas bootleggers fought back and forth across the border of the Indian Territory. The business was soon to grow far beyond the limits of the cowboys' high boots, but the word which his practice coined has persisted as the definition of the unlicensed whiskey seller and has even been written into the statute books of some Western States.

Bootlegging's Big Business.

It was not until the opening of Oklahoma to settlement and the admission of the former Indian Territory to Statehood that bootlegging assumed the daring proportions of a big business. Maine, which had had technical prohibition for almost half a century, never experienced extensive bootlegging, for the reason that liquor was continually sold, practically openly, in Maine, the large liquor question at State elections being whether the front door of the saloon was to be allowed to swing inward or whether the customer was to be compelled to enter by the back way. In Kansas, which was early to adopt prohibition, no serious or determined effort was made to stop bootlegging, which was winked at in practically all sections of the State. Kansas, apparently, was content to close the saloon, and made very little effort to enforce an absolute bone-dryness, although it is true that illicit whisky selling charges often served to give the Sheriff a club to force the migration of undesirables. Bootlegging in Kansas was always looked upon as a home industry, which was to be protected from foreign invasion.

With the settlement of Oklahoma, however, and the determination of the Federal Government to enforce the prohibition string which was attached to the former Indian country when it was granted self-government, bootlegging became a keen contest between shrewd, daring men of great natural ability and courage, on the one hand, and the entire organized force of the law on the other. Profits of the trade were enormous. Whisky was cheap in those days, day before the Government had endeavored to tax the stuff all the traffic would bear. Oklahoma was filled with a prosperous people, all of whom were but recently from wet States and many of whom were accustomed to their daily glass. The bootlegger who could evade the deputy marshals and the sheriffs was assured a magnificent return on his money, and many were the daring adventurers who engaged in the outlawed trade.

Government officials were determined to stop the traffic, and in Oklahoma it was war, real war, to the finish. For more than two years the trail of the illicit whisky dealers in Oklahoma ran red with blood, and the penitentiaries were filled with those who were compelled to surrender at the point of a business-looking six-shooter. It would be false to say that bootlegging no longer exists in Oklahoma, because the man who knows how can get a drink down in the oil country even now, but it is the truth that the big gangs, the outfits who had thousands upon thousands of dollars invested in the contraband traffic, have been broken up, and that the business, as it exists today, is conducted on a "piker" basis, and by men who live in constant fear of the law.

Family Affair.

The Oklahoma bootleggers' war developed one of the most remarkably daring families in America to engage frankly in big business in defiance of the law. This was the Billingslys—four boys who started in as cowboy bootleggers and by a strict attention to business and ability to dodge the deputy marshals amassed a fortune before changing public opinion in Oklahoma made the bootleggers' trail too warm for them to follow. Had the Billingslys taken their wealth, purchased a fat Oklahoma farm and settled down they would have merely followed the example of many another successful bootlegger in the Southwest, but the virus of big business and easy money had gotten into the blood of the Billingslys, and they elected to follow in the immediate wake of the prohibition wave which began to sweep the country and to take full advantage of the disorganized state of public opinion which always follows the first attempts to enforce prohibition.

Paying their fines in Oklahoma, they went into Seattle, just about the time Seattle was due to go on to the water wagon. With a capital which was estimated at well beyond half a million dollars the Billingslys bought a chain of [illegible] drug stores in the Northwestern metropolis, and during a period of more than a year they controlled an enormous whisky trade. Logan Billingsly, leader of the clan, drove other and smaller bootleggers out of the country, while his chain of drug stores sold great quantities of hard liquor with almost the same open freedom as had prevailed under the license system. So notorious did the operations of the Billingslys become that the police finally invaded the drug stores and, rolling whisky barrels into the street, burst open the heads of the casks and allowed the liquor, thousands of gallons of it, to run down the gutter. A few weeks later Logan Billingsly, pocketing his losses along with his gains, which were estimated at $1,000,000, walked away from a $10,000 cash bail bond, only to be heard of two years later, when it was found that he and his brothers were doing a thriving business in Detroit, a few months after the State of Michigan had voted out the demon Rum. In Detroit, it was learned, the Billingslys had repeated their Seattle experience, using a chain of soft drink parlors as a blind to their gigantic bootlegging operations.

Long Distance Operations.

New problems must be met by the bootleggers who operate under the national prohibition law. When a Western State went dry there was usually a wet base of supply near by. When Oregon, Washington, and Idaho banished liquor, for instance, bootleggers loaded up in California and ran the guard at small railway stations or at ocean piers. Many of the employes of coastwise steamships, stewards, firemen, and deckhands engaged in bootlegging on a small scale, bringing in a suitcase full of pint flasks for which they found a ready sale. Train crews likewise engaged in the business. In one case it was found that the liquor was handled by and the profits divided between no less than five different crews along one railroad line.

The more pretentious bootleggers, however, did not resort to these methods of keeping stocked up. For them the freight trains continued to run. Before Alaska went dry, for instance, a favorite method was to have a wholesale whisky house, say in Montana, make a big shipment to a fictitious address in Alaska, and then the bootleggers would divert the shipment in Seattle. Another bootlegger devised the scheme of shipping the stuff in cans labeled "Automobile Oil." The cans were filled in Chicago, a whole carload of them, and shipped openly to a garage which the bootlegger had opened in Seattle. These gallon cans were stacked in the garage and sold almost under the eyes of the police, who were finally tipped off as to the contents of the cans of supposed motor oil.

The place was raided and the hundreds of cans of whisky were stored in a warehouse for evidence for use in the case against the garage man. Early one morning, while the case was still on the docket, and after the night watchman had gone home, a truck drove up to the warehouse and two men pried the door open, calmly loaded the cans of contraband whisky and drove off. Although the police of three Northwestern States spent anxious months on the job they never found the whisky or the thieves and the case against the garage man never came to trial. It was rumored that maple syrup labels had been placed on the cans and that they were being disposed of quite rapidly at a suburban grocery store, although this rumor was not verified. Another pretentious dealer bought a lot of cheap tableware in Cincinnati, packed as many bottles of whisky as could be camouflaged in the barrels of cups and saucers, and shipped the carload to a North Dakota town, where he had no difficulty in disposing of the stuff. His scheme was discovered only after he was arrested as a result of a shooting scrape and there was found on his person a letter to his partner explaining how successful the plan had worked and asking for advice as to the disposal of the cheap chinaware.

Hidden Bases of Supplies.

But with the enforcement of national prohibition the bootlegger will have no adjoining State from which to replenish his supplies, and his methods will, of course, change. It is reasonable to suppose that, for the present at least, the bootlegger will depend upon "caches" laid away before the 1st of July, or which may be laid away in the brief wet period which some hope for between now and the 16th of January. It is not at all improbable that, unless some provision is made for its exportation, much of the 50,000,000 gallons of whisky now in Government warehouses will find its way into the hands of bootleggers before the middle of next January and that this will be stored in anticipation of future demands and enormously higher prices.

There is probably a right brisk demand just now for little farms with big cellars reasonably close to the big cities, and no doubt many bargains of that sort have already been picked up. During the next two years, while the big fellows in the bootlegging game are still operating and before the enforcement machinery gets enough support from public opinion to make itself effective, these little farms may be much visited by swift automobiles which travel mostly at night, and which are able to operate an efficient delivery service between the bootlegger and his customer.

Bootleggers' customers are divided, it should be known, into two classes. There is the respectable class, which buys a bottle for its own use and is often represented by the man who keeps the bottle in his office, the highest type of customer for the bootlegger. To such a customer the bootlegger makes regular deliveries, and a perfect understanding exists. No time is wasted on either side, nor are incriminating remarks made. If no one is present, the innocent looking package is deposited in the office and the bootlegger goes off with his money in his pocket, ofttimes without more than a word of greeting having been passed. If a stranger is present, a reference to a commonplace article previously ordered will serve to camouflage the transaction.

The Little Bootleggers.

The other class of customers with which the big bootlegger has to deal is the little bootlegger, the fellow who retails the stuff at some established place of business—a lodging house, a restaurant, a soda water fountain, a cigar store, or any place the ostensible purpose of which will justify the comings and goings of a considerable number of people. It is this type of man that the careful bootlegger dreads, although he often finds it necessary to sell to him. The big bootlegger knows that sooner or later the man who sells it by the drink is bound to get caught, and often carries the one higher up off to jail with him.

Out in Seattle a bootlegger who was well known to the underworld told the story on himself of how he took a suitcase full of bottled goods into a boarding house which he had been regularly supplying, left the suitcase in the parlor and went back into the kitchen to see the landlady and get his pay. When he opened the kitchen door and saw a trio of detectives looking through the icebox and the coalbin, he merely turned around, went to the parlor, picked up his suitcase, carried it to his "flivver" outside and drove away, looking over his shoulder from time to time to see if the detectives had awakened to the fact that he wasn't one of the regular boarders at the suspected house.

It is a disputed point as to whether there is honor among thieves, but there is no such dispute raging about the presence of honor among bootleggers. It simply does not exist. The bootlegger is a creature beyond the law. More than that, he is case-hardened by the knowledge that ordinarily the only time the law catches up with him is when an ingratiating customer turns out to be a detective in disguise. So it is not surprising that he has lost a lot of faith in human nature, and operates strictly upon the theory of every man for himself and the devil take the hindmost. Any detective who has worked on the whisky trail will take a solemn oath that while the bootlegger may have brains and courage he is as devoid of honor as an egg is of hair.

A favorite device of the bootlegger is to get the customer's money and hand him a bottle of something which looks like whisky, but isn't. Many is the man who has paid out good hard cash for a bottle of cold tea—and cold tea in its coldest and most literal sense. Others have purchased bottles on which a revenue stamp over the cork certifies that the contents is ten-year-old stuff only to find later that a hole had been drilled in the bottom of the bottle and a crude imitation of whisky had been substituted for the boaded goods, or that, at the least, the old whisky had been diluted to about one-half its normal strength. These are but a few of the tricks which have been played upon thirsty men by bootleggers, who know that, except for the use of his fist or his gun, the customer has no redress. Usually he is the type of man who cannot afford to let even his acquaintances know that he has been bilked, for he would never hear the last of it.

A case came to light recently in a dry State in which a bootlegger told a regular customer that he had five gallons of real good stuff in a coal-oil can. He took the customer to the place where the can had been hidden, and tipping up the can poured him a glass of most excellent whisky. The customer bought the can, paid for it in cash on the spot, loaded it in his car, and took it home. When he got it into the cellar he thought he would take a little nip before dinner, and found that the can contained only water! The pouring out of the glass of whisky had been merely a sleight-of-hand trick which had contributed to the customer's knowledge of the ways that are peculiar to bootleggers.

Professional bootleggers will not hesitate to "job" a business rival, and apparently enjoy much satisfaction in watching the police confiscate and destroy his stock of goods. In fact, detectives have said that more than half of their successful cases against big operators in the illicit whisky game have had their inception in the jealousy existing between rival bootleggers, both of whom would give the police a tip which would lead to a good raid.

Like any other illicit business, bootlegging cannot long exist without police connivance, and blacker even than the bloody fights in which bootleggers have figured and more despicable than the lack of business honesty which they display is the graft which spreads its slimy fingers over the activities of those who minister to irreconcilable thirsts after the lid is officially clamped down. When a man is thirsty he will pay a high price, and for the privilege of charging this high price the bootlegger is more than willing to "make it right" with the policeman on the beat, the captain of the precinct, or even with the "higher up." Lucky for New York City and unique in the history of American municipalities if the transition from wet to dry is made without the shattering of reputations now regarded as spotlessly clean.

NOVEL CASES IN THE COURTS

The opinion of the Supreme Court of Mississippi in a suit in which a sixty-year-old defendant was directed to pay damages for breach of promise of marriage says:

"It would, perhaps, be useless to offer suggestion or counsel to a man of the age of appellant, or to lay down any proposition that would carry caution to the mind of people of his age and class, especially when it comes from his junior in years, if not in wisdom. Yet it might be proper to remind others of his type that he who would trip the light fantastic toe with the Terpsichorean maid must contribute coin to the man who extracts mystic music from the violin strings, or, in other words, that pleasure must be paid for with the coin of the realm.

"Beware of the grass widow when her eyes beam love. She hypnotizes the reason, and the soul escapes the prison bars of discretion and 'you float airily on golden clouds to rosy lands of pleasure and joy.' Temporary bliss reigns supreme in the palace of love; but in the end it creates mournful memories, heartache, remorse of conscience, and a burning desire to 'blot out the past.'"

An excellent opinion on the degree or extent of mental capacity that is necessary to render a testator competent to make a will has been handed down by the Supreme Court of Oregon in Sturtevants' Estate, which contains the following:

"The result of the best-considered cases on the subject seems to put the quantum of understanding requisite to the valid execution of a will upon the basis of knowing and comprehending the transaction, or, in popular phrase, that the testator should, at the time of executing the will, know and understand what he was about. It is sufficient if the testator knew what he was doing and to whom he was giving his property, and it is conceded in most of the cases that a man may be capable of making a will and yet incapable of making a contract or managing his estate."

In Routt v. Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, 165 Northwestern Reporter, 141, the Supreme Court of Nebraska held that where a member of the defendant brotherhood became color blind to such extent as to be no longer able to continue in train service, and was discharged on account of such defect, it constituted permanent loss of sight of both eyes, within the meaning of a benefit contract. Judges Letton, Cornish, and Rose dissented therefrom.

In Kane v. Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, 168 Northwestern Reporter, 598, the same question comes before the court again, where it overrules its former holding. The opinion refers to a decision of a somewhat similar nature, entitled Holcomb v. Grand Lodge B. R. T., 171 Kentucky, 843, 188 Southwestern, 885, L. R. A. 1917B, 107, and to a decision of the Court of Appeals of Ohio in support of its new holding that plaintiff's sight cannot be considered as totally lost when he is still able to use his eyes for other purposes, though so affected as to debar him from the particular occupation of railroading. Rehearing is granted in the Routt case, and the former judgment reversed by memorandum opinion immediately following the Kane case.

The Supreme Court of Missouri is not impressed with laws which give unusual powers to the police, as is shown by its opinion in City of St. Louis v. Allen. The defendant, a chauffeur who one day took the wife of his employer to the city in an automobile, was prosecuted for violation of an ordinance which recited that "drivers must at all times comply with any direction by the voice or hand of any member of the police force as to stopping, starting or departing from any place." He was arrested for standing in front of an office building where a sign read, "Do not stand between these posts." When ordered by a policeman to move on he refused and stated that he would wait until his employer's wife returned. The conviction was reversed by the Supreme Court, which indicates in its opinion that in this case the city authorities may have been morally right and the defendant in the wrong, but says: "The ordinance here involved puts the citizen in the arbitrary power of the officer, regardless of the circumstances of the case. Its invalidity is so glaring that the respondent has not cited any authority to uphold it. In Bessonies v. City of Indianapolis, 71 Ind. 189, and in City of Elkhart v. Murray, 165 Ind. 304, 75 N. E. 593, 1 L. R. A. (N. S.) 940, 112 Am. St. Rep. 228 6 Ann. Cas. 748, it was held that such ordinances are violative of the constitutional provision which guarantees the equal protection of the laws. It was there said that what the Legislature cannot do it cannot authorise a municipal corporation to do. In our opinion the ordinance in question is subject to the objection that it may deprive persons of the equal protection of the laws, and that, though the city may have a most meritorious case, it cannot be based on that invalid ordinance."

A committee of twelve hop pickers, representing some 2,500 men, women, and children of different nationalities, presented written demands to their employers for a higher rate for their work and for improvements in the sanitary conditions of the premises and in the conditions under which they were living and working. The general manager of the business, in the presence of the committee, discharged the spokesman, ordered him off the premises, and struck him across the face with a pair of gloves in such a way that the committee understood the act was intended as an affront to themselves and their spokesman. A meeting of employes was held on the premises, where it was resolved to insist on the demands, and open expressions and demonstrations of opposition and hostility against the employers were made. One Manwell was employed to accompany the general manager and the Sheriff to the meeting, and, while engaged in such service, was shot and instantly killed by one of the employes. An action by his surviving wife and children for $150,000 for such death was brought against his employers for negligence in employing him for such dangerous service. A judgment for defendants, on demurrer to the complaint was affirmed by the Supreme court of California in Manwell v. Durst Bros. 174 Pacific Reporter, 881, in an opinion by Chief Justice Angellotti, who held that no liability attached where there was no showing of responsibility for existence of a mob, and no omission to disclose to decedent the actual conditions.

That a railroad detective, when entering his employment, was not informed that former employes had been shot by third parties, did not prevent the assumption of risk of such injury on the ground that it was not obvious.—Yazoo & M. V. R. Co. v. Hulium, Miss., 80 So. 645.

The facts in the case of Kuns v. Allen et al., 172 Pacific Reporter, 532, were that, while plaintiff was in the dry goods store of defendants for the purpose of making purchases, the defendant, without her knowledge, caused moving picture films to be taken of her, and afterward used them to advertise their business by public exhibition in a moving picture theatre in the neighborhood where she lived. The petition alleged that she thereby became the common talk of the people in the community, it being understood and believed among the people generally that she had for hire permitted her picture to be taken and used as a public advertisement. The Supreme Court of Kansas held that this constituted a violation of plaintiff's right of privacy, and entitled her to recover without proof of special damage.

A condition in a will providing that a bequest to the testator's widow be equally divided among testator's children in the event that the widow should marry during the minority of either of the children is not void as a restraint upon marriage.—Bryan vs. Harper, N. C., 98 S. E. 822.

If a party by contract creates an absolute or unconditional obligation, the performance of which rests on himself, he is bound to make it good or to answer in damages, notwithstanding any act of God or inevitable accident, because he might have provided for such contingencies by his contract.—Prather v. Latshaw, Ind., [illegible] N. E. 781.

Encyclopedic History of The War of The Nations

In 20 Volumes

[19 NOW READY FOR DELIVERY]

The New York Times War Volumes present the history of the war in a new form. It was written as the war progressed and the chief episodes are told by eyewitnesses. All the essentially important documents, records, reports, &c., were compiled from the very outset and follow the mighty conflict month by month.

The history combines narration of facts with the literature of the period, all closely interwoven with the official documents, utterances, and reports.

The Volumes embody the characteristics of an encyclopedia, Narrative History, Literary History, and Documentary History.

Nineteen of the Volumes are now ready for delivery, bringing the history up to April, 1919. Volume 20 will speedily follow. Volume 20 will contain a cumulative index, also the German Peace Treaty in full.

Each volume has also a separate index with cross references.

Each volume has an introduction written by a competent historian covering a three months' period of the war. Volume 1 by Dr. Albert Bushnell Hart of Harvard, Volume 2 by Dr. Paul van Dyke of Princeton, Volume 3 by Dr. Seymour of Yale, Volume 4 by Dr. Lingelbach of the University of Pennsylvania.

International cartoons form a feature of each volume. Each book has 60 pages representing the best cartoons produced in the various countries during the different periods of the war, 1200 pages in all.

In the 20-volume set there are altogether 12,000 pages.

It is an encyclopedic history of the greatest of wars.

A distinguishing characteristic of the work is its impartiality. There is no comment, no bias. The documents of enemy countries are published with as much freedom as those of our allies, wherever procurable.

There are three bindings—leather, ¾ leather, cloth. They are sold for cash with discount, or on the installment plan by easy monthly payments.

MYTH OF LAW-ABIDING GERMAN AND HIS CRIME RECORD

Comparative Statistics of Offenses Against Life, the Person, and Property Show That Even Before the War He Was Far Down in the Scale of Conformity to Rules of Decent Civilized Conduct

By the REV. ACTON GRISCOM, M. A.

Copyright, 1919, by Acton Griscom.

THE average American citizen has always thought of Germany as a disciplined, well-ordered country, and of her people as well-trained, law-abiding, and as given to the domestic virtues. She had unscrupulous, ambitious, militaristic leaders; but the average countryman, or man in the street, was peace-loving, home-loving and respectable.

So the American thought, and he liked the Germans. And though the war revealed many things, now that the war is over, and the militaristic leaders are dethroned, he feels that the simple-hearted folk of Germany will have a chance, and will come into their own. He feels that being human, they have suffered in this war, led on by their militarism and their unscrupulous Prussian leaders; but that now they must in all fairness be given opportunity; and he wants magnanimously as victor to forgive the past, and to help build up the future.

In view of the fact that "peace" with Germany is at least signed, if nothing more, and that trade relations and the ordinary mutual interchanges are already being re-established on a friendly basis, might it not be well to pause and consider what foundation there is in fact for these popular opinions, and what is the actual nature of the people with whom we are about to resume friendship? For whatever else may be said, it was these same friends whom the American liked, who brought on, and fought, and almost won the war.

German atrocities in the several campaigns of the war have been well established; German dishonor is a byword; but popular memory is short, and such extremes are set down to the special conditions of wartime, or the blame is laid on that rather nebulously conceived "military caste," which, in the popular mind, is now shut up like the Kaiser, or defeated and impotent. Germany is free, it has new leaders, a democratic, representative form of government, and the German people, no longer militaristic, are human, peace-loving, industrious, and virtuous.

Unwarranted Assumptions.

But even assuming that the present Government of Germany is democratic, which it is not; assuming also that a democratic form of Government per se tends to make people moral, of which there is no evidence whatsoever—the fact remains that the most ardent pro-German has not claimed the war has caused a change of heart or a change of character in his people. They are what they were.

What they got from the war was an armistice before they were beaten. Germany's general staff was beaten, her theory of war was beaten, but her armies and people have suffered the mildest defeat and, smallest occupation of territory known in all history after a great war. Only Southern Germany has tasted defeat directly, and that in the form of a well-disciplined, considerate, and courteous army of occupation. The war was heartily supported and very popular until victory became impossible, and it expressed the desires and manifested the qualities of a majority of the people themselves.

The nature of these qualities, unchanged as they are, is something about which the American citizen has learned nothing, though the facts are that these German people of his imagination had a worse criminal record immediately preceding the war than almost any people known. He does not realize that the outwardly clean streets of German cities but whited a rottenness within far exceeding the worst of Paris, London, or New York. He has heard of German immorality vaguely, perhaps—he does not know that common assaults and malicious woundings were ten times more frequent in Germany than in the United States. He has not really taken in the fact that "Kultur" was a myth, and that the German people and the German civilization were notably inferior.

Business men do not realize that the actual number of convictions for fraud in Germany, resulting in imprisonment, average 4 to each 1 in the United States. The actual figures for convictions for fraud in the German Empire for the five years from 1904 to 1908—well before the war—were 154,626. This gives an annual average of 30,925, which means that for every 100,000 of population in Germany, fifty-one persons are imprisoned for fraud annually. These figures come from German official sources, the "Statistick Des Deutschen Reichs," Band 223, published by the Imperial Government. They may be found in Part II.—"Kriminal-statistick für das Jahr 1908," p. 10. Embezzlement in Germany for the same five years totaled 124,317, with an annual average of 24,863, which means that forty-one men were imprisoned for that offense each year per 100,000 population. If this annual average is again compared with the convictions as given by the United States Census Bureau for 1910, "Prisoners and Juvenile Delinquents," pp. 28-29, the proportion is 4 to 1.

Especially it would be wise to watch the rising generation. If the reader will look at Table V, Juvenile Statistics, the last column, he will see: "Larceny"—stealing, in Germany is 127 to 1 in the United States; "Embezzlement," 250 to 1; "Fraud," 243 to 1; "Counterfeiting," 12 to 1; and so on.

These figures are without exception from German official sources. They are not from hand books, or ready reference manuals. They are from statistics of the Imperial German Government, and have been available in our libraries since they were published in 1910. They speak for more than the ill effects of Prussian militarism. They reveal a German character, a national psychology.

Other things in these tables reveal other things in the boasted German Wesen—such as wholesale atrocities, systematically conducted. Take the figures for assaults in Tables II. and IV. Note that the Bavarians, who in America are often extolled as superior in civilization to the Prussians, and as peaceable, home-loving people, are so far inferior to our New England population as one is to ten. There were 21,623 convictions for assault in Bavaria in 1911. In 1910, in the United States, according to the same United States Census authority, there were 2,132, (Page 360.) That is ten to one. Notice the crimes against chastity—over ten to one, and the frauds, twenty-nine to one. The Bavarian figures are from the official "Statistick für das Königreich Bayern," 1913, Page 381.

Business men do not realize that the actual number of convictions for fraud differences in the use of terms, are generally unreliable. Statistics for certain crimes, such as those already referred to, can be compared with accuracy. But in Tables IV. and V., under the general caption "Murder," it must be understood that the Germans list seven kinds of "death-resulting crimes," with only 15 per cent. entitled "murder" and "homicide." Comparisons under these two headings with similar headings in the United States statistics will produce an entirely false impression. It becomes impossible, therefore, to work out any proportions which represent facts, and the figures in Table V. for juvenile delinquents are only absolute as far as the United States statistics are concerned. The proportions are given because the German juvenile percentage of even 15 per cent. of all murder is so astounding as compared with the 100 per cent. of the United States, that the figures are worth considering. In this connection, it might be well to quote from Dr. Gustav Aschaffenburg, Professor of Psychiatry in the Cologne Academy of Medicine. His book has been translated under the title "Crime and Its Repression," and is widely known to all criminologists in this country.

On pp. 142-3 he says: "It is more surprising, then, to find that in certain crimes the number of convicted children still of school age exceeds that of adults." His appended table is instructive. On page 143: "The number of convicted children under 14 nearly reaches a third of the adults' share." Finally, on page 218, he summarizes to the effect that child crimes "show a steady increase since 1882, except in simple theft. The offenses enumerated have not been subject to any change in legislative enactment during the years reported. Hence the conclusion is unavoidable that brutality, recklessness, and licentiousness are spreading more and more in the growing generation." There were 50,219 juveniles criminally convicted in 1903.

Reasons are easy to suggest, but hard to prove. One fact, however, stands out. Table III. compares Berlin with New York (Reports, Board of Health, 1912) and London, (London Statistics, London County Council, 1912-13, P. 312, and 1913-14,) and also the Kingdoms of Saxony and Bavaria—both superior parts of Germany—and Alsace-Lorraine, supposed by Germans to be heart and soul German. In Berlin, nearly one child in every four is illegitimately born. The Government, true to its policy of providing "cannon fodder," permits this, and makes legitimization comparatively easy. But no wonder there are many juvenile criminals. No wonder also that child suicides, always peculiarly tragic and harrowing, are 5 to 1 in Berlin over New York, and in the rural and urban kingdom of enlightened Saxony are 10 to 1. Alsace-Lorraine, it will be noticed, undercuts the average German figures by about half—which is true of practically all crimes also.

Reasons are easy to suggest, but hard to prove. One fact, however, stands out. Immorality in Germany is literally appalling. These figures of illigitimacy speak for themselves. But the figures for the worst offenses against chastity prove what the character of too many Germans is. Such crimes in this country are punishable by death or imprisonment for life according to sections 278-9 of the Federate Penal Code of 1910 (as quoted and annotated by Tucker and Blood, P. 283) and in New York State by not less than 10 or 20 years, depending on the nature of the crime. In England the minimum penalty is 3 years, and the maximum, life imprisonment. (Halsbury "Laws of England," Vol. IX., Pt. XII., Sec. 2, P. 611 to 615.) The German Imperial Code—"Strafgesetsbuch" of the "Deutscher Reichsgesetse," (text and comments by Dr. Hans Rudorff, Berlin, 1910,) which gives 10 years for commerce with the enemy as a minimum, and the death penalty for even attempting to take the life of the Kaiser or Federal Prince, gives a maximum penalty of one year for an assault against a girl under 16 years of age. The exact words of the concluding clause are: "Prosecution is only on complaint of a parent or guardian." This last qualification in actual practice would rule probably 50 per cent. of the cases out of court.

No wonder that German armies behaved as they did in Belgium, Northern France, and Serbia. Yes, and Saxon and Bavarian armies—thousands of Saxon and Bavarian men. The author of the United States Census volume already quoted says of such a crime that it is "hardly less heinous than murder, and in some States is penalized by death, and in States where that is not the case, by imprisonment for life or for a long term of years." The United States figures include "also those cases where the crime was not actually committed but only attempted or intended."

*The Germans give seven headings under "Crimes Against Life," all of which are included under the two headings of murder or homicide in the English and United States statistics. Hence an exact comparison by title only is entirely misleading. Notice that 85 per cent. of the murders in Germany are not called either murder or homicide, but "death by exposure," "child murder," (not an abortion;) "death on request," (i. e., when one man induces his companion to kill him,) and "death by criminal neglect."

1. The Germans give seven headings under "Crimes Against Life," all of which are included under homicide in the United States statistics, such as "Criminal Neglect," "Child Murder," &c. As the actual figures under Mord and Totschlag are so far incomplete any calculation of proportions would be practically valueless if the disproportions were not, even with these reservations, so marked. Notice the discrepancy between the total of murder plus homicide in Germany—290—and the total of all death-resulting crimes—1,997, or 85 per cent.

2. The United States figures cover all assaults; the Germans give for juvenile only two out of six subheads; so the proportion favors the United States. Cf. with Table IV. for the total of assaults.

Such cases do not appear in the German figures, so the disproportion is even greater than the 6 to 1 against Germany given in Table IV. In the United States, German-born offenders were just double the number of English, (table, p. 130,) while 10½ and 13 per cent. of common assaults committed by whites were by Irish and Italian born, respectively, while the Germans come fourth with 8.6 per cent., the Poles being third, with 9.7 per cent. Negroes committed 9,486 out of 22,670 assaults in all, or 41 per cent., 392 cases of assaults against chastity, or 27 per cent. of the total; and 1,527, or 53 per cent. of all homicides. (p. 92).

England, therefore, offers a better illustration for comparison than does our own country, and the proportions listed in the various tables will prove that the English stock has more of what the American calls civilization than the German.

Summarizing, the total average of the crimes enumerated gives a proportion of 7 to 1 more crimes in Germany than in the United States, and more than 30 to 1 over England. In the United States 2.3 per cent. of those convicted were under 15 years old; in Germany, 7.5 per cent. were under 15 years old. Crimes involving deceit, i. e., fraud and embezzlement, average 4 to 1.

Does the American citizen wish to be friends with such people?

RUMANIA AS A NATION OF DESTINY

Belligerent, in Contempt of Allies' Supreme Council, in the Light of Her History and Her Aspirations

RUMANIA just now occupies a proud eminence as the belligerent in the exact centre of the European stage. With her army in possession of the Hungarian capital, carrying things off with a high hand in apparent defiance of the Supreme Council of the Allies and the plans of high contracting parties in Paris for the rearrangement of the pieces of the broken Austro-Hungarian Monarchy, and especially for the political rehabilitation of Hungary, the little kingdom whose belated entry into the great war was followed by such a swift catastrophe has assumed for the moment at least a rôle quite out of proportion to public expectation.

The Rumanians themselves, however, have always been disposed to regard themselves as men of destiny and to boast of the history of the race and its origin in the assimilation of the Roman colonists of Trajan with the original warlike Dacian tribes who had earlier defeated ignominiously the legions of Domitian and set up a powerful kingdom of their own. Trajan conquered that kingdom in 106 A. D., and to hold it secure settled it with colonists of Spanish, Gaulish, and Latin extraction with some Thracians. Thanks to the Roman gift of assimilating newly conquered races and to their admirably effective system of colonization, in less than a century the province was practically Latinized, and built up with cities, roads, and fortresses after the Roman manner. It was Marcus Aurelius who divided it into three district for administrative purposes and the whole country (it is proudly related) came to be known as Dacia Felix—Dacia the Blest.

Then followed the barbarian invasions which destroyed the Roman Empire, and the coming of the Magyars, before whom the Rumanians were driven into the mountains and forests and eventually conquered, though Rumania communities persisted, out of which grew in time the principalities of Walachia and Moldavia, whose Princes reconquered the right bank of the Danube and kept up a gallant struggle with the Turks so that even when, after the battle of Mohacz in 1526 Hungary became a Turkish province, the Rumanian municipalities possessed at least an autonomous life. Prince Michael V. of Walachia, surnamed the Brave, (1593-1601,) having destroyed several Ottoman armies, profited by the confusion in Constantinople caused by his victories to recapture the Dobruaja and Moldavia and unite Transylvania with his dominions. His career was cut short by assassination, procured, the Rumanians say, by the Austrian General Basta, but the dream of a united Rumania which he nearly realized, a Rumania embracing approximately the region of the old Roman Province of Dacia Felix, is the dream which the Rumanians of today think they see realized.

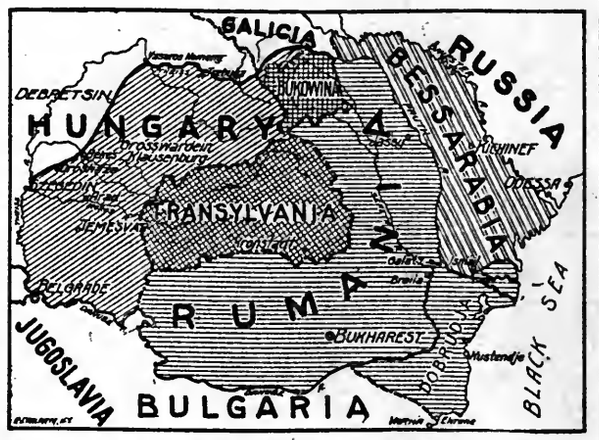
It was these aspirations which were expressed in the territorial claims of the new Rumania.

These claims, as presented to the Peace Conference in Paris, are set forth in documents in which the Rumanian Government assumes to speak not only for the present Rumanian Kingdom—or that kingdom as it was in 1914—but for the Rumanian inhabitants of various districts outside the boundaries of the kingdom. The territory claimed as Rumanian consists of Rumania, Bessarabia, Bukovina, Transylvania, and the Banat of Temeshvar, the last three having been before the breakup included in the Austro-Hungarian Monarchy as parts or dependencies of Hungary.

The formal document points out that the people of Bessarabia proclaimed their autonomy in 1918 and subsequently their union with Rumania, that Bukovina was taken away from Moldavia by the Austrians 150 years ago, and that Bukovina, Transylvania, and the Banat of Temeshvar had always before the war claimed their independence of Austria-Hungary, and since the power of Austria was broken had indicated their desire to be reunited with the Rumanians of Rumania proper and of Bessarabia.

For all these provinces and the districts of the Maramouresh and the Crishana frontiers are demanded which will "assure the freedom of their existence, administrative, political, and economical, and their development in accordance with their national consciousness." Transylvania, with certain border Hungarian countries also claimed, includes about 85,000 square kilometers, the Banat of Temeshvar includes 28,000 square kilometers, and Bukovina 10,000 square kilometers.

It is urged that "The historic development of the Rumanian people north of the Danube has taken place in the regions bounded by the Danube itself, the Black Sea, the Dniester, the Galician Carpathians, and the Theiss. For centuries the Rumanian race has had its seat in the mountains which surround the plateau of Transylvania and from which descend toward the plains of Moldavia, of Bessarabia, of Wallachia and Hungary the great rivers which form the natural highways of all these regions." The Rumanian race, it is added, has spread far beyond these limits, particularly toward the east and south, but the Rumanian Government refrains from pressing claims to certain districts on the Serbian side of the Danube in spite of the fact that these districts have many Rumanians settled in them.



Map Showing the Proposed Boundaries of a Greater Rumania, Including Also Bessarabia Transylvania, Bukowina and the Banat of Temeshvar.

Transylvania, it is pointed out, has a Rumanian population distributed over its entire extent. Figures are quoted to show that there are 2,500,000 Rumanians, or 54 per cent., against something over 1,000,000 Magyars, constituting about 23 per cent. of a population which includes, besides considerable numbers of other races, 276,000 Germans, 188,000 Jews, and 73,000 Slavs. Rectification of the frontiers, it is claimed, would increase the Rumanian preponderance to something like 62 per cent. Moreover, the Magyars are to a certain extent a floating population of officials, and are found mostly in the cities, while the Rumanians constitute 69 per cent. of the rural population.

As to the Banat of Temeshvar, it is pointed out that it is a territory in which the Rumanians have lived for centuries and where they count 600,000 against 400,000 Germans, (colonists come to the country since the eighteenth century,) and about 300,000 Serbs whose dates of immigration range from the fifteenth to the eighteenth century. The attempt has been made to distinguish between parts of the Banat where the Rumanian race has an absolute majority and other parts where it has only a relative majority, or constitutes merely an important minority. It has been suggested that a line be drawn across the plains of the Banat which will serve as a boundary between the Rumanians on the east, who will be under Rumanian rule, and the non-Rumanians on the west, who will become Serbian subjects. The claim of the Rumanians is that this is impracticable. They urge that the Banat is not merely a geographical expression, but a truly political province, forming an indivisible whole today, as a matter of historic fact. To quote: "The rivers which bound the Banat on three sides, the Muresh, the Theiss, and the Danube, form a natural frontier and inclose a region of plains to the west and a region of mountains to the east, closely bound together. It is the plain of the Banat which supplies its inhabitants with grain, and it is in the plain that the flocks of the mountain country find Winter pasturage. It is the mountaineers who furnish to the inhabitants of the plain their forest wealth and their minerals."

If in certain districts the Serbs are in the majority, important groups of Rumanians are scattered among them. Moreover, the mingling of races in the west of the Banat is such that in order to detach from Rumania the 200,000 Serbs who are found there, it would be necessary to annex to Serbia twice as many of non-Serbs—Germans, Magyars, and Rumanians. There, according to the Rumanians, would be the beginning of another irredentism.

Besides the Danube furnishes a natural frontier between Serbia and Rumania—one which has proved its practical value in the past history of the two kingdoms. The gist of the argument then is that inasmuch as the Rumanians are willing to leave to Serbia the Rumanians on the Serbian side of the Danube, it is only fair to leave the Serbs on the other side to Rumania. Maps are provided to show that in the part of Serbia between the Danube and the Morava the Rumanian population is preponderant.

The frontiers claimed are defined as follows: The Dniester from its mouth to the boundary of Galicia and Bukovina; thence a line reaching the Pruth River at its confluence with the Ceremush, and following from there the boundary between Galicia and Hungary. Then the watershed between the Theiss and the Viso to the village of Trebuza. From the confluence of these rivers, the valley of the Theiss to four kilometers below the mouth of the Somesh. The line to continue south-southwest to a point six kilometers east of Debretsin, thence to the Crish, three kilometers below the confluence of the White Crish and the Rapid Crish, thence to the Theiss at the height of Algyo to the north of Szegedin, passing to the west of Oreshaza and Bekessamsom. The lower course of the Theiss to its junction with the Danube, the course of the Danube below that confluence, then the line fixed by the treaty of Bucharest of 1913 as the frontier between Rumania and Bulgaria as far as Ekrene, north of Varna on the Black Sea. Finally, the littoral of the Black Sea from that point to the mouth of the Dniester.

PERSHING'S ELEVATOR BOY

ELEVATOR men in the course of their professional ups and downs have their great moments also. Once in a while a Personage is a passenger on the car. The most celebrated man in the world may or might ride in any elevator man's car. But never a one of them felt more important than a Corporal of the American Expeditionary Forces, who has just returned from France after six months on the firing line and seven months on the staff of The Stars and Stripes, the official newspaper of the A. E. F.

"I," said the Corporal proudly, "once had General Pershing as passenger."

"You see, sir," he explained, "the General was scheduled to pay a visit to the offices of The Stars and Stripes, on the fourth floor of 32 Rue Taitbout, in Paris. The building had two elevators—capacity three persons each—because it was a large building and contained the American Chamber of Commerce. One of these was operated by a duly authorized man, and carried the Chamber of Commerce's force up and down. The other was run by the soldiers of The Stars and Stripes, whenever they wished to go one way or the other.

"That duly authorized French operator might also have served the General, but again he might not happen to be on the job at the moment of arrival, so the officers of the A. E. F. newspaper took precautions. They detailed a line Corporal—that's me—to the car they ordinarily used informally. I first passed a rigid inspection, in which all the officers of the staff assisted, and then took my post.

"In the interval before the arrival of General Pershing I made several trial trips to the fourth floor, for the purpose of getting practice in making a clean stop, so as not to inconvenience the General to the extent of having to step up or down as he alighted. Half way down after a trial trip I'd stop the car and give myself the once-over to make sure my cap was on at the proper angle, police my pockets and blouse buttons, and make quite sure my shoes were free from dust—it could be done in Paris.

"When I reached the ground floor after the fifth trial trip I felt that I would be able to handle the situation at the crucial moment without a hitch. After two hours of frightful suspense General Pershing arrived.

"'Where are the offices of The Stars and Stripes?' snapped the General.

"'On the fourth floor, Sir,' I said, standing at rigid attention.

"'How am I to get up there?' the General said.

"'I will take you up on the elevator, Sir,' I said.

"So the General and his aid, a Colonel, boarded the car, and I followed. The gate was closed and the lever pulled back as far as it would go, putting the car in high. All the time I could feel the General's eyes going through my back, and every second my knees getting weaker.

"The fourth floor was reached after what seemed an hour, but really the trip up did not take longer than two minutes. How it happened I cannot explain, but the car made a perfect stop, even with the floor, and the General did not have to step up or step down. An experienced, duly authorized French operator could not have done any better, even though it was a French elevator.

"General Pershing and his aid entered the offices. A speech of appreciation was duly delivered, and then the party returned to the waiting elevator and the General and Colonel boarded the car. The gate was closed and the lever pushed forward and the car began to descend. The down trip was nothing to worry about, because the car stopped automatically when the main floor was reached.

"On the upward trip nobody said a word, but when about half way down on the return trip General Pershing said (to his aid, of course):

"'And they say some folks on the stage never make a success.'

"To this day I don't know whether that sentence was meant for my benefit or not. The ground floor was reached, and the General made for his auto. I gave a sigh and pulled myself together. After that they called me 'Black Jack's Elevator Boy.' The name stuck until I was discharged."

PLAYS AND PLAYERS IN THE AUGUST THEATRES

SECOND THOUGHTS ON FIRST NIGHTS

Eugene Walter's New Play---"John Ferguson"

By ALEXANDER WOOLLCOTT.

THE breathing space between seasons may fast be reaching the vanishing point, but there is still a faint line of demarkation, and when theatres that have stood dark and silent for several weeks reopen with new plays, intended if not designed to run throughout the Winter, it may be said that the new season has begun. So let us say that the theatrical season of 1919-1920 was formally opened on the evening of Aug. 5, when the audience at the Selwyn Theatre witnessed the first New York performance of "The Challenge," a new play by Eugene Walter.

It opened—but the events of Thursday night, when the actors opened fire in the war for the recognition of their union, made it seem as if it might not open very far. At this writing it stands ajar, and if this state of affairs continues—why, Othello's occupation's gone.

"The Challenge" rehearses the tragedy of a glowing young champion of the masses who, with no thought of self, dedicates all the talents with which he was born and all the profits of a costly education to the task of leading a bloodless revolution. Inevitably and unconsciously he draws into his train a hoard of malcontents, less disinterested and less honorable than himself. All the forces of indolence and envy and destruction follow at his heels—follow and, at their first disappointment, rend him and cast him out.

Instead of laboring on a drama in which all this should unfold relentless as Fate, the author of "The Challenge" has resorted lazily to a lot of transparent tricks which leave the play unconvincing. But that is not the conspicuous shortcoming of "The Challenge." Its conspicuous shortcoming is its tendency to relapse into argument instead of letting the play speak for itself. This complaint is threadbare from much repetition, but it is still legitimate. Inasmuch as there is not—and, since the days of the parables, has not been—any medium of expression which can equal a dramatic story in the persuasive and telling presentation of a social problem, it always does seem a pity when a playwright is driven by lack of invention to the device of having that problem spouted by his characters. No true lover of the theatre enjoys seeing it used as a Chautauqua platform.

There is a better, though not an easier, way. One of the finest plays America ever produced still stands as the shining example of a moral preached by drama and not by staged debate, a play which drove its point in to the hilt and never said a word about it. But very likely it is foolish to ask Eugene Walter, of all people, to go to school to the author of "The Easiest Way." He wrote that masterpiece himself.

A Welterism.

IN one scene of "The Challenge" Mr. Walter resorts to an interesting and effective device which he used once before in "The Knife"—a simple and inexpensive device to sustain the suspense of an act which, if memory serves, no one else has ever employed. A tedious textbook on playmaking would probably have a chapter about it and call the chapter "The Dramatic Surprise of Omission."

Mr. Walter lures an audience on to expect a certain thing to happen, and then, at the breathless moment when it is about to happen, it just doesn't. As in "The Knife," where the misled audience was kept on edge throughout the last act waiting for the victimized girl to recognize in the District Attorney her first betrayer, so all signs in the last act of "The Challenge" point to the immediate and violent murder of Richard Putnam by the firebrand among his followers who has been preaching murder and swearing vengeance. Finally the angry mob melts away and Putnam and the firebrand are left alone, face to face. Putnam erect, defenseless, unafraid, the firebrand approaching him wild-eyed, irresolute, his hand so thrust into his pocket that you can almost see the revolver gripped within it. Then, just when the cue seems given for him to fire, he turns on his heel and walks out. The effect on the spectator is a little akin to sinking into a chair where there isn't one. Thus cheaply does Mr. Walter buy his suspense for the last act, and, though a play made up of such negative surprises would doubtless leave an audience moody with a sense of frustration, the occasional playing of the trick is unquestionably effective. Mr. Walter uses it and it does work.

"Realistic."
